LOVE ON THE RUN

Whenever Joan Crawford and Clark Gable get together it's a cinch for a grand clinch! (Remember "Dancing Lady", "Possessed", "Forsaking All Others", "Chained"). Now you'll find Joan a dashing American heiress who leaves a nobleman at the altar and bumps into Clark who's a headline foreign news correspondent (Franchot Tone is his rival!) and their "love on the run" takes you all over Europe in a madcap, thrill-packed, rough and tumble romance.

Camille

GRETA GARBO

ROBERT TAYLOR

How fitting that one of the world's most throbbing love dramas should be portrayed by the great Garbo and the handsome young star who is today's idol of romance. Garbo as the devastatingly fatal beauty, Marguerite; Bob Taylor as Armand, the romantic Parisian youth. Lionel Barrymore and other stars in Big Cast. George Cukor, of "Romeo and Juliet" fame, directed it. It is destined to be the sensation of this year!

SCREEN and GOVERNMENT

ADVOCATES of governmental regulation of the motion picture industry can find much of special interest in observation of manifestations in certain areas overseas.

A great deal is ever being said, for instance, by our leftists critics about the achievements of the art in Russia, by the state controlled cinema, which it seems is not bound by profit motives and is, so they contend, artistically free. That makes a neat background against which to consider the tidings the other day of Russia's sending to labor camps three picture executives on the charge of buying an inadequate story, wasting money in production and search for talent. There's a free art for you.

And, again, there's another sharp cut picture of what bureaucrats can do with power in Motion Picture Herald's presentation in the issue of September 26 setting forth the rules under which motion picture theatres may operate under the Anarchist government of Spain.

Meanwhile, and by happy contrast, it is to be observed that in Great Britain the chief concern of the government about the motion picture these days appears to be expressed in support and encouragement of a substantial sort for the upbuilding of the British film industry. The impressive availability of capital for British screen development implies and is based upon approval in high places.

HERE at home, too, where most of what we hear in the public prints from Washington about the screen is in the nature of annoying agitations for legislation, there is another story of official encouragement. Through the last especially troubled years of the world market and the American industry's problems of tariffs, quotas and the like, the appropriate departments in Washington have in strong but diplomatic fashion given important service and support. It is a story that may not be told with official detail, but some part of it is known to every manager of foreign sales in New York.

In at least some offices in Washington there is a recognition of the significance of America's world wide film distribution in the broad general service of American industry. The motion picture has for three decades been doing a job for the United States, being permitted the while to tend to its own business.

ONE of the choicer and franker discussions of the state of the art in Hollywood is contributed to the current issue of Stage by Mr. Gene Lockhart, actor-from-Broadway, now working considerably in films. Mr. Lockhart seems to like his work and Hollywood. Of his contemporaries he says:

Fifty percent of the actors in Hollywood are content in the film capital. Twenty-five percent long to tread again the boards of legitimate drama—that is, providing the part is outstanding, the billing is good, and the salary approximates what they receive in pictures. Twenty percent would go back to the stage if offered a part because they are not being offered parts in Movietown. Four percent insist upon returning each year to the stage because they retain abiding respect for the theatre; they are offered leading roles, and they have a sufficiently large bankroll to withstand the expense of four weeks' rehearsal, possible failure of the show, and return fare to Hollywood. One percent would return to the stage in any part, with or without kudos in the pocket, because they love the theatre.

Mr. Lockhart thinks that all good motion picture acting is sincere and insists that no actor can fool a camera.

DIRT RECORDS

THE struggle for common decency in the amusement trades never ceases. Just now that coin operated phonograph business is having an unhappy time of it with producers and vendors of smut song records.

Leaders of the business are finding it necessary to make the same basic arguments of the validity of decency and its merit as a business policy in the service of a decently inclined public that have been made in every other amusement institution before. This problem has arisen often before in the phonograph trade, most conspicuously in 1894-5, the year before the screen was born.

A considerable proportion of the smut song records has been credited to "Hollywood stars" in their advertising. Investigation discovers the advertising to be both salacious and fraudulent.

BURLESQUE producers in New York have joined the double bill movement to the best of their ability by presenting four "stripping principals" in each cast. The prospects are excellent for official municipal attention to this development of the art at an early date.

CIVILIZING some producers is like trying to drown out a woodchuck—he always comes out another hole. Just now a celebrated picture impresario, having had his sex technique repressed, tends to amplification of his scenes of sadism, quite as immoral but in a category less under fire.

This Week

German Film Impasse

An attempt to gain the cooperation of large film distributors and representatives of exhibitors in the exclusion from America of films made in Nazi Germany, or films which are pro-Nazi in tone, is being made by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, of which Samuel Untermyer is president. A meeting of distributors and exhibitors was called at the New York offices of the League on Friday of this week. The attempt is a result of what has been labeled an effort by German producers and distributors to gain exhibition of their pictures in this country by advertising them as French product. The League and other organizations last week investigated such a picture which was billed as French product but was found to be a UFA film, made in Germany with a predominantly German cast.

Equity Suspends 24

A convincing demonstration of the strength of the Screen Actors Guild and of the movement to establish a closed shop for actors in Hollywood is seen in the suspension of 24 players by Actors Equity Association for failure to join the Guild after receiving warnings that they must join in order to retain their Equity status. The action was made possible through the affiliation of the Guild and Equity.

The organized labor situation as it affects the motion picture industry is surveyed on page 21.

Music Publishers Agree

After months of preliminaries, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, along with the British Performing Rights Society, this week reached a satisfactory agreement with Canadian exhibition interests for music fees for the year 1936 and the Canadian Performing Rights Society will continue in operation for another year. The fee charged by ASCAP is higher than that prescribed by Dominion law, but it was thought this will not affect the new pact, though it will be examined by the government.

Details of the Toronto meeting on the new agreement, and other ASCAP activities, are found in the story on page 14.

Camera Grist

The Hollywood productions-in-work level came down as fourteen pictures were taken to the cutting room and eight were placed before the cameras.

Titles and personnel are listed on page 41.

Studio Ambitions

Jorge Mendez Delfino, owner of a studio in Buenos Aires, and Amador Feliu, technical manager, have been studying conditions in Montevideo, Uruguay, with a view to erecting a motion picture studio and laboratories there. Weather conditions in Uruguay are called superior to those in Argentina, resembling the climate of Southern California, and production costs are expected to be lower than in other production centers.

This and other news from Montevideo is reported on page 72.

New Exhibitor Group

Broadway this week was awaiting momentarily the announcement of a new national exhibitor organization, which will give the industry a third group, besides the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. Harry Brandt, president of Independent Theatre Owners Association, is the prime mover behind the foundation of the new association, but all meetings are being held behind closed doors. It is said that Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy, will be the head of the third group, though Mr. Cullman has denied that he has been approached.

All available details of the new association are found in the story on page 29.

Orchestras Exempted

The United States Internal Revenue Bureau ruled this week that exhibitors do not have to pay the social security tax on payrolls of orchestras employed.

This ruling is explained on page 47.

What Maxwell Pays

John Maxwell is paying the Ostrer brothers approximately $3,000,000 (£618,125) for their 250,000 shares of "B" or non-voting stock in Metropolis and Bradford Trust Company, which controls Gaumont-British. Completion of the "second stage of the deal, acquisition of the 5,100 "A" or voting shares, is likely to wait some time, says Bruce Allan in London, because of the claim of Twentieth Century-Fox that the Ostrers may not sell their "A" shares without making it a condition that at least half the "A" shares of Twentieth Century-Fox be purchased.

Exhibitors Meeting

As the late fall and early winter season approaches, exhibitors in many territories are preparing to bring their problems of operation into the open at conventions. Indianapolis, Little Rock, Omaha, Charlotte, Oklahoma City and Miami are making ready to receive organization members. Allied of Michigan met this week.

Not a Gag

Walter O'Keefe is sponsor and Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny are advocates of a projected clearing house designed to end duplication of radio gags and the gagsters named insist the idea is not itself a gag.

Radio and Juveniles

A potential danger to box office receipts is seen by M. A. Silver, zone manager for Warner Brothers theatres, in the increasing appeal made by radio to child audiences. Mr. Silver, in a letter to his managers, urges sustained drives to retain child patronage not so much for the increased receipts involved but for preservation of the "moviegoing habits" upon which, he says, the theatres are, to a great extent dependent for their steady patronage.

Mr. Silver's letter is quoted in full on page 30.

Bombings and Arrests

Bombing of theatres in Greater New York was resumed over the weekend days when tear-gas containers were broken in eight independently operated houses at approximately the same time frightening some 12,000 persons and injuring 45, several seriously. All the houses were connected with the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of which Harry Brandt is president, and all employ members of Allied Motion Picture Operators Union. The following night, police raided the Forty-second Street headquarters of Local 306, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, taking 30 men and seven women into custody. All were released after questioning and denials of implication in the bombings.

Further details of the situation are recorded on page 44.

Donat Recovered

Robert Donat, confined for several weeks to a specially air-conditioned nursing home bedroom by illness, has recovered and reported for work in "Knight Without Armour," in which he will appear opposite Marlene Dietrich at the Denham studios. Production of scenes in which Mr. Donat does not appear has been carried on steadily during his indisposition.

Bruce Allan's report of activities in the British studio field is published in detail on page 53.

Bar, Nursery, Escalator

Bar, nursery and escalators are among the features of the newest Chicago theatre, the Essaness Walton. Thus Chicago mothers may park their babies in the nursery, their husbands in the bar, and then go in and enjoy the picture, unless they join their husbands, or baby starts trying out the moving stairway.

For other developments in the Chicago territory, see page 68.

Paramount Profit Seen

Third quarter profits will be in excess of $1,000,000 it was estimated this week with the company's report to be issued some time this month. Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive board, declined to estimate the earnings but said that they would exceed those anticipated at the close of the quarter a month ago. The chairman also said that reports that dividend action is possible were not unfounded. First preferred stock of the company touched a new high of 125¾ last week.

Mr. Griffis' remarks on the subject are quoted on page 29.

Leserman Joins Warner

Carl Leserman, formerly general sales manager for Grand National has joined Warner Brothers as assistant to Gradwell Sears. Edward J. Peskay, independent exhibitor, succeeds Mr. Leserman in the Grand National post and in his directorship of the new company. Harry Allan has been named Canadian representative, Sol Edwards, eastern manager, and James Winn, western manager, for Grand National.

The personnel changes are reported on page 47.

RCA Expands

A new plant is being constructed in Indianapolis by the RCA Photophone division to manufacture sound equipment, including public address and stage sound reinforcement apparatus. Contracts have been signed for installation of RCA Photophone sound systems in 64 Loew theatres throughout the country.

Zukor Jubilee Plans

Paramount actors and sales managers are preparing their roles for the Adolph Zukor jubilee which is to start on January 3rd. Actors have been named honorary captains for the sales districts. Mr. Zukor, in a message to the sales force in the field last week, assured them that the product from the studio would justify everything they may say about it in the campaign.

Plans for the jubilee are announced on page 22.

The Champions

The Box Office Champions of September, according to aggregate grosses, are "Swing Time," RKO-Radio; "The Great Ziegfeld," MGM; "Romeo and Juliet," MGM; "Anthony Adverse," Warner; "The Gorgeous Hussy," MGM, and "My Man Godfrey," Universal.

Scenes from each picture, together with complete credits and other pertinent data, are presented on pages 42-43.

Universal Simplifies

"In the interests of economy and efficiency" Universal Corporation has adopted a program of simplification of its corporate structure, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman, announced on Wednesday. Fifteen subsidiaries are affected immediately while a number of others will be absorbed or altered later.

As the initial step in this program Universal Productions, Inc., has been dissolved while Universal Pictures Corporation and Motion Picture Export Corporation are scheduled to be eliminated. When the changes now being made are completed, Universal Pictures Company, Inc., control of which is vested in Universal Corporation which was organized in March, 1936 to secure the holdings of Carl Laemmle and associates, will carry on all operations, production and distribution, either directly or through 100 per cent owned subsidiaries.

The pending dissolution of Universal Pictures Corporation will mark the passing of one of the oldest companies in the Universal setup. It has been engaged in the production and distribution of motion pictures since 1912.

Kent Adamant

S. R. Kent, back in New York after five weeks spent in England, told the press that Twentieth Century-Fox will not approve the proposed sale of A shares in the Bradford & Metropolis Trust, holding company for Gaumont-British, by the Ostrers to John Maxwell and associates. Neither, said Mr. Kent, will the company sell any of its own B. & M. shares, obtained under terms giving Twentieth Century-Fox right of veto over deals in A shares of the holding company conveying voting power.

Story Purchases

Sustained activity in the purchase of story material for motion picture production saw 70 manuscripts obtained by 18 producers during October, the rate maintaining that of August and September.

Stories purchased are listed on page 19.

8 For B.I.P.

A production schedule which will place a new production on the stages each week during the next two months has been embarked upon by British International Pictures and Walter Mycroft, director of production, expects to complete eight pictures before the end of December. Many American players are to be seen in the productions scheduled.

A complete presentation of the B.I.P. production schedule is provided on page 53.

This Week in Pictures

PRESS PARTY FOR FRENCH PLAYER. Executives of Warner Brothers and trade press at reception in New York for Fernand Gravet, French film star signed by Warner for Mervyn LeRoy's production, "The King and the Chorus Girl." Left to right: Gradwell L. Sears, Jack Alicoate, Maurice D. ("Red") Kann, J. L. Warner, M. Gravet, Harry M. Warner and Martin Quigley.

VACATIONING. Richard Dix (below) in New York following completion of a leading role in Columbia's "The Depths Below," co-featuring Dolores Del Rio.

ITALIAN STAR SIGNED. Isa Miranda (left), whom Paramount has under contract. She has played in German and French films.

LEARNED COW ROPIN' ON THE RADIO. Anyhow, it's from NBC networks that Cliff Nazarro comes to the screen, via a contract with Jed Buell. He will have comedy leads in the Spectrum series, "The Singing Buckaroo," starring Fred Scott, who is shown (left) welcoming him to the "range."

JOINED IN PRODUCTION. Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and Samuel Goldwyn going over plans for the initial picture to star Gary Cooper under the Goldwyn banner. The story, dealing with the adventures of Marco Polo in the Orient, circa 1300 A.D., is by Fairbanks. Release will be through United Artists.

RESTING IN EAST. Margot Grahame arriving in New York for a vacation following completion of her RKO Radio production, "Make Way for a Lady."

STILL CLAIMS HER PUBLIC. Mary Pickford, film company executive, demonstrated this kind of "draw" on her arrival the other day in New York. So many fans stormed the station to welcome the sometime "America's Sweetheart" that police lines were necessary. She had come for conferences with United Artists officials on corporation affairs.

VETERAN CASHIER. Sara Phillips (right), who is celebrating her 30th year as cashier for the Jones, Linick & Schaefer circuit, Chicago.

HEAD CAST OF ITALIAN IMPORTATION. Elisa Cegani and A. Nazzari, who have the romantic leads of "Cavalry," recently completed in Italy by the Industrie Italiane Cinematographiche. It will be distributed in the United States by United Artists. Others prominent in the cast are Silvana Jacchino and Clara Padova.

THE PAY-OFF. It seems James Hogan, Paramount director, and 20 years ago Adolph Zukor's property boy, has insisted through the years Mr. Zúkor once was $3 short on his pay. The other day the latter decided to end Hogan's dunning. Here's the record.

WE'LL HOLD IT! You see, the gag is (below) Doris Lindsay, one of First National's "Gold Diggers of 1937," has no stockings, therefore no place for the gold she's dug! Tsk, tsk. As if a gag were needed!

MAKING ROMANCE! Or, reel love running smoothly according to script (ah, if the fans only suspected!). With Director Henry King egging them on, Tyrone Power, Jr., and Virginia Field go about the business of love in a scene for "Lloyds of London," 20th Century-Fox historical film.

TO PARIS. Carol Stone, who has quit the cast of "White Horse Inn," New York stage musical, for an engagement at the Comedie Francaise. She has appeared on the screen in RKO Radio's "Freckles."

MASKING OF NAZI FILMS AS FRENCH IS CHARGED AS NEW BOYCOTT LOOMS

Anti-Nazi League Invites Distributors and Exhibitors to Friday Meeting to "Discuss Policies of American Industry"

German Interests Releasing Pictures Through Subsidiaries in Other Countries to Conceal Ownership, Is Charge

A sustained campaign to prevent the showing of pictures made in Nazi Germany either through cooperation of distributors in America, if possible, or by a boycott, if necessary, has been launched by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, of which Samuel Untermyer, internationally noted lawyer, is president.

A meeting to which large film distributors and representatives of exhibitor organizations have been invited is set for Friday afternoon at the headquarters of the League in New York. Invitations sent out by the League said that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss "policies of the American film industry in respect to the distribution and exhibition of all German-made and pro-Nazi motion pictures."

The League claims a membership of more than 10,000 with branch offices in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Hollywood, New Orleans, and Portland, Ore., and says it has direct connections, through affiliations, with 2,000,000 persons who are members of similar anti-Nazi groups, churches, synagogues, community centers and civic and fraternal clubs. The largest single group said to endorse the policies of the League is the American Federation of Labor which on several occasions has supported boycotts against German-made products.

The announcement of the meeting on Friday explained that "although in the past the League has successfully invoked the boycott against Nazi-made films, a more emphatic movement has become necessary because German film interests are releasing pictures through subsidiaries in other countries, often concealing the real Nazi ownership."

With the announced intention of exposing such practices and of ultimately completing a boycott of all German-made and pro-Nazi films, the League called the meeting "to gain the cooperation of representatives of the American film industry in all its branches."

The market for German films in this country is reported to have almost disappeared except in German language theatres in sections of large cities where the population is largely of German extraction.

The charge of "concealment" resulted from the billing and subsequent withdrawal of the picture "Amphitryon" at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse in New York last week. The film, subtitled "The Gods at Play," was advertised as a French picture, made in France. Independent investigations conducted by Motion Picture Daily, by the League and by the Joint Boycott Council of the American Jewish Congress and the Jewish Labor Committee, disclosed the fact that the film is not of French but of German origin.

French Branch of UFA

The credit sheet given reviewers at preview of the picture read that the film was produced by L'Alliance Cinematographigue Europeene in Paris. Distribution in this country is being handled by Globe Pictures Corporation. Martin J. Lewis, managing director of the Playhouse, said that to the best of his knowledge the picture was produced by ACE, which he believed to be a wholly-owned French company, having no connection with any German company or any German financing.

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME"

NEWSREELS: The intense interest in the political campaign, and there is a lot of footage being used up, is making for rowdy houses. They clap and boo—and, boy, will I be glad when the damn thing is settled one way or the other. Then maybe we will get some news in them again.—A. E. HANCOCK, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

In support of his contention Mr. Lewis produced a letter signed by Dave Brill of Globe Pictures in which the exhibitor was "assured" that the film was entirely French both "artistically and economically."

The investigations disclosed that ACE is French branch of the German producing company UFA, (Universum Film Aktiengesellschaft) and that the picture, although starring the French player, Henri Garat, was actually made at the UFA studio in Neu Babelsburg, Germany. The company's connection with UFA was established by a cable received from Pierre Autre, representative in Paris of Quigley Publications, which read:

"Practically a Subsidiary"

"Alliance Cinematographique Europeene is the French distributing company for German UFA films. It is practically a subsidiary of UFA with W. Schmidt as manager of all French branches. The Alliance has exchanges in Paris, Brussels, all main French towns and North Africa. The main German UFA films are generally produced in Berlin studios in both French and German speaking versions. So has been 'Amphitryon,' starring Henri Garat, made in Berlin, French title 'Les Dieux S'Amusent,' ('The Gods Amuse Themelves.')"

Dr. Robert Marcus, secretary of the Joint Boycott Council, exhibited a copy of La Cinematographie Francaise for August 10, 1935 in which a page advertisement was carried on the film under its French title. The picture was designated as "Une Production G. Stapenhorst de la UFA," which translates as "A G Stapenhort production of UFA."

The Council secretary charged that ACE is a French distributing arm of UFA in Germany and that it produces four or five pictures a year in France "as a cover." He said that the film had been offered to several American distributors of foreign product by UFA last year, and that the American firms refused to take it.

To add to the evidence the Non-Sectarian League produced a copy of a press book for the German version of the picture, printed in Germany and sent to German exhibitors, in which the production is plainly labeled a UFA picture.

In a bulletin to its members urging a boycott of the picture, if and when it opens, the League explained:

"The film, 'Amphitryon,' is widely advertised by its American distributors and exhibitors as having been made in France. It is true, of course, that L'Alliance Cinematographique Europeene produced the picture, but what is not widely known is that that company is merely the French branch of UFA, which is virtually owned by the Nazi Government. Since all profits and royalties accruing from the picture will be sent to Nazi Germany, this picture, and all other productions of L'Alliance Cinematographique Europeene, must be boycotted."

Before the "Amphitryon" incident a question arose over "La Kermesse Heroique," a Tobis production made in France and distributed here by the newly opened American branch of the company. The Anti-Nazi Economic Bulletin, official organ of the Non-Sectarian League, in its September issue attacked Tobis as a "German company which is making another attempt to crash the American film market."

Denies It's German Company

Following publication of this story in the League bulletin, W. E. Van Beverin, president of Tobis-America, denied emphatically that Tobis is a "German company." He explained that the parent company is Dutch, with headquarters in Amsterdam, Holland, and is backed by Dutch capital. The company has a production branch in Germany, he said, as it has in other European countries including Austria, Sweden and France, and the German branch is meeting the difficulties which face any other company with subsidiaries in Germany under the Nazi Government. The company must submit to the same regulations governing withdrawal of money from the Reich as all other concerns and must do its best to protect its investment there.

Mr. Van Beverin further said that pictures made by Tobis in Germany are brought to this country strictly as German-made pictures and billed as such, but he added that the market at present for such films is very small, being confined to the few German language theatres in large cities. In addition, he said, any returns from exhibition of German Tobis pictures in this country go to the parent company in Holland and not to the German branch.

"La Kermesse Heroique," the English title of which is "Carnival in Flanders," was made by the French branch of Tobis in both French and German versions at the Epinay studios near Paris in the summer of 1935. The story is by Charles Spaak, a Belgian, and the picture was directed by Jacques Feyder, a French citizen of Belgian birth. The film, which played at the Filmarte Theatre, is being taken on the road by Joseph Steiner, general sales manager of Tobis-America.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS AGREE ON NEW CANADIAN SCALE

Agreement with Exhibitors Sets Fee at 25 Per Cent Lower Than the Scale at Present

The organized music publishing interests of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the British Performing Rights Society have finally worked out with Canadian exhibitors an agreement on music reproducing royalties.

The agreement was worked out in Toronto last week by E. C. Mills, of ASCAP; Wesley J. Boosey, representing the British Performing Rights Society and most of the foreign music societies; T. J. Bragg and Arthur Thomson, Famous Players-Canadian; Matt Taylor and Colonel John A. Cooper representing independent Canadian theatre owners. The new pact is for the year 1937 and the fees charged the theatre operators will be 25 per cent lower than heretofore. Mr. Mills, general manager of ASCAP, which owns half of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, explained that film rentals paid by Canadian exhibitors are on the average 25 per cent less than those paid in the United States, and, therefore, it was agreed that the Canadian music tax should reflect the same differential. Canadian owners will now pay 15 cents per seat for theatres seating over 1,600; 12 cents per seat for theatres seating 801 to 1,599; 10 cents for theatres under 800 seats and a minimum of $10 a year. The new schedule was filed with the Government at Toronto on Monday.

The new agreement, which sets a price higher than the five cents a seat annual rate set by the Canadian government, is said to have the approval of the government, either due to realization that it could not fix prices, at least in this instance, or to a belief that the new prices were fair.

However, government approval may be required before the new agreement can be placed into actual effect, according to legal opinions in Toronto.

It was pointed out in Toronto that while the government undoubtedly would not attempt to restrain exhibitors who are parties to the agreement from paying rates in excess of those prescribed by its commission, it would move to protect the interests of any exhibitor not a party to the agreement who declined to pay a higher rate than that prescribed by the Canadian Government. The larger theatre interests, however, were represented in the agreement and it is from these that the music licensing society derives the bulk of its Canadian revenue.

Under the agreement, the Canadian Performing Rights Society will continue in operation, according to Mr. Mills and Mr. Boosey, whose organizations control the Canadian music licensing unit.

Approximately 450 publisher, composer and author members of ASCAP attended the organization's semi-annual luncheon meeting at the Hotel Astor last weekend in New York. The meeting was addressed at length by Mr. Buck, who presented reports of officers on activities since the membership meeting last winter.

Following the luncheon, Arthur Schwartz of Schwartz and Frohlich, attorneys for the society, left for Washington for several days of conferences with members of the Attorney General's staff in connection with agreements on stipulations of fact which are being entered in an effort to expedite adjudication of the Government's monopoly action against ASCAP. Much work still remains to be done before the stipulations can be submitted to the federal court in New York. When completed, the court may decide the case on the basis of the stipulations or may order a resumption of the trial for additional evidence and testimony.

A T & T Files Brief In Federal Board Fight

Briefs were filed this week with the United States supreme court in Washington by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and associated companies and by the General Telephone Company group in suits to enjoin the enforcement of an order of the Federal Communications Commission prescribing a uniform system of accounts for telephone companies. A reply from the commission is expected within the next week.

A ruling by the supreme court is anticipated by both sides before the postponed date of Jan. 1, 1937, for effective operation of the new accounting system.

Fox Bankruptcy Case Postponed to Nov. 10

Questioning of witnesses in the William Fox bankruptcy proceedings was adjourned in Atlantic City this week until November 10 by Referee Robert E. Steedle because of Election Day and other interruptions.

Referee Steedle has forwarded to United States District Judge John Boyd Avis at Camden papers certifying Herbert Leitsteen in contempt for refusing to testify on All-Continent Corporation affairs.

Securities Ordered Sold

Judge Charles B. Davis in the United States district court in St. Louis has ordered that $110,000 in debentures and 1,100 shares of preferred stock of Paramount-Publix, received by the voting trustees of the Missouri Theatre Building Corporation in settlement of a rent claim on the building must be sold for cash. The proceeds are to be turned over to the Boatman's National Bank as trustee under a deed of trust securing $1,917,500 in bonds issued by Missouri Building Corporation.

Academy Casting Directory

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood has completed plans to publish a casting directory with the alphabetical listing of players photographs. Rates for the service will be extremely low, with the same space rates applying to all players. The directory will be published every two months.

Masking of Nazi Films Is Charged against Tobis and an explanation of the status of the company.

At its meeting with distributors this week the League hoped to obtain support and permanence for a policy, which it already has inaugurated, of investigating and classifying foreign made pictures before they are shown in this country. The motion picture division of the boycott organization has done this at the request of several distributors. A Universal picture, "Der Verlorene Sohn" ("The Prodigal Son") was pronounced satisfactory for exhibition after the producers proved to the satisfaction of the League that Universal produced and financed the picture. It was made partly in Germany, but this was done under provisions of a contract signed before the accession of the Hitler regime to power.

Officials of the League emphasized that not all German pictures were to be boycotted but only those made under the present Nazi rule, returns from the rentals of which will go to Germany. Pictures made in other countries, and found to be pro-Nazi in any degree are to be banned also.

Organized in Other Countries

The anti-Nazi boycott has been organized by groups affiliated with the League in countries other than the United States. In Canada the German film, "The Dancing Dutchess," was withdrawn as a result of protests from the anti-Nazi Boycott Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress. The film was scheduled to play a circuit in Toronto following approval by the Government censor board and a showing in Winnipeg. Representations were made to Peerless Films, Ltd., distributor, and the picture was ordered withdrawn.

The League, which claims success in its campaign to boycott German-made goods of all kinds, includes in its list of officers, beside Mr. Untermyer, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, James W. Gerard and Arthur S. Tompkins, vice-presidents; Mrs. Mark Harris, acting chairman of the executive committee; and J. David Stern, treasurer.

Mr. Untermyer, president of the League, is a lawyer of international repute and has been most active in recent years in anti-Nazi campaigns and as a leader of several groups interested in the welfare of Jewish refugees from Germany. In a legal career extending from 1879 he has been connected with the motion picture industry at least twice in court actions of wide importance. In 1930 he served as counsel for Fox Film Company and William Fox, successfully resisting a receivership for Mr. Fox and bringing about the private sale of the Fox interests and a friendly reorganization, involving $200,000,000 in properties. For these services, extending over a period of three months, he was paid a fee of $1,000,000. He was also one of the arbitrators in an action between Warner Brothers and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company several years ago.

Security Commission Delays Hollywood Case

Indefinite postponement of proceedings on the $100,000 registration of Hollywood Famous Pictures was ordered this week in Washington by the Securities and Exchange Commission to permit the company to submit amendments to its original statement.

The company filed the statement September 8 and was asked to clear up certain apparent discrepancies.

HEAVY STORY BUYING CONTINUES, 18 PRODUCERS BUYING 70 MANUSCRIPTS

Companies' Extensive Activity in Acquisition of Material for New Product Keeps Pace with Two Previous Months

Competition among virtually all of Hollywood's motion picture producers to acquire the best story material from the fields of publishing and stage and to be assured of a continuous supply of manuscripts is the cause of large purchases of books and plays, October's deals for 70 properties maintaining the level of September and August, when 74 and 73 stories were purchased, respectively.

Warner Brothers and Radio led the list of producers who added manuscript purchases to their production lists during October, with a total of 10 each. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer followed with nine vehicles and Twentieth Century-Fox was next with one less. A breakdown of the purchases, according to the number of each company, is as follows: Warners, three originals, four books, three plays; Radio, seven originals, two books, one play; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, three originals, four books, three plays; Twentieth Century-Fox, seven originals, one book; Universal, three originals, four books; Paramount, four originals, one book; United States, one original, two books, one play; Grand National, three books; Columbia, three originals; Gaumont British, two plays; Monogram, two originals; Burroughs-Tarzan, one original; Capital Films, one book; General Pictures, one original; Crescent Pictures, one original; Invincible Pictures, one original.

Following months of extensive purchasing from the legitimate theatre field last winter and spring, Hollywood suddenly announced there would be practically no more vehicles transported from this field to the screen and backed this up by ignoring Broadway's offerings. In September, however, peace apparently was made and two plays were transposed to Hollywood. The trend is more pronounced this month, for the records show that 10 legitimate productions have been purchased, including such hits as "Tovarich" and "Idiot's Delight."

"Tovarich," bought by Warners and produced by Gilbert Miller, already has proved its box office appeal in the legitimate theatre, opening in London last year and playing to capacity houses for months. In Manhattan, it is bidding fair to repeat this success, with tickets still being at a premium—the surest sign of a hit—despite only a fair reception from the dramatic critics. "Idiot's Delight," acquired by MGM and presented by the Theatre Guild, is from the pen of Robert E. Sherwood, who gave the theatre and motion picture "Petrified Forest" last year. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, perennial favorites, are starred and are also reported ready to accept MGM's offer to repeat their roles in Hollywood. It is further said that the motion picture company paid in the neighborhood of $135,000 for the play, the highest figure this year.

Magazine stories also played a prominent part in this month's purchases. Clarence Budington Kelland, whose serials are featured in The Saturday Evening Post, disposed of several of his works for high figures, and Fannie Hurst's still unpublished "Sister Act" went to Warners for over $100,000. The story will appear in serial form in Cosmopolitan Magazine, starting in January.

The Spanish revolution is also furnishing picture material, for Darryl F. Zanuck has assigned several writers to prepare an original story, tentatively titled "The Siege of the Alcazar," which will have as its highlight the attack on the fortress of Toledo. Trem Carr is also rushing production plans on "Alcazar," which will star John Wayne for Universal release.

Of the more serious musical efforts, Columbia has plans for an elaborate production to be made by Frank Capra dealing with the life of Chopin. Francis Lederer will portray the famous composer under Mr. Capra's direction. MGM has purchased "The Prince of Pilsen" and also has several original stories being prepared for Nelson Eddy, Jeannette MacDonald and others.

Warner and Radio Lead in Purchases of Stories; Ten Stage Plays Bought in Resumption of Broadway Search

The complete list of purchases made by the production companies during the month of October, with all available cast and production credits, is as follows:

ACTORS GUILD CLAIMS PART VICTORY IN EFFORTS TO UNIONIZE HOLLYWOOD

Seven of 24 Proscribed by Actors Equity Join Guild, Several Overseas or on Location Indicate They Will Sign

35 Players Reported on Second Blacklist Subject to Equity Discipline for Failing to Join the Coast Association

The Screen Actors Guild, moving rapidly after its affiliation with the American Federation of Labor and Actors Equity Association, is claiming partial success in its latest move to complete the unionization of Hollywood. Concrete evidence that the Guild feels that it is now strong enough to apply direct action measures to bring actors into its ranks was demonstrated recently when its ally, Actors Equity, announced the suspension of 24 of its members working in motion pictures for failure to join the Guild.

The drastic action is said by the Guild to have had the desired effect. Almost immediately seven of the proscribed number joined the Hollywood organization. Several who were either in foreign countries or on location announced their intention to sign with the Guild upon their return to Hollywood. A few have not made public their decision. One or two of the suspended members protested that they did not understand the action and did not know why they were being singled out for discipline.

35 Others Accused

The Guild is reported to have sent to Equity a supplementary list consisting of 35 players who are charged with evading the rules. It is believed that Equity will take no action on these names for at least a month, since all those mentioned will be given opportunity to appear before the council or correct the violations. The Guild's chief complaint is that members of the group have appeared in at least one picture since July 1st but have not joined the Coast association as required by Equity.

Actually neither Equity nor the Guild can do other than announce suspension. An Equity member who has been suspended for not joining the Guild would precipitate action by appearing in a stage play and thus laying himself open for discipline on the part of that body. Similarly a cause for action might be created by inclusion of a suspended Equity member in a picture cast.

Although such an incident might bring about a Hollywood strike, for the present and unless something unforeseen takes place soon, the Guild prefers to negotiate with both non-member actors and producers to prevent any situation arising which would generate a conflict.

JOHN BULL PASSES "GREEN PASTURES"

The New York Times on Tuesday reported by wireless from London that after five months' deliberation the British film censor, Baron Tyrrell, had passed the motion picture version of Marc Connolly's Pulitzer prize play "The Green Pastures." The stage version was prohibited in England in 1931. Warner Brothers immediately prepared to show their film in a West End theatre in a month.

The original objection to the play was based on the British law forbidding impersonations of the Deity on the stage. As the law does not affect pictures, the Times' dispatch said it would appear that approval of the film version hinged on a legal technicality.

Hollywood is alive with rumors and reports that the Guild, sure of its own strength and confident that it can count upon the support of studio union labor groups with which it is affiliated through membership in the American Federation of Labor, is ready to challenge the producers. These reports are denied emphatically by officers of the Guild.

The debacle encountered by the Screen Writers Guild last spring is still fresh in the minds of all, and rather than create a rift in the membership ranks the Guild officially is still strengthening its position.

Guild officials say that the Equity suspensions convinced actors that the Guild and Equity would not countenance any delay and that it is aiming for a unified and solid membership before it aims for anything else.

Deny Closed Shop Attempt

Representatives of Equity denied, after publication of the suspension list, that the move was a new attempt to establish a closed shop in Hollywood. It was said that the disciplinary action was less significant in this direction than the making of the agreement between Equity and the Guild in 1935. Seven years ago Equity sought to extend its influence among motion picture actors, previously beyond its control. The move failed temporarily when the actors quarreled among themselves over unionization demands and tactics and the producers held firm against recognition. After spending a reported $100,000 on the campaign, the Association withdrew but shortly afterward the Screen Actors Guild was organized.

Two years ago Equity and the Guild affiliated and Equity undertook to compel its members who were also screen players to enroll in the new group. The chief point of strength growing out of the affiliation was the probability that should matters come to a strike in Hollywood the producers would find they could not replace their actors with performers from the legitimate stage.

Ties between the technicians of the industry, already well organized, California state labor unions and members of the Guild were strengthened recently at the convention of the State Federation of Labor at Sacramento when the Guild was recognized by the State Federation. At the convention Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, was elected one of the regional vice-presidents of the Federation. The session went on record in favor of a closed shop in the motion picture industry.

Following the state convention the Guild held a conference with Frank Gillmore, president of Equity, who served notice on the 24 players that they would be suspended from Equity unless they joined the Guild.

Producers have not openly protested unionization of actors and the only apparent attempt of the studios to protect themselves in the event of a walkout has been to place actors under long term contracts. The producers are said to feel that the threat of involved litigation might hold many of the Guild members even if the organization called a strike.

The Screen Playwrights, an outgrowth of the more militant Screen Writers Guild, is declared to be against any amalgamation with organized labor and is reported to be on the point of completing an agreement with producers. The abrogation of the Academy-writer-producer pact, in favor of a new agreement to be reached between the Playwrights and the producers, seems imminent. Although the producers definitely will not violate the present contract, which still has a year to run, it is understood that the writers plan to make the first move by voiding the existing agreement, thus relieving the producers of their contractual obligations.

The possibility of the new development was strongly in evidence at a dinner tendered the producers by the Screen Playwrights at the Beverly Wilshire hotel in Hollywood last week. Among the guests were Darryl F. Zanuck, Louis B. Mayer, Edward J. Mannix, Ben B. Kahane, Adolph Zukor, Henry Herzbrun, William Koenig, Samuel J. Briskin, Harry Cohn and Joseph M. Schenck.

Committees have been named to work out details. Mr. Briskin, Mr. Mannix and Mr. Kahane will act for the producers and Waldemar Young, Paul Scofield and William Slavens McNutt will represent the writers. At the first of several meetings held at the RKO Studios it was pointed out that approximately two-thirds of the Academy writer members belong to Screen Playwrights.

SEVEN EXHIBITOR UNITS SET FOR CONVENTIONS

Organizations in West and South Prepare to Bring Problems into the Open

Organized exhibitors are approaching the late fall and early winter season determined to bring their problems of operation into the open in a series of meetings that signalize a busy season.

Allied States Association of Michigan opened its convention on Wednesday.

Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana meet in Indianapolis Thursday to elect officers for 1936-37 and to determine policies.

Arkansas' Independent Theatre Owners meet November 8th at Little Rock.

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America's Nebraska state unit convenes November 10th and 11th at Omaha to elect officers and determine procedure in matters affecting threatening legislation and the relations of members to distributors.

Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina meet on December 7th and 8th at the Charlotte hotel, in Charlotte, N. C.

Oklahoma Motion Picture Theatre Owners gather December 14th and 15th at the Biltmore hotel, Oklahoma City.

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas will convene in mid-December at Dallas.

Annual convention of the national MPTOA is set for March, at Miami.

H. M. Richey, general manager of the Allied States Association of Michigan, opened the 17th annual convention of the organization in the Hotel Statler at Detroit with a seven point program for 1937 covering the following topics: adverse legislation, horizontal motion picture unionizing, protection, admission prices and zoning, theatre overbuilding, percentage contracts and preferred play dates, double bills and unfair competition. Each member is to be asked to pledge himself not to buy any percentage pictures.

Two state units have new presidents. L. F. Haven, of Forest City, Arkansas, has succeeded Ray Morrow, resigned, in the Arkansas Independent Theatre Owners Association. W. G. Ripley, of Longview, Wash., was elected president of the Northwest Motion Picture Theatre Owners, last week, at the annual convention in Seattle. Mr. Ripley succeeded Hugh Breen.

Selecting Spokane as the locale for the 1937 convention, the Northwest owners elected with Mr. Ripley the following officers: First vice-president, I. O. Lukan, Seattle; second vice-president, Milton Kenworthy; third vice-president, Paul Aust; and secretary-treasurer, J. M. Hone, all re-elected. Also elected were the following trustees: H. T. Moore, Tacoma; John Danz, Seattle; Al Rosenberg, Fred Mercy, John Hamrick, Cecil Gwinn, Leroy Johnson, B. F. Shearer and C. D. Miller.

Probably the most aggressive action taken to date by organized exhibitors against a distributor came last weekend at a stormy session in Philadelphia of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, where it was decided to picket Grand National Pictures because of allegedly high rentals asked by that new company.

The meeting was held at the Hotel Broadwood and the organization went on record with the declaration that it did not want to boycott, but was using picketing as a definite means of protest. Recalled was the picketing of Warner Bros. in the same town a few years ago over "Gold Diggers."

The exhibitor group also set in motion a plan for action against MGM, asking exhibitors to refrain from giving dates to the company for 30 days at a time. The plan was referred to a committee for further development as a weapon to be used in the rental war.

The organization, still in a belligerent mood, advised members not to settle individually with the bill posters' union, which has been picketing theatres. The legal aspects of the case have been investigated and it was reported that there is no precedent in Pennsylvania courts for collective action in such matters.

Attack on Hearst, Too

Exhibitors reported announcements from the American League Against War and Fascism, asking theatres not to renew Hearst Metrotone News contracts, threatening to take action if they did. Some exhibitors reported that the MGM exchange had cancelled issues of the news and that the Hearst name had been deleted from recent issues.

Lewen Pizor, president, made a fiery plea to the assembled membership for concerted action in all these drives and told them to "forget themselves as individuals and work collectively." He said that the organization could take credit for the reduction of "Anthony Adverse" rentals from 50 to 40 per cent. Mr. Pizor also announced that more than 600 exhibitors and friends had made reservations for the "harmony banquet" at the Bellevue Stratford hotel.

Hearst Name Stays

The name of Hearst will not be removed from the Hearst Metrotone News, Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of the William Randolph Hearst motion picture enterprises, said in New York Tuesday in denying reports such a move was contemplated.

Mr. Hatrick added that he knew of several instances where exhibitors have been substituting their own titles without the Hearst name to lead off the newsreel, but this was not general.

Three Theatres To Be Built

Dave Rosenzweig and Associates will construct three new theatres, two in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the third in Maspeth, Long Island. The company is now connected with Sam Cocalis Enterprises, operating theatres in Brooklyn and Long Island.

Paramount Actors Aid Zukor Jubilee

Paramount's Adolph Zukor Jubilee Drive, starting January 3d, is to have honorary captains for sales districts. Their names were made known to Mr. Zukor at a studio luncheon. The districts and their leaders follow:

District No. 1, Boston, Ray Milland; No. 2, New York, Lynne Overman; No. 3, Philadelphia, Marsha Hunt; No. 4, Cleveland, Eleanore Whitney; No. 5, Chicago, William Frawley; No. 6, Kansas City, Roscoe Karns; No. 7, Atlanta, Gail Patrick; No. 8, Denver, Martha Raye; No. 9, Los Angeles, Shirley Ross; No. 10, Minneapolis, Mary Carlisle; No. 11, Dallas, Dorothy Lamour. The two Canadian districts will be captained by Sir Guy Standing and Robert Cummings. Bob Burns will act as captain-at-large and spokesman for the group.

Gladys Swartout will be the official personal representative for Mr. Zukor on a tour of the Paramount exchanges in Europe for a month starting January 7. The personal appearance tour is in connection with the Jubilee. Miss Swartout will be accompanied by her husband, Frank Chapman.

Assurances that the production forces will back up the sales department in the four-month drive were expressed last week by Mr. Zukor in a message to the men in the field. "I am sure," Mr. Zukor said, "the product coming from the studio will justify whatever you may say about it in the field. In looking forward to Paramount's Silver Jubilee, apart from my very deep appreciation of its dedication to me, I feel that it will afford a basis for the most successful campaign in the history of the organization.

"With an unusually high standard of product now in preparation for the new season, the jubilee should give added impetus to both production and distribution efforts. It is indeed gratifying to be called upon to head a world-wide drive of this sort in behalf of the company. It is to be hoped that in celebrating our 25th anniversary in the motion picture business 1937 will be a year of records for Paramount. And I want you all to feel that as the drive gets started I will back you up in every possible way."

Starting with January 1 the aim of the Paramount domestic sales force is to average a weekly income of $1,000,000. January 3 to 9 has been designated as "Adolph Zukor Birthday Week."

Lina Sues Principal Pictures

In a suit for $10,000 damages filed in the supreme court of New York by Lina Pictures Corporation against Principal Film Exchange the plaintiff charges that its assignor, Principal Distributing Corporation, released prints and sound records through the defendant and that the defendant has failed to return them in accordance with an agreement to do so. Lina Pictures Corporation at the same time discontinued an action for $3,000 in city court against the same defendant.

Edward Muhl, who has been in charge of contracts in Universal's legal department in Hollywood, has been made assistant to William Koenig.

Spain's Revolt Laid to Minority Despite Gains Made by Labor

The Background of the Revolution That Commandeered American Film Properties

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER

Harry Chapin Plummer, correspondent at Barcelona for Quigley Publications, has just returned to New York from Spain, where the censorship of all news articles and the obstacles to mail and cable communications finally made accurate reporting of the news an impossibility.

In the article herewith Mr. Plummer pictures the background of Spain's tragedy.

The background of the Spanish revolution, in which the Anarchists have commandeered Americans' motion picture property and interests, presents a striking parallel to that of the every-day life of the "Industrial East" of the United States, the area comprising the New England States and all southward of the Mohawk Valley in New York State to Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Baltimore. The revolt in Spain sprang from her great industrial area, the region of Cataluña, of which Barcelona is the capital and Spain's largest city and chief seaport. It was furthered from such intensive labor centers as Bilbao, the steel and ship-building city; Oviedo, mining capital of Asturias; Valencia, the manufacturing and fruit-shipping district, and Madrid, the national capital, and the republic's second largest city, one of large scale manufacturing operations. But it was in Cataluña that the revolt flamed into a conflagration of proportions such as no country except Russia has seen in modern history.

While there is little ground, in a geographical, economic or military sense, for comparison between the inception and spread of the Bolshevik outbreak following the Russian military disaster and collapse of the brief Kerensky regime, and our industrial condition in this country, there are arresting points of similarity between the status of Cataluña on July 18 last and that of our Northeastern United States today.

In the first place Cataluña, in extent of area, population, political influence, productive capacity and accumulated wealth, may be described as somewhat in the same proportion to the rest of Spain that the New England and Middle Atlantic States are to the remaining 37 states of the Union. Cataluña is in the extreme Northeast of Spain, and, like Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York, meets the frontier of a neighboring country, France. It is the seat of Spain's basic industries—textiles, iron and steel, shoes, headgear, furniture and household goods, building materials and equipment, film studio and laboratory and theatre apparatus and accessories as well as finished and elaborate manufactures of every conceivable class and type.

Speak Different Languages

There is even a definite ethnological distinction between the Catalan and the Spaniard. They differ racially and they speak widely differing languages, for the Catalan tongue is a completely individual language, not a dialect, and it is generally employed throughout the Region, as also in the Balearic Islands—Mallorca, Menorca and Ibiza—which are subsidiary to the Catalan autonomous regional government, although now under control of the military forces. It is the language of all intra-regional government administration, of trade and commerce, of newspapers and social intercourse, and it is a language which boasts a high degree of cultural achievement. There is a Catalan school of poetry, of literature and drama, the development of centuries past. All of the Spanish drama, classic and modern, and outstanding literary works are to be found in Catalan translated texts, and this is equally true of the poets, authors, dramatists and lyric composers of Europe beyond Spain's frontiers and of America, almost all of whose works have been translated into Catalan.

Like the habitually conservative Easterner of the United States, the Catalan is inclined to be much more phlegmatic and deliberate in character, speech and action than the Spaniard to the south and west—heritage of his Visigoth ancestry, as distinct from the Latin and Arabic origin of the dominant element of the Peninsula. The Catalan language, replete with Gallic, Italic and even Teuton roots, is more dependent upon consonants and is generally lacking the vocal terminations and characteristics of Spanish. The Catalan, whether due to his ethnological origin or to his somewhat colder climate, is more industrious and enterprising and a shrewder business man than the Spaniard; he is a natural-born trader and many students attribute this to a Semitic strain—Jewish rather than Arabic. Both the racial and the linguistic characteristic of the Catalan, however, are more easily traceable than those of the Vascos, who inhabit the Northwestern provinces of Spain and whose stock becomes the Basques, as the French frontier is crossed beyond the Pyrenees. Their origin is lost in antiquity and their tongue is wellnigh unconquerable for the Catalan, Spanish or western student.

Merchants and Traders

For centuries past the Catalans, as a subject race, have borne much the same relation to the true Iberians of the Peninsula that the Celts of Southern Ireland had to their Anglo-Saxon conquerors; that the majority of Quebec's population has to the dominant English, Scotch and Irish stock of the Dominion of Canada; that the Bretons of France have to their co-nationals.

In the golden age of Genoa, Venice, Florence, as an independent nation, the Catalans proved their mettle and acumen as merchants and traders, and, upon occasion, as pirates. If any consideration is to be accorded the claims that Christopher Columbus was not a Genoese by birth, but a native of the Peninsula, then the handsome and imposing monument reared to his memory at the foot of Barcelona's famed Rambla commemorates not only one who started the preparations for his epoch-making voyage in Cataluña's capital and seaport but who spent most of his time in that city and one whom his fellow townsmen called by a name as common to Cataluña as Smith or Jones to America—Colomb.

Until a short time before the outbreak of July 18, labor conditions in Spanish and Catalan industry were frankly deplorable. This was due, partly, but not wholly, to economic depression the world over. Factory, mine, dock and field throughout the republic felt the yoke of long hours and inadequate wage.

In the great producing areas of Cataluña the status of labor corresponded to that which prevailed in the textile mills, machine shops and shoe factories of New England and New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania in the final decade or two of the last century. But sanely controlled labor agitation, the power of the press, a resulting enlightenment of public opinion and arousing of public sympathy, constructive legislation and a wise and sincere carrying out of that legislation, through three generations, have brought about greatly improved labor conditions. And this mighty change has been gradually effected by due process of law.

Sweeping Concessions Obtained

Prior to the Spanish revolt of July 19, by dint of a coalition of all labor elements and Left, or Radical, and Moderate parties, the February elections won for the workers of Spain sweeping concessions. Had the new government at Madrid, headed by Manuel Azaña, and the new autonomous regional government of Cataluña at Barcelona, presided over by Lluís Companys, been permitted to work out their destinies, permanent substantial gains for labor would have been realized. However, a small but powerful minority, composed of Anarchists banded for strictly Syndicalist purposes in the Confederación Nacional de Trabajo (National Confederation of Labor) and known by the initials C.N.T., and banded, in another unit, as a philosophical rather than as a working entity and styled the Federación Anarquista Iberica (Spanish Anarchist Federation)—the F.A.I.—literally seized the government in Barcelona, while a Socialist Labor group known as the Unión General de Trabajo (General Labor Union)—the U.G.T.—gained the ascendancy at Madrid.

For the purposes of the revolution these two groups of completely opposite character and objectives were represented as acting in unison, although the bloody disputes between the two represented one of the most demoralizing phases of the civil strife they engendered and continue to account for the conflicting measures of government which make the present regime well nigh idiotic in the eyes of the world.

These "Direct Action" forces divided the balance of power throughout the industrial areas of the country—Barcelona, in Cataluña; Bilbao in the Vasco territory; Oviedo, the mining center of Asturias, and Valencia, on the eastern seaboard, Spain's third largest city.

Strikes conducted by the U.G.T. in both Madrid and Barcelona, a month or more prior to the revolt, realized varying degrees of success and undoubtedly aroused the jealousy and cupidity of the "Anarcho-Syndicalist" group, the C.N.T. There were other and lesser Socialist and Communist groups, but the two—C.N.T.-F.A.I. on the one hand, and the U.G.T. on the other — composed the all-powerful minority which today corresponds to the Industrial Workers of the World and the International Ladies Garment Union of the United States. They must, however, by no means be confounded with the unions of structural steel workers, film operators, the typographical group, the musicians, or any of the labor unions of distinctively American conception and identity such as make up the American Federation of Labor.

Now for a hypothetical example to illustrate just what might be the relation of a weakened federal government and a correspondingly weakened regional or local government in this country to an I.W.W. setup of this kind brought into being here.

It is the Anarcho-Syndicalist and Socialist combine which is the "rebel" force in Spain today and not the military element. The military it was who strove on July 19 to exercise their appointed police functions against the voluntary surrender of the government to terrorism and anarchy, and in failing gained the wholly undeserved label of "rebels."

Indeed, if the army now battering the ramparts of Madrid are "rebels," then the late Calvin Coolidge, when he put a quick end to the Boston police strike in 1918, was an "arch-rebel" and the Massachusetts militia forces he employed for that purpose were a "rebel army."

Hypothetical Analogy

Suppose that at Washington, following a presidential election, we had a government with a powerful grouping of aggressive radicals within a coalition of old-line parties, such as—for purposes of crude example—Democratic, Progressive Republican, and the like. Such a grouping and balance would be akin to that which the February elections this year seated at Madrid. Presume further that the Republicans and a group of conservative political elements had been literally voted out of existence. For better illustration, let us say that the big industrial region of the Middle Atlantic and New England States formed an autonomous division with New York or Boston as its capital—an autonomous government agreeing in complexion and character with the central, or federal, government at Washington. The president, in this hypothetical case, is a Left, or Coalition, candidate upon whom the Moderate Leftist majority and Anarcho-Syndicalist minority are agreed, and the governor, or executive head, of the autonomous division or region represents a like balance of power.

General strikes, fomented by the Anarcho-Syndicalist group, augment its power. Not only is the influence of the many other factors entering into the "Popular Front," as the Coalition is termed, over-ridden and thrown into the discard, but the most constructive phases of legislation and administration accomplished by the now defeated Right, or Conservative, groups, are nullified and trampled down.

Strike violence, killings, among them that of a Scotch mill-owner, and sabotage are benignly regarded by the new "Popular Front" governments, both federal and regional, and the disorder and lawlessness are actively led by the dangerous minority which, being frankly self-designated "Anarcho-Syndicalist," wants not government but revolt, not law and order, but terrorism, and is heading for revolution at breakneck speed. There is widespread and increasing civil unrest. The country is being incited by one wing of its own government to Red Revolt. The authorities decree a perpetually recurring "state of alarm," which means virtually nothing in a police sense. The Anarcho-Syndicalist C.N.T. and F.A.I. is shortly to become the governing factor over almost the entire industrial area of Spain and, so, over a great part of the republic.

Violent disputes growing out of the strike condition assume dangerous proportions and—we continue to shift the scene of this hypothetical budding conflagration to this side of the Atlantic—the government, both at Washington and at New York or Boston, re-decrees and so prolongs the "state of alarm," but does not call for a state of siege, or martial law. Why? Because that would put the military in control of the government and send the C.N.T.-F.A.I. ruffians to firing squads and, with law and order re-established, the government, as it was then conducting itself, would have short shrift. A revolt, with all its concomitant horrors—assassination, arson, loot and sack and the growing abridgement of civil liberties—may perpetuate the government, which the C.N.T.-F.A.I. combination are gradually, but steadily, taking over for all practical purposes.

A NEW SERVICE FOR SHOWMEN

A new service for exhibitors in the short subject pages of the Release Chart of Motion Picture Herald is a designation of the dates of issues in which appeared Showmen's Reviews of the short product.

Immediately following the title appear numerals showing the month and date of the issue in which was published the review of that subject.

Arms the Rabble

Finally, this Anarcho-Syndicalist State, unmasking itself, arms the rabble, flings open the gates of prison and jail, and, as convict and felon come forth, hand him—or her—a rifle, a pistol and a red sleeve-band bearing the initials "C.N.T.-F.A.I." This red sleeve-band, the insignia of stark Anarchy, was at one and the same time police badge and search warrant and, alas! all too often death warrant!

For the first time the red flag of Anarchy appears in the streets. Some of the flags are all-red, but lest these be confounded with the emblem of the Communist, Marxist and Socialist groups, all maneuvering and struggling for position, the distinctive standard of the C.N.T. and F.A.I. becomes red and black, with a diagonal line separating the red above from the black below. Today the trolley-cars and autobuses of Barcelona's excellent urban transit system and all the taxicabs, formerly all painted yellow, are colored the diagonally divided red and black of the C.N.T. and F.A.I. and bear, each unit, those initials.

Red Flag Goes Up

On that dread Sunday, July 19, when the Red Revolt broke over a nation whose people were ill-prepared for such a cataclysmic disaster and to the rank and file of whom the thought of revolution was—and is now more than ever—as abhorrent as it is to a Connecticut town or village, the red flag sprang up apparently from nowhere. As each Roman Catholic church was pillaged and burned and its clergy shot down in cold blood, as each convent or monastery was consigned to the torch and its mother superior and sisters or abbot and friars slain, the red flags went up, each bearing the initials C.N.T.-F.A.I. Even today many of the blackened churches, still surmounted by their crosses, have a red flag pitched at a diagonal and tipsy angle, flaunting its bold crimson before the eyes of a shocked and stunned civilization—or what is left of it in Spain.

And the Spanish national colors? For every one emblem of the republic—the horizontal bars of red, yellow and violet—or for every one of the Catalan autonomous state—the eight narrow horizontal bands of red and yellow—that flies on buildings whole or destroyed, or that is carried in the great and increasing number of street parades, there fly or there are carried ten red flags or red-and-black flags of the C.N.T.-F.A.I. The flag of the republic and that flag of Cataluña are still graciously allowed to be hoisted, but in ever decreasing proportion to the unfurling of Anarchy's standard, while red shirts, red neckties, red caps, red apparel of various sorts and red in many details of clothing, red lapel-buttons, red badges, red handkerchiefs and red neck scarves and particularly red sleeve-bands, proclaim to the world that Spain is today a land of Anarchy.

Further evidence of the fact that the real rebels of the civil war in Spain are the C.N.T.-F.A.I. and U.G.T. combination, which has made of the national and regional governments just two "rubber stamps," may be drawn from a tragic incident vouched for by the records of the American and British Consulates General in Barcelona and by the State Department at Washington and the London Foreign Office.

A First Victim

One of the first victims of "Red Sunday" was an employee of our consulate general. He was not an American citizen, but a Spanish national of Vasco family and had been employed at the consulate general for seventeen years. He was the head of a family and respected by his fellows of the consular staff. When the Revolution broke, George D. Jenkins, the general manager of Ford Motor Iberica, the big Ford plant in Barcelona, was spending the weekend with his wife and child at a resort twenty miles out of the city. Our ranking consul, Lynn W. Franklin, naturally anxious to concentrate all American nationals at one point for evacuation, sent a car with Mr. Iturralde, the ill-fated clerk of the consulate general, to fetch Mr. Jenkins and his family. In the car accompanying him was an employee of the Ford Company, a British subject. The car bore the American and British flags.

Mr. Iturralde had been provided by the consulate general with a letter, in Spanish, stating the nature of his mission and asking safe conduct for him, by a second letter, in Catalan, from the Generalidad and personally signed by Lluis Companys, the president, and by a third "official" paper, a scrawled certificate of the "Comité Pro-Revolucionario." The Ford

Large Quarterly Net Seen Certain For Paramount

Paramount's third quarter report, which may be released in about two weeks, will reflect earnings even better than those anticipated at the close of the period a month ago, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, said this week.

Mr. Griffis declined to make an advance estimate of the earnings, but the estimate of third-quarter profits early this month was in excess of $1,000,000. Mr. Griffis said that the earning report for the company's British subsidiaries is completed about 30 days later than the domestic report, and a decision by Paramount not to make public any preliminary or incomplete report accounts for the absence of a third-quarter earning statement at this date.

Asked to comment on reports that dividend action was a likelihood, Mr. Griffis said that they were not entirely unfounded. Indications are, however, that such action would not be taken until well along toward the end of the year. The November meeting of the board may be postponed until a December date because of the probability that Barney Balaban, Paramount president, and Mr. Griffis may not be back from their present coast visit November 26, the scheduled date for the board meeting. Mr. Balaban left for Chicago last Friday and was expected to be joined Wednesday by Mr. Griffis. The two will go on to the Paramount studio for two or three weeks.

Paramount's first preferred stock touched a new high for three successive days last week, reaching 125¾, dropping slightly to 124½ to close the week. In commenting on the rise the Wall Street Journal said: "Earnings are understood to be piling up at an increasing rate. In view of the new tax laws, some dividends on account of accruals may be declared before the end of the year. Theatres are providing a larger part of the impetus, but films, too, are now understood to be making money."

Park Avenue Gets Theatre After All

The construction of motion picture theatres in the exclusive Park and Madison Avenue areas in New York was authorized this week by the appellate division of the supreme court, where the decision of Justice Valente upholding the refusal of License Commissioner Paul Moss to issue a permit for a theatre to Robert Walton Goelet was unanimously reversed.

The controversial theatre will be constructed on Park Avenue between 53rd and 54th streets.

The trial of the suit alleging plagiarism of songs brought by Georges A. Gogniat of United Music Company against Universal Pictures has been set for trial before Federal Judge Woolsey in New York on December 14th.

THIRD NATIONAL UNIT OF EXHIBITORS IS NEAR

Independent Association of New York To Be Nucleus; Cullman Denies He's Slated as President

Broadway on Wednesday was expecting momentarily the announcement of formation of a new national organization of and for independent theatre owners, thereby giving the industry a third national group, in addition to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Edward L. Kuykendall, president, and Allied States Exhibitors, Nathan Yamins, president.

Considerable secrecy cloaks the new organization's aims and plans except that the sponsor is the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of which Harry Brandt of New York is president. The idea has been in the discussion stage for a year or more.

The initial steps for the actual formation of the new organization were taken late last week. The Independent Theatre Owners Association will be the nucleus of the new association, it was learned following a meeting of the local unit and a number of representatives from other cities held then at the Hotel Astor.

A group of exhibitors in Philadelphia who did not join the new United Motion Picture Theatre Owners will form a second organization in that city.

An unnamed Philadelphia exhibitor spoke to the assembled theatre men at the Astor and expressed a willingness to join the new national organization.

New Jersey and New England groups are also understood to be ready to align themselves with the new plan.

Resolutions for formation of the new association were put over until later in this week, it was said, when Mr. Brandt will announce at least six eastern states as affiliated in the new project. This new plan is not identified with previous discussions for establishment of a new national unit with representation in each Congressional district.

Percentages Attacked

Percentages were attacked on all sides with every major company included in the harangue and action on this type of selling pictures was also postponed until this week, it was revealed.

Several exhibitors said that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was having difficulties selling its product under its new sales policy. An exchange executive answered this by declaring that practically all the important independent circuits already have been signed. This statement may also be applied to Paramount.

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, for many months had meetings with Mr. Brandt on the idea of creating a new national organization along Congressional district lines. Nothing came of these conferences, but Mr. Brandt has continued to criticize both Allied and the MPTOA, saying that neither organization represents the interests of independent exhibitors.

Under Mr. O'Reilly's plan, the proposed merger of the TOCC and the ITOA was to provide the first unit. Mr. O'Reilly delayed action until after the national elections this week. Whether this plan will eventuate was problematical, since the TOCC has been inactive for more than three years.

Several local exhibitor organizations in key territories are said to have signified their willingness to ally themselves with the third national association and most of these already are affiliated with either Allied or the MPTOA.

Cullman Denies Being Asked

Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy theatre, has been mentioned from time to time as scheduled to head the new group, but Mr. Cullman repeatedly has denied that he has been approached to take this post.

Forces outside the industry will be the center of attack by the new group, it was said. Exhibitor protection from legislative bodies will be the primary aim of the principals heading the various districts. In some states, it was asserted, theatres are being taxed from 15 to 20 per cent of their grosses. In some instances, it was figured, exhibitors are being taxed in as many as 20 different ways.

When asked for a definite statement concerning plans, Mr. Brandt said:

"Ed Kuykendall and Abram F. Myers are just names. There is no national organization that functions for exhibitors.

"The need for a national organization is greater now than ever before, and I certainly would be interested in any plan that would give exhibitors over the entire country the assurance that a properly organized and smoothly functioning organization would give.

"Myers and Kuykendall, who have talked a lot and delivered nothing, should be supplanted by an individual from the outside who is big enough to handle national affairs.

Warns of "Outside" Enemies

"The industry is menaced by far greater enemies from without than from within by unnecessary, impractical, and, in many cases, abusive legislation.

"It is costing this industry millions which should be diverted into channels of usefulness. The exhibitor today has nowhere to turn for support on matters pressing him in his own state or because of federal acts.

"Who knows but that some day, and I hope soon, a messiah will come who will eventually lead theatre owners of America to that place in the sun to which they are rightfully entitled."

Bette Davis Not to Appeal

Bette Davis will not appeal from the recent decision of the King's Bench Court in London, which held that she may not perform in England for three years, or until the expiration of her existing contract with Warners. The actress will return to the United States and the Warner studio, planning to leave England on November 24th.

FEDERAL POLICE OUSTED

employee had, besides, a letter from the British consulate general similar in tenor to that of the American consulate.

Patrol Can't Read

On the high-road near their destination the car was stopped by a heavily armed patrol of three, each one of whom bore the red-sleeve band of Anarchy—not the national colors of Spain nor those of Cataluña. Mr. Iturralde and his companion were challenged and produced their documents. The patrol withdrew to "study" the papers. A violent argument ensued. The documents were scanned in a puzzled manner and the flags inspected. Then a volley rang out. The two messengers of mercy had paid with their lives the toll of ignorance, stupidity and officiousness. Of the three men in the patrol two could not read and the protests of the third had counted for naught.

When word of this outrage reached the two consulates general, despite the paralysis of authority and order that already had set in, President Companys assigned a contingent of the Guardia Civil, which corresponded to the State Police in this country, to seek out Mr. Jenkins and his wife and child and escort them into Barcelona. This was done in the face of supreme difficulties, for from the moment of the revolution's outbreak the picturesque Guardia Civil of old was outlawed as a police force and was disbanded and its functions taken over by a new organization known as the Guardia Nacional. President Companys expressed to the American and British consular representations his and his "government's" profoundest regrets and there is no doubt that they were sincerely meant, even if they had to be approved by the C.N.T.-F.A.I. "Comité Pro-Revolucionario." Mr. Companys, who is virtually idolized by Catalans and truly respected by Spaniards, is a man of proved integrity and honesty of purpose in his private life and was likewise in his official life prior to the moment when his government was seized by the C.N.T.-F.A.I. and U.G.T. combination. The place of Mr. Iturralde in the consulate general was taken by a younger brother, who arrived from America following his brother's death. The successor had just completed a course at William and Mary College in Virginia and is returning to this country this year for a postgraduate course in law at Columbia.

Hoodlums Made Sentries

The Comité Pro-Revolucionario, which, of course, is Pre-Revolutionary Committee in English, pretty nearly stamps the unit which staged the revolution in and around Barcelona and elsewhere in Spain as composed of "revolutionists," or "rebels," and it was so recognized when documents from the Generalidad, theretofore the seat of governmental authority in Cataluña, as well as the certifying letters from the two consulates general, had to be reinforced by the committee of "rebels," in order to safeguard the lives of men bent upon an errand of mercy and even then failed, because of the assignment to road-patrol inspection and sentry duty of men wholly unfitted for their task but who were loyal "rebels" of the C.N.T.-F.A.I.-U.G.T. ranks. Thus armed hoodlums became overnight patrols and sentries on the highways.

But the present regime at Barcelona and Madrid are extremely touchy on the slightest reference to the term "revolutionary" as applied to their "constituted government." Having succeeded, by a clever maneuver, in stigmatizing the actually constituted police forces of the republic as "rebels," the government of nation and region shies at any allusion to its activities as those of "revolutionists." Not long ago one of the newspaper correspondents was telephoning a news dispatch to his paper in London. At his side sat the official censor, a C.N.T.-F.A.I. delegate thoroughly conversant with English—for nothing may be communicated that has not the censor's approval and visa. The correspondent, in his prepared copy, had inadvertently employed the term "revolutionist" as applied to the C.N.T.-F.A.I. "Murder Bund" and the censor immediately seized his wrist.

"No se puede decir eso!" (You may not say that!) was his quiet command. He was required to amend the phrase to read "government forces," but the sudden change in phraseology did not have to be explained to the reporter taking down the story at the other end of the line.

It is not necessary here to dwell upon the outrages of murder, kidnaping, rapine, arson and pillage that took place on that fateful "Red Sunday" and on the days and particularly the nights of terror that followed. Nor upon the nightly "private executions" by firing-squads of red sleeve-banded ruffians, with the muzzles of their rifles two yards from their victims, as took place in the dark, coal-dusted Calle Villavilá alongside the electric-light plant of Canadian ownership and management. Nor upon those in the nearby Calle de la Sagrada Familia (Holy Family Street). Nor upon those on the heights of Tibidabo. Nor upon those gruesome cargoes of shot, mutilated and gasoline-soaked bodies of priest, nun, friar and civilian employer, capitalist and, all too frequently, of workman or clerk of humbler station who "stood in the way of the revolution" that were daily "delivered" to the Hospital Clinico and other mortuary repositories and there exhibited for any and all who might care to gape at them and to gasp at the havoc and completeness wrought by close-range rifle-fire—the first fruits of the new order of Liberty and Fraternity and—International Solidarity! That story has been told—and too often understated—by the daily press.

Manos Circuit Adds Seven

Mike Manos, president of Manos Enterprises, Latrobe, Pa., has announced the purchase of all holdings of the Indiana County Theatre Company, including the Paramount and Olympic in Latrobe, the lease on the Grand in the same city, the Richelieu, Blairsville; Casino and Arcadia, Vandergrift, and the Empire, Homer City.

William Gable Made Manager

William Gable has been named manager of the Dickenson theatre at Osage, Kansas, by Glen W. Dickenson, head of the circuit bearing his name. S. Mills has been placed in charge of the Uptown, Dickenson house at Parsons, Kansas.

Sparks Buys Two

The Van Croix theatres of Melbourne and Eau Gallie, Fla., owned and operated for several years by A. E. Van Croix, have been leased to E. J. Sparks. Mr. Van Croix will continue to manage the two houses.

Supply Company Formed

The Co-Operative Sound Service Supply Company has been incorporated in St. Louis by Clyde Weston, Vera West, Catherine Cook and Henry Dunca.

Child Patronage Seen in Danger

A potential danger to theatre box offices is seen by M. A. Silver, zone manager of Warner Brothers theatres in New York State, in the increasing appeal of radio to children. In a message to his managers urging campaigns designed to retain the patronage of children, Mr. Silver said in part:

"An alarming condition has come up recently to threaten the future of our business. As you know this industry is largely dependent upon the fact that with a large number of its patrons, movie-going is a fixed habit. That habit has been inculcated in the average movie-goer over a long period, beginning in most cases in the formative years of childhood.

"Showmen in the past encouraged child business with various kinds of Kiddie Clubs, special performances, serials, added attractions of interest to children, contests, prizes and giveaways.

"Today I fear too many of us have become indifferent to child business and are thus guilty of a neglect that might easily result in a new generation growing up without the movie habit. Particularly is this true since the radio has now, to a disturbing extent, usurped the place long held by the movies in the affection of the American child. Radio now offers the child a wide variety of serials, contests and premiums. Have you ever counted the number of programs directed at children?

"I call upon every manager to inaugurate a drive to increase child attendance. There are few, if any, of our theatres that cannot run some form of Kiddie Club. Most of you have had experience in handling them, and know just how to go about it. Some of you have long been doing outstanding work in the field of Kiddie activities, and all I can tell you is to keep up the good work. This matter is of far greater importance than the amount of money involved in increased receipts, so do not take it lightly."

Western Circuit Sells Houses

The Western Theatre Enterprises Circuit of Nebraska, started several months ago by W. N. Youngclaus and Lloyd Thompson, is disposing of its properties. The Roxie at Shelton, Neb., has been sold to E. L. Johnson of Montgomery City, Mo., and the Newman Grove house to W. C. Johnson of Friend, Neb.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Announcement the other afternoon of the filing of a notice of intention to wed, by James Stuart Blackton and Evangeline de Rippeteau, caused hardly a flutter in the editorial sanctums of the society editors of Los Angeles newspapers. Publication of the notice, even though minutely, however, reminded some of the old pioneers in motion pictures that Commodore Blackton, still young at 61, had a strong hand in putting the motion picture to work, after Thomas Alva Edison brought it out of the inventor's laboratory.

It was the Commodore, founder of the Vitagraph company with Albert Smith, who was the first to snatch at the patriotic opportunity of building the war fever of a motion picture audience. Mr. Blackton and Mr. Smith were making progress in motion picture pioneering as early as 1897 when the Spanish-American War was filling America's newspapers with tales of braggadocio and gallantry. The United States was enjoying its war with Spain.

Mr. Blackton caught step with the martial tune of the times and the motion picture business was sent marching on. From their little studio atop the Morse Building on Nassau Street, in New York, Blackton and Smith rushed up to the roof that April 21st, while the wires were still sizzling with the declaration of war, and made "Tearing Down the Spanish Flag."

It was a tremendous success and the pair profited considerably.

Cheers rocked the vaudeville houses and hats were tossed into the orchestra pits when the hand of righteous destiny reached out to tear down the Spanish banner. That hand was Blackton's.

The old school of Hollywood colossal and stupendous extravagance expressed itself in last Tuesday's Presidential election when the head of one of the major companies wagered $2,000 against $50,000 that Alfred Mossman Landon would not carry a single state of the 48, and $2,000 against $40,000 that Mr. Landon would not carry any more than two states. And he won $38,000!

"Senator" W. P. "Bernie" Bernfield, paunchy, cigar-smoking philosopher, is as much at home among the hedgerows of wisdom as amongst the cacti of humor and wit. It was Senator Bernfield who first discovered that wine stains, most difficult of all to eradicate, could be removed from the Sunday dinner table cloth merely by using a scissors around the affected place. The latest truism from the United Artists exploiteer of the Kansas City plains is the following dictum:

"An exploiteer (or an exhibitor, or film salesman) must be a 3-G-Man.

"How so," interlocuted his interlocutor, one Kenneth Force of the same Kansas City area.

"He must," brilliant-ized Bernie, "possess and dispense Glee, Glue and Guts."

Think it over—but not for long.

Exhibitors may expect another Martin Johnson wild animal "thriller" almost any day now. Martin and Osa Johnson are back on Broadway from Borneo with 150,000 feet of film and an abundance of material with which Fox Film's press agents can regale city editors, with tales of oysters that grow in trees, lizards that sing like canaries and snakes that glide through the air—only nine days from Borneo to Broadway.

The Associated Press reports from Moscow:

> Three executives who "went Hollywood" in Russia were sentenced to labor camps today. The men, former executives of the Eastern Film Trust, were convicted of frittering away State money for the production of movies.
> The manager was sentenced to serve four years, the director to two years and a bookkeeper to one. They were charged with purchasing a bad scenario, countenancing excessive production expense and with wasting money searching for talent.
> During their trial it was testified that out of 40 employees of the movie company two were Trotskyists, six thieves, one a murderer and two embezzlers.

Terry Ramsaye editorializes that, "Certainly the worst curse of the double billing policy is the flow of marquee jokes in linked titles." Graciously, he did not mention that this department is probably the worst offender in these parts. Our defense is that many of our trillions of readers find the pastime to their liking, and accordingly write to use on the slightest provocation. We are literally at the mercy of these humor-atarians, as witness the contribution from Fred Haskell, of Portland, Oregon, who observed on the marquee of the local Orpheum theatre, this dual-bill advertisement:

GIVE ME YOUR HEART
YOUR WIFE WILL NEVER KNOW

The same mail brought word from H. W. Blackstone, manager of the Regent theatre, Arlington, Mass., that his marquee for three days has carried the advice:

And on Saturday night the New Jersey State Prison advertised for the inmates:

The kid obviously was puzzled. "Say, you're a real judge, aren't you"" he asked.

"Why, of course."

"Then," rebuffed the kid, "you ought to know I'm not old enough to vote."

The progress to date in the compilation of a motion picture bibliography is so gratifying that the Federal Writers' Project of the WPA, New York, is extending its activities to include the writing of the mythology of these United States. Already they have happened across the reputation of one Mose Humphreys, a New York City character, who is reputed, among other feats, to have lifted horsecars from their tracks on the old Bowery and tossed them about in street fights. Too, they have found another mythical hero in the person of Paul Bunyan of the western lumberjack area. But he only caged an approaching cyclone, held it until the hot summer months and then let it escape bit by bit so as to keep the town cool with a constant moderate breeze.

Fred Astaire's recent scary jumpings for the edification of ship news reporters on an outgoing liner at a New York pier are causing a cycle of tall stories on daring escapades by normally undaring escapaders. Fred did a tap dance on a thin guard rail of a big ocean liner docked at her berth. It was a dangerous dido even by a precise and clear-headed expert. But it was topped by what struck Odd McIntyre as the most shuddery of all doings. A ship was bucking a raging sea some few years back. An inebriated fellow, undaunted by the lists caused by the mountainous seas, was capering on deck as others watched through windows. Suddenly to climax his antics he hopped up on the rail and began walking tight rope fashion, the entire port side, from post to post. Nothing happened, as is usual with "playful" inebriates.

The Spanish war cycle has finally arrived in motion pictures. Universal is doing "Alcazar," and Twentieth Century-Fox has taken on "The Siege of of the Alcazar."

Either company or both can get more drama out of the daily newspaper accounts than that attempted for the scenarios by any Hollywood writer. For instance, buried very inconspicuously the other day in a bottom-of-the-column back-page position of the Daily Mirror appeared the terse dispatch from Madrid that the Red Government had shot to death 14 of their own ace aviators because while in flight they accidentally dropped a couple of shells on their own Red troops at Olias de Rey, south of the city, in the belief they were attacking their rebel opponents.

Banjo on My Knee

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy Drama

This production looks like one of the most radical entertainment and commercial departures to have come to the screen in a long time. Based on a recent best selling novel, it is a unique combination of tense drama, eruptive romance, mirth laden comedy, explosive action, haunting music and surprising twists. In story content and accompanying production details, it promises to be something to pique public interest. Names values potentially are sufficiently strong, particularly considered from the standpoint of how personal talent lends itself to assigned roles.

"Banjo on My Knee" is a quaint, colorful story of the peculiar people who live on boats on the Mississippi river. The yarn is fast moving, very different in theme from anything being currently offered. It's about the son of a funny old river character who wants his boy married so that his line may be perpetuated. But before the wedding so much happens that is exciting, and all of it running the full gamut of entertainment in every phase, that adequate description is difficult. Sufficient to say, the picture is absolutely brand new.

Adapted from Harry Hamilton's novel by Nunnally Johnson, with music and lyrics by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson, the film is being directed by John Cromwell, maker of "To Mary, with Love."

In the principal roles it features a group of wellknown players, Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea and Walter Brennan, currently in "Come and Get it," Buddy Ebsen, Helen Westley, Walter Catlett, Anthony Martin, Katherine DeMille, Victor Kilian and Minna Gombell. Important supporting players are Spencer Charters, George Humbert, Hilda Vaughn, Cecil Watson and Louis Mason. Atmospheric music is provided by the Hall Johnson choir.

Beloved Enemy

(United Artists-Goldwyn)

Dramatic Romance

Unlike "The Informer," which started the series of Irish Rebellion stories, treating the subject mainly from a military and political angle, and the forthcoming "The Plough and the Stars," which is similarly atmosphered, "Beloved Enemy" retains all the danger menaced martial activity contingent upon the 1921 Easter Uprising, but approaches its subject from the romantic love interest viewpoint. In this story, which topically follows the historical record, an English girl betrays the leader of the Cause into danger. Growing to love him, despite the efforts of her father, Black and Tan commander in Dublin, she reveals the plan of the British to strike with the mailed fist if Ireland continues in its demand for independence. Two motives lead her to both actions, her love for the leader and a humane desire to see the centuries' long drama of persecution and carnage ended with Ireland established as a separate entity within the Dominions.

The production features Brian Aherne and Merle Oberon in the leading roles. Principal supports are Karen Morley, Jerome Cowan, David Niven and Henry Stephenson. Two veteran stars of the silent days, Jack Mulhall and Pat O'Malley, have important roles. Other familiar cast names are Granville Bates, Claude King, Theodore von Eltz, Wyndham Standing, Robert Strange, Lionel Pape and David Torrence.

A Samuel Goldwyn production, it can be anticipated that the picture will be embellished by the technique for which the producer has become noted through a series of outstanding attractions.

Smart Blonde

(Warner)

Dramatic Romance

Drama, comedy, romance, suspense laden thrill action and melodrama are the ingredients being included in this detective-newspaper woman mystery thriller, which will feature Barton MacLane and Glenda Farrell. Worth of the name value of this pair as an exploitation angle, especially in a production of this character, is supplemented by that of Winifred Shaw, Craig Reynolds, Jane Wyman, Joseph Crehan, Addison Richards, Charlotte Winters, David Carlyle, Tom Kennedy, John Sheehan, Max Wagner and George Lloyd, who compose the supporting cast.

The screen vehicle was adapted, from a novel by Frederick Nebel, by Don Ryan and Kenneth Gamet. Frank McDonald, who has met with considerable success in handling this company's secondary product, is the director.

Set off by uptodate production details, which set the topical nature of the yarn, Miss Farrell and MacLane combine to solve the mystery of a sensational murder. Their adventures in romance and drama, both of which have an anticipated comedy contrast, take them into dangerous fields wherein gangsters and politicians do their utmost to prevent the pair from attaining their legal and romantic objectives.

Of a style which in previous similar releases has demonstrated its popularity, particularly with mass audiences, "Smart Blonde" seems to have the name value, story content and production effects to arouse the interest of showmen and patrons.

Rio Grande Ranger

(Columbia)

Adventure, Drama, Romance

Again essaying an outdoor thrill action story, Larry Darmour has selected one that brings the Texas Ranger into conflict with cattle rustlers. Moving to that exciting quality in which man to man and mass conflicts are dominant, together with wild riding and its companionate shooting, the story also contains a romantic content.

Because rustlers are able to continue depredations in Texas by fleeing to their headquarters in a neighboring state that lacks similar police protection, Ranger Bob Allen, in disguise, joins the band, to learn their plans and concoct a way to lead them into Texas and effect their capture. Then romance interludes, and all does not go well for the hero. Revealed as a spy when seen conferring with his Ranger buddy, the pair are imprisoned as the desperadoes plan a drive on a cattle herd. In theatrical fashion the Ranger lures the outlaws away from their prey, saves the heroine and her small brother and leads the bandits into Texas, where they are captured.

The cast supporting Allen includes Iris Meredith, John Elliott, Paul Sutton, Hal Taliaferro, Buzzy Henry and Tom Landon in the principal roles. The story is an original screenplay by Jacques and Celia Jacard, adapted by Nate Gatzert, and Spencer Bennet is directing.

House of Secrets

(Chesterfield)

Mystery Melodrama

Quality of story content, plus worth of the featured names in the cast, seems to make this production one of more than passing interest to exhibitors. The motivation is terror-tinged drama and mystery. There is comparatively little comedy contrast as well as romantic love interest. Localed in England, presently timed, the story concerns a man who, seeking to claim the inheritance of his ancestral home, runs into amazing and fearsome experiences. With all the weird twists common to a terror drama included, the man has to fight his battle alone, aided only by a girl who is more afraid for him than she is of the dangers confronting both. The climax, unique and exciting, reveals that the reason government and police aid was denied was due to the fact that the British government had commissioned the central mystery figure in the story to develop an antidote for poison gas.

Based on Sydney Horler's novel, "Hawk's Nest," the story was adapted by John Krafft and is being directed by Roland Reed.

The regard which producer George R. Batcheller has for the piece is evidenced by the names he rounded up for the principal parts. Practically every one of them has been prominent in major pictures. Included are Leslie Fenton, Muriel Evans, Sidney Blackmer, Noel Madison, Syd Saylor and Ian MacLaren.

The Old Corral

(Republic)

Adventure, Drama, Romance

Though the featured male players in this production are established western players and most of the action takes place in the wild west, this is not a fundamental western story. Rather it is a gangster story in which the elements common to both, embellished by music, are blended. In the yarn New York gangsters have a girl night club entertainer on the spot. Following a mob murder, she flees to the wide open spaces. Befriended by a cowcountry sheriff, menaced by a cattle rustling night club owner of the eastern mobsters, with an interluded presentation of the recent celebration held in connection with the dedication of Boulder Dam, the girl and sheriff encounter many exciting experiences. The drama of these contrasted by music and comedy, the finale brings the hero and heroine into conflict with the combined eastern-western outlaw forces, which the sheriff defeats by turning a cattle stampede loose upon them.

The production is based on an original by Bernard McConville, with screen play by Sherman Lowe and Joseph Poland. Music presented by the hero and heroine was prepared by Fleming Allen and Oliver Drake. That sung by the Sons of the Pioneers, cowboy melodies, is original with them. Direction is credited to Joseph Kane.

Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette, fixtures in Republic outdoor action dramas, are featured. The newcoming girl lead, Hope Manning, is a product of the studio's talent school. She has been seen in minor roles in previous pictures. While this trio represents the most important names values, the supporting cast includes many new but several familiar names. Listed are Cornelius Keeft, Lon Chaney, Jr., John Bradford, Milburn Morante, Abe Eefton, Merrill McCormack, Charles Sullivan, Buddy Roosevelt and Lynton Brent. The Sons of the Pioneers, Frankie Marvin and Oscar and Elmer, familiar to listeners of West Coast radio programs, are included for specialty features as well as having legitimate parts in the running of the story.

Roaring Lead

(Republic)

Adventure, Romance, Drama

A typical western story has been selected for this episode in the adventures of the three mesquiteers, Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune. This time, the romantic adventurers aid a girl who is having trouble with cattle rustlers and officers of the Cattleman's Protective Association who are in league with the outlaws. While doing so, they also manage to insure the successful future of an orphan home which the girl is sponsoring. Supplementing the production action familiar to a western film, this one adds the presentation of a benefit show in which many members of Republic's talent school are given opportunity to demonstrate their talents as potential screen personalities.

A new girl, Christine Maple, is featured with the leads. A product of the talent school, the producers have much confidence in her ability to make the grade that leads to stardom.

The story used was adapted from a novel by William Colt MacDonald, adapted by Oliver Drake and Jack Natteford, both of whom, particularly Natteford, have a long list of western pictures to their credit. Mack V. Wright and Sam Newfield are collaborating as directors.

A group of popular western players, including Hooper Atchley, Yakima Canutt and George Cheseboro, are featured in support, and from the talent school come Mary Russell, Beverly Luff, Theodore and Katherine Frye and many juveniles from the Meglin Kiddies theatrical school.

They Wanted to Marry

(Radio)

Comedy Romance

Newspaper reporters have been glorified or ridiculed, depending upon the point of view, on the screen. Seldom has the cameraman, the fellow who has to get those newsy pictures, been given a break. In this, he will have his day in court, literally and actually, as several times the cameraman, harried both by his editor and those of whom he is ordered to make pictures, spends quite a bit of his time in the police station. While the motivation is comedy romance, in which there are plenty of ups and downs for the hero and the girl he has chosen as his own personal private property, many of the substantiating production effects are devoted to how cameramen get their pictures and the various devices they use to get them printed.

The story is an original by Darwin Teihlet and Larry Bachman. The screen play is by Paul Yawitz, onetime New York columnist and reporter, and Ethel Borden. Direction is credited to Lew Landers, maker of the current "Without Orders" and the forthcoming "Night Waitress."

Gordon Jones, first starred in "Night Waitress" and previously seen in "Don't Turn 'Em Loose," "We Who are About to Die" and "Walking on Air," is featured with Betty Furness. Other principal players are the veteran Henry Kolker and a new little girl artist, five year old Patsy Lee Parsons. The supporting cast is made up of fairly wellknown names, among them Frank M. Thomas, Anita Colby, Diana Gibson, Maxine Jennings, E. E. Clive, William Benedict, Edward Price and Alan Curtis.

Penrod and Sam

(Warner)

Juvenile Comedy Drama

Only the title, character names of the youthful players and author credit are similar in this production to the previously produced Booth Tarkington "Penrod and Sam." The story provided here, based on the Tarkington idea, and adapted by Lillie Hayward and Hugh Cummings, has been modernized and made decidedly different. Before it takes on a juvenile and senior G-man twist, the yarn devotes itself to the trouble into which Penrod has landed because of Rodney Bitts and the trouble the squabbling has caused their respective parents. In this phase the atmosphere is typically Tarkington.

Departing from this theme, Penrod and Sam become involved with gangsters who are being chased by G-men. The kids, emulating their elders, join in the case, only to be made prisoners by the mobsters. The youngsters contrive to be in the midst of a battle between police and mobsters, and when the outlaws are rounded up, Penrod's gang, to which Rodney has been made a welcome addition because of his heroism under fire, are given full credit and the reward for the capture.

The production features Billy Mauch, now in "Anthony Adverse," as Penrod, Harry Watson as Sam, Jackie Morrow as Rodney and Phillip Hurlic as Verman. Frank Craven and Spring Byington are Penrod's parents and Charles Halton is Rodney's father. Craig Reynolds is the leading gangster and Kenneth Harlan the top G-man. Other players, both youngsters and grownups, have but little screen identity.

The film is being directed by William McGann.

(Paramount)

Adventure Comedy

Something quite different in the western line seems to be coming up here, with a promise of unique interest creating angles. The story used is based upon Zane Grey's "Stairs of Sand." Consequently it can be expected that the production will be full of the entertaining ingredients that have made Grey popular as a novelist and provider of screen material. But as it brings a new, but by no means unknown, personality to the screen, it will do so in a markedly odd manner. Joe Cook, noted for a generation as the one man circus of numerous Broadway shows and countless vaudeville appearances, is the new player. He doesn't come riding into the production on a pinto, with .45's blazing. Instead he crashes into it atop the back of an elephant to end a hijacking rustler war. Thus it can be foreseen that comedy, rather than gun play, although there is plenty of that, should prove the production's most interesting feature.

As adapted the story is not one of those tongue-in-the-cheek affairs. It strikes a new path and is going all the way to provide something new while retaining the old values that mean so much to so many.

Practically all the supporting players are known qualities. There is Robert Cummings, Cook's pal, who shares the slight romantic twist with the aspiring newcomer, June Mantell. Larry Crabbe and John Miljan are the rival rustlers. The comedy angle gets another lift in the important part of Dave Chasen, remembered for his appearance in "Millions in the Air" as Benny Baker's stooge. Others prominent in the action are Marjorie Gateson, Fred Kohler, Sr., James Burtis, Richard Carle and little Billy Lee.

The screen play is by Robert Yost and Stuart Anthony, and James Hogan is the director.

Career Woman

(20th Century - Fox)

Drama

The story which is the substance of this production was suggested by a recently widely publicized case of a mountain girl who was alleged to have murdered her father following a merciless beating he had administered to her. Its drama concentrates on the activities of a pair of attorneys seeking to establish a sense of justice and fair dealing in the minds of hill-billy folk whose biased prejudgments are the result of lifelong medieval concepts of right and wrong. The romantic contrast allies a tyro Portia and a theatrical New York lawyer, who knows every trick in the trade, in fighting for the girl's life.

The story is a product of Gene Fowler's fertile dramatic imagination. Known for the authorship of such poignant novels as "The Great Mouthpiece" and "Shoe the Wild Mare," he also has participated in the preparation of many outstanding screen stories and plays. The adaptation is the work of Lamar Trotti, who did "Ramona." Direction is by Lewis Seiler.

Claire Trevor, currently in "15 Maiden Lane," "The Holy Lie" and "To Mary, with Love," and Michael Whelan, featured in "Sing Baby Sing," "White Fang" and "Poor Little Rich Girl," have been assigned to the lead roles. Isabel Jewell, of the cast of "Valiant Is the Word For Carrie," is the girl whose life and honor the principals combine to save. Principal supporting parts are in the hands of Eric Linden, Charles Middleton, Gene Lockhart, Guinn Williams and Frank McGlynn, Sr. Comedy, which contrasts the motivating drama and romance, is mainly in the hands of El Brendel, Sterling Holloway and Virginia Fields. Other players to be seen include Kathleen Lockhart, Edward Brophy, Charles Waldron, June Story, Lynne Berkeley and George Meeker.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Camera Test

Utilizing the Erpi sound analyser, operated by Don Loye of that company, members of the silent camera committee of the Academy Research Council met in all-night session Friday of last week at the MGM studios to test, as to frequency and relative loudness of noises, several new types of cameras.

MILLENIUM FOR RADIO LISTENERS

Walter O'Keefe, radio comedian, is reported sponsoring establishment of a clearing house for radio gags. Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny are reported approving the plan, the object of which is to eliminate duplication and thus bring about a millenium for radio listeners. Nobody is reported in line for appointment as co-ordinator, but everybody is reported, on unquestionable authority, in hearty accord with the idea.

Gagster O'Keefe insists it's not a gag.

Production

Pictures came out of the production mill in avalanche style during the last week of October as fourteen films were completed. With "Camille," "Maid of Salem," "Banjo on My Knee" and "Reunion" in the grist, the group contains quite a few important pictures to take the places of the season's first show window attraction. In the same period work commenced on eight productions, one of which is a restarter.

With four, Columbia led the big parade of finished pictures. Leading players in "Depths Below," which Erle Kenton directed, are Richard Dix, Chester Morris and Dolores Del Rio. Support includes Ward Bond, Pierre Watkins, Marc Lawrence and Ron Rowan. "Countefeit Lady," original title of which was "Lady of New York," features Ralph Bellamy, Joan Perry and Douglas Dumbrille with John Gallaudet, Gene Morgan, Henry Mollison, John Piccori, Max Hoffman, Jr., Wade Boteler, Phillip Ahn, Richard Terry, Joe Twerp, George Pearce and Ed LeSaint. "Help Wanted, Female," which also had a previous label, "Safari In Paradise," finished. Jean Arthur and George Brent are starred. Other name players listed are Lionel Stander, Reginald Denny, Raymond Walburn, Charles Halton, Dorothea Kent and Ruth Donnelly. Alfred Green directed. The fourth picture, "Rio Grande Ranger," a Larry Darmour production, features Robert Allen, Iris Meredith (formerly Shunn), John Elliott, Paul Sutton and Hal Taliaferro. Spencer Bennet directed.

Republic checked in three pictures. Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette and Hope Manning are featured in "The Old Corrall." Support includes Cornelius Keefe, Lon Chaney, Jr., John Bradford, Milburn Morante, Abe Lefton, Merrill McCormick, Charles Sullivan, Buddy Roosevelt and Frankie Marvin. Joseph Kane directed. The "three mesquiteers," Robert Livingstone, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune, will be seen in "Roaring Lead," supported by Christine Maple, Hooper Atchley, Yakima Canutt, George Chesebro, Tommy Bupp, Mary Russell, Beverly Luff and Theodore and Ted Frye. Mack Wright and Sam Newfield collaborated on direction. The cast of "Happy Go Lucky" includes Phil Regan, Evelyn Venable, William Newell, Karl Hackett, Guy Kingsford, Carleton Young, Tony Pawley, Stanley Andrews, Claude King, Jed Prouty and Howard Brooks. Aubrey Scotto directed.

Two pictures finished at Paramount. The leading member of the duo is "Maid of Salem." An important picture, it presents a large and impressive cast. Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray are the leads. Others featured are Harvey Stephens, Gale Sondergaard, Louise Dresser, Halliwell Hobbs, Edward Ellis, Beulah Bondi, Lucy Beaumont, Donald Meek, E. E. Clive, Zeffie Tilbury, Tom Ricketts, Bonita Granville, Bennie Bartlett, Virginia Weidler, Sterling Holloway, Brandon Hurst and Russell Simpson. Frank Lloyd produced and directed. The companion feature is "Arizona Mahoney." One-man-show Joe Cook is starred with Robert Cummings, June Martell, Larry Crabbe, Marjorie Gateson, John Miljan, Fred Kohler, Sr., Dave Chasen, James Burtis, Richard Carle and Billy Lee. James Hogan directed.

Both Twentieth Century-Fox films loom as unusual attractions. "Reunion" features the Dionne quintuplets. Many of the "Country Doctor" cast will again be seen as the player roster lists Jean Hersholt, Rochelle Hudson, Helen Vinson, Slim Summerville, Robert Kent, Dorothy Peterson, John Qualen, Alan Dinehart, J. Edmond Bromberg, Tom Moore, George Ernest, Katherine Alexander, Sara Haden, Montague Love, Esther Ralston, Hattie McDaniel, Julius Tannen, George Chandler and Edward McWade. Norman Taurog directed. "Banjo on My Knee," which has the ear marks in story content and cast of being a real surprise, features Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea and Walter Brennan.

"Penrod and Sam" was finished at Warner. A modernized Booth Tarkington story, it will present Billy Mauch, Harry Watson, Jackie Morrow, Phillip Hurlick, Billy Wolfstone, Jerry Maden, Frank Craven, Spring Byington, Charles Halton and others.

Radio completed "Criminal Lawyer." Lee Tracy and Margot Grahame are teamed in the leads. Support includes Eduardo Ciannelli, Betty Lawford, Erick Rhodes, Frank M. Thomas, Theodore von Eltz, Claire McDowell, Wilfred Lucas, Lita Chevret and Francis McDonald. Christy Cabanne directed.

Last of the completed contingent and probably as important as any is "Camille." Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor are starred, with Lionel Barrymore and Lenore Ulric.

New production was divided between seven studios with Universal being the only one starting two films. With Lewis R. Foster and Milton Carruth collaborating on direction, "Blonde Dynamite" went in the work. Featured names in the cast are Tala Birell, Ceasar Romero, Walter Pidgeon, Chic Sale and Warren Hymer. Players to be seen in "Treve" are Noah Beery, Jr., Charles Winninger, Barbara Reed, Hobart Cavanaugh, Alma Kruger and Julian Rivero. Lewis D. Collins is directing.

Warner started "Lords of the Land," with Jean Muir, Barton MacLane, Robert Barrat and James Robins assigned to the leading roles. Nick Grinde is listed as director.

"Beware of Ladies" got under way at Republic. Under Irving Pichel's direction, it will present Donald Cook, Judith Allen, George Meeker, Russell Hopton, William Newell, Goodie Montgomery, Robert Strange, Josephine Whittell and Phil Dunham.

Douglas MacLean makes his bow as a Grand National producer with James Cagney's first starring picture for the new company, "Great Guy."

A topical sports newspaper story, "Peach Edition," got the starting gun at Twentieth Century-Fox. It will feature Rochelle Hudson, Michael Whalen, Virginia Field, Thomas Beck, Alan Dinehart, George Hassell and Douglas Fowley. Allan Dwan won the directorship assignment.

Many changes having been effected in story content, cast assignments and production detail, "Maytime" was re-started at MGM. Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, John Barrymore and Virginia Reid are currently listed in the cast. Several prominent additions are to be made. Robert Z. Leonard is directing.

14 THEATRE BOMBINGS BRING POLICE RAIDS

37 Arrested at IATSE Local's Headquarters Questioned on Attacks on Brandt Houses

Tear gas and stench bombings of motion picture theatres while in operation hit a new high last weekend when eight New York and Brooklyn houses of the independent Harry Brandt circuit were plunged into confusion during a mid-evening performance, causing injuries to 45 who were treated by ambulance surgeons on the scene and five who were removed to hospitals.

Police immediately raided the union headquarters in New York of Local 306 of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators, carting away 37 prisoners and almost filling a police van with books and documents of the projectionists' local. A grand jury inquiry loomed, as Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia, then campaigning in Chicago for President Roosevelt, wired orders to Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine to assign 150 patrolmen to guard against further outrages.

A second series of bombings on Monday struck New York's Globe, Central, Times Square, Liberty, Audubon and Park theatres, seriously injuring several in the audience and causing Mayor La Guardia to take personal charge of the investigation.

Local 306 denied that any of the perpetrators were members.

Several Operated by Brandt

At exactly nine o'clock, at the height of the evening rush, the bombs exploded simultaneously in the Globe, Times, Park, Central, Liberty, Audubon, Colony, Roosevelt and Sanders theatres, driving the patrons into the streets, legs cut by the bursting of the glass containers of the chemicals. The fact that the explosions came at one time convinced police that they were the work of one organization.

Several of the houses bombed were operated by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, which employs operators of the Allied Motion Picture Operators' Union, of which Mr. Brandt is also head. Allied is not a member of the American Federation of Labor, as is Local 306, and this has been one of the chief differences between the organizations.

Local's Offices Raided

Fourteen detectives, led by Lieutenant James Pyke, of the Bomb and Forgery Squad, the following night raided the offices of Local 306, at 251 West Forty-second street, taking 30 men and seven women to police headquarters for questioning. The women were released a few minutes later, but the 30 men were detained until after midnight for questioning, first by Commissioner Valentine and later by Assistant Chief Inspector John A. Lyons. They were permitted to communicate with no one and were asked, among other things, whether they were citizens, whether they were working and whether they had paid their income tax. Every article they had in their pockets, including wallets, jewelry and papers, was taken from them, but later everything was returned, except their papers. The police would make no statement, and even Matthew M. Levy, attorney for the union, obtained little satisfaction when he went to headquarters.

The position of Local 306 in the matter was explained Monday in the following statement:

"The Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union Local 306, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has repeatedly made efforts to absorb the two rump 'unions' now in the field and to end labor trouble in the moving picture industry. But every effort has been defeated, just as peace was within sight. . . .

"The two rump 'unions' together control approximately 150 theatres in New York City. Of these 150, Allied controls about 100 theatres, all affiliated with the Independent Theatre Owners' Association. Local 306 men are employed in the others. The membership of Local 306 is over 1,800 men. The other two 'unions' have a total membership of approximately 500.

Cites Disrupted Negotiations

"It cannot be a coincidence that every attempt to achieve peace and stabilization in this industry has been defeated just as we were about to sign contracts that would have created a single union in this field, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. . . .

"We were on the verge of absorbing the Empire Union after lengthy and wearisome negotiations when the employers went into court and secured an injunction forbidding the two organizations to unite. Months of effort and time went for nothing. This injunction is declared by the employers to be still in effect.

"The situation was different where Allied was concerned. We were dealing with a company union, the creature of Harry Brandt; the head of the Non-Union exhibitors. . . .

". . . Last Thursday afternoon George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, who is also a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, took part in the conference with Mr. Brandt, and approved of the contract we were about to sign. The executive board of Local 306 last Tuesday had already approved in advance the general outline of the proposed settlement. Even Harry Brandt appeared ready to sign. Everything pointed to permanent peace.

"Then came this outrage in the eight theatres last Thursday evening, and once again our efforts for peace and unity were ruined. An accident? Never! This was a deliberate attempt by those opposed to our efforts for peace to prevent success.

"At the present time we are being sued by Harry Brandt and his associates for $750,000 for similar offenses alleged to have been committed in the past. These cases are now in the hands of our attorney, Mr. Levy. Is it reasonable to suppose that Local 306 would voluntarily have subjected itself to further suits of this nature by actions as are alleged against us?

"Generally speaking, violence in labor disputes has been the weapon of the employers. If you don't believe this take a look at the testimony before the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee. As for this particular incident, it might have been the work of disgruntled elements in the Allied Union which thrived on trouble; it could also be the work of members of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association who were afraid that they would have to pay the men a decent wage scale if an agreement was signed with Local 306.

"Whoever the perpetrators were they did not come from Local 306. The work of months of negotiations has been ruined and we must start all over again."

McCarthy With National; Heads Statistical Unit

Walter McCarthy, until recently with Fox West Coast under Charles Skouras, has been named head of a new film statistical department for all the Fox-Skouras National Theatres units. He is making his headquarters at the company's office at Twentieth Century-Fox.

Heretofore, all theatre divisions of National had been compiling their own statistical data. Under the new arrangement, the material is sent to New York and handled by Mr. McCarthy.

Theatre Trailer Appointments

Five new territorial appointments have been made by Walter Frudenberger, general sales manager of Theatre Trailer Service. Edwin Wheeler will represent the company in Baltimore and Washington, Charles E. Goodwin, Buffalo; F. M. Sanford, Dallas; F. F. Goodrow, New Orleans, and Fred Young has been named district manager in charge of Charlotte and Atlanta.

New Will Rogers Memorial

The Beverly Hills Post of the American Legion in Hollywood, and members of political, social and motion picture groups have banded together for the purpose of erecting a community center which will be a memorial to Will Rogers, who made his home in Beverly Hills.

Dance Planned by Salesman, Inc.

Motion Picture Salesman, Inc., is planning an annual dinner and ball for Thansgiving Eve at the Hotel Astor, New York. It has been announced that the membership of the group has increased from 50 to 125 during the last six months. Exhibitors are now eligible for membership.

Spanish Films Announced

Francois B. de Valdes has organized Hispano Films in Hollywood for the production of three Spanish features and six one-reel shorts to be distributed by Roman Rebush of Kinotrade. Senor de Valdes will produce and direct the pictures which will be made at the International Studios, Hollywood.

Producer Opens Office

The Dramatic Research and Management Association, Inc., producers of films and plays, has opened headquarters in the RCA Building, Rockefeller Center, New York. D. M. Stoner is president and I. C. Franklin, vice-president.

Logan Production Executive

Joshua Logan, New York stage director, has been signed as production executive by Walter Wanger. He will begin work immediately on "You Only Live Once," starring Henry Fonda and Sylvia Sidney.

Named Film Council Head

Mrs. Joseph E. Friend has been elected president of the Louisiana Council for Motion Pictures, succeeding Mrs. A. S. Tucker. Mrs. Tucker has been named advisory vice-president of the council and Mrs. Marie Heider has been elected to the board.

Leserman Rejoins Warners; Peskay At Grand National

Changes in the top ranks of distribution personnel this week returned Carl Leserman to Warners, as assistant to General Manager Gradwell Sears, and the succession of Edward J. Peskay, independent exhibitor, to Mr. Leserman's former general sales managership at Grand National. Too, Grand National appointed Harry Allan its Canadian representative, Sol Edwards, its Eastern sales manager, and James Winn as Western sales manager.

Mr. Peskay also succeeds Mr. Leserman as a member of the Grand National board of directors. The move reunites Mr. Alperson and Mr. Peskay in a business venture as the former was chief film buyer for Skouras during Mr. Peskay's association with the circuit. Mr. Peskay is expected to continue operating Edward J. Peskay Enterprises, his theatre company, which has houses in Stamford, Greenwich, Conn.; Cornwall, N. Y., and other spots in the New York metropolitan area.

Mr. Leserman resigned from his Warner post six months ago to become associated with Mr. Alperson in the organization of Grand National, which the latter heads. At the time of his departure from Warners, Mr. Lesserman was assistant to Mr. Sears, then distribution head for the South and West. He was previously with the company at its Chicago branch.

The appointment of Mr. Allan as Grand National's Canadian representative will take effect immediately. Mr. Allan, who left New York recently, will first go to Toronto to set up quarters. He will then leave on a tour of Canada to set up distribution centers.

After getting offices furnished and ready for business the Grand National exchange in Chicago was notified to vacate headquarters in the Warner Building. No reason for the change in plans was given and Earl Silverman of the Chicago office is now looking for a new location. He expects to announce the new address by November 1.

Mr. Edwards was sales manager for Educational and World Wide for seven years before coming to Grand National. He was also associated with United Artists and Universal. Mr. Winn was formerly mid-west district manager for Warner Brothers prior to his Grand National appointment.

Harold Hurley Promoted

Harold Hurley has been named assistant managing director of Paramount production under William LeBaron. Mr. Hurley was formerly an associate producer.

Appointed Costume Head

Edward Lambert has been signed as chief of the costume department of Selznick International. Helen Wilson, formerly with RKO, has been appointed costume buyer.

Specialty Pictures, Inc., exchange formed by Roy Heffener in Boston, will move early next month into the offices now occupied by Grand National.

ORCHESTRAS EXEMPT FROM SECURITY TAX

Exhibitors May Reduce Payments by Applying Principles Set for Hotel Musicians

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Exhibitors employing orchestras in their theatres may reduce the amounts of tax they must pay under the payroll-tax provisions of the federal social security act, by applying principles laid down this week by the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue with respect to orchestras in hotels.

Under a ruling of the bureau, a hotel may be relieved of the payroll tax on its musicians if it contracts with an orchestra leader or other person to provide music, paying a lump sum weekly or monthly for the service, and the contractor is entirely responsible for the orchestra.

"The M Company contracted with A for the services of the A Orchestra, composed of ten men who receive their pay from A," it was explained in the ruling. "He has the right to hire, control and discharge the individuals who work under him and receives from the M Company a weekly check in a lump sum for the services of the men and himself.

"Under the circumstances stated, it is held that A is an independent contractor and neither he nor the musicians hired by him for the orchestra are employees of the M Company for the purpose of the tax imposed by Title IX of the Social Security Act."

"A," however, the ruling continued, may be an "employer" under the terms of the law if he employs eight or more persons.

The bureau also has issued a ruling with respect to cases where an employer takes care of the family of a deceased employee by making payments to his widow, holding that such payments are not wages and so are not subject to tax.

An amount equivalent to the salary of a deceased employee which is paid to his widow for any period after the death of the employee, over and above any amount which may have been due the employee at the time of his death, and for which the widow renders no services, is held not to be remuneration for employment.

Payments made by an employer equivalent to the difference between the normal wages of employees who are absent from work while serving in a State National Guard and the amounts received from the state for such services, constitute wages within the meaning of the act and are taxable.

SEC Reports on Film Activities

The acquisition on September 14th of 7,890 shares of Loew's common stock by J. Robert Rubin and the sale the same day of 7,800 shares was disclosed this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its semi-monthly report of the trading activities of corporation officers and directors. On September 25, the report showed, Mr. Rubin acquired a further 200 shares, increasing his holdings during the month by 290 shares to a total of 3,090 shares. At the close of the month Mr. Rubin's holding company was shown to have 350 shares of Loew's $6.50 cumulative preferred.

Also filed with the commission was a report by James E. MacPherson, showing the disposition in September of 3,700 shares of Consolidated Film Industries common stock, apparently his entire holdings of that class, and the acquistion of 1,400 shares of $2 cumulative participating preferred. Disposition of 4,000 shares of $1 par common stock of Grand National Films was reported by Edward L. Alperson, who at the close of the month still held 22,546 shares, while a report on International Cinema showed that Regan Day, Inc., held 240,000 shares of common.

Belated reports covering several months were filed by officers and directors of Twentieth Century-Fox. An August report by Chase National Bank disclosed that it sold 5,946 shares of common under an escrow agreement and held at the close of the month 381,431 shares, and has sold, also under an escrow agreement, 11,892 shares of $1.50 cumulative preferred, of which it held 762,862 shares at the close of the month. March, 1936, reports showed that Felix A. Jenkins held one share of common, and that A. R. Jenkins, his wife, acquired 20 shares of $1.50 preferred, while William C. Michel acquired 88 shares of common and 176 shares of the preferred.

Cameo Takes Weiss-Mintz Serials

PASSES ARE ADVISED FOR BLIND CHILDREN

Following the action of Wesley and R. R. Booth, who own the Paramount and Booth theatres in Nebraska City, Neb., allowing pupils at the Nebraska School for the Blind to attend at least one show a week free, letters are now being sent to the managers of 169 theatres near all the schools for the blind in the United States suggesting they follow the custom of the Nebraska City managers. Cooperating with the Booths in seeking extension of their plan is Regina Molseed, secretary of the Omaha Film Board of Trade.

The Booths have found that both the near-blind and the totally blind pupils at the school enjoy motion pictures. Some are able to distinguish the action by sitting in close, but others have to follow the dialogue.

Colombia Prohibits Posters

SELZNICK INTERNATIONAL

MARLENE DIETRICH
CHARLES BOYER

in The GARDEN

with BASIL RATHBONE • TILLY LOSCH • C. AUBREY

From the book by Robert Hichens

IN TECH

"Selznick International's 'Garden of Allah' in Technicolor, with Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer, was enthusiastically received at a week-end preview. It is regarded as the finest color effort thus far. Producers of previous films in color, due to preoccupation with the new medium, have neglected story, performance and sound. Here no division is neglected and the color approaches perfection."
—N. Y. Times, Hollywood Notes

"Selznick's 'Allah' production of beauty, artistry, charm. Artistically the most beautiful and atmospherically compelling picture ever made. Its use of color to enhance mood and incident goes considerably beyond anything hitherto attempted . . . will win wide and hearty praise. Strong portrayals from Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer. It is, at last, a part worthy of her. Richard Boleslawski's direction is masterful." —Hollywood Reporter

"Superb in its production qualities and emotionally arresting, with the drama enhanced by the most discriminating use of Technicolor thus far, 'The Garden of Allah' comes to the screen as entertainment of highest appeal and sturdy box-office calibre . . . Boyer and Dietrich are seen at their best. Dietrich gives the most persuasively human performance of her career." —Daily Variety

"'The Garden of Allah' is the greatest Technicolor picture ever made. This beautiful production will prove to be a sure fire box-office sensation. Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer give the greatest performances of their entire career. David O. Selznick has produced another mighty hit." —Lloyd Pantages

"By far the best color picture to date, 'The Garden of Allah' for sheer beauty is unsurpassed, and the greatest beauty of these is Dietrich."
—Virginia Wood, Screenland Magazine

"A true symphony in color . . . Selznick International gains the record for the furthest advance in application of the varied hues . . . splendidly chosen for her beauty in the medium is Marlene Dietrich, who becomes a pace maker for sheer radiance of presence, and who has never appeared to such advantage in any picture. An acting triumph is won by Charles Boyer. A great accomplishment for Richard Boleslawski, as director." —Los Angeles Times

"The finest drama of the year and one of producer David O. Selznick's greatest. The most beautiful picture ever made, with the finest performances in the careers of Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer. La Dietrich takes her place among the greatest beauties of history."
—E. J. Smithson, Movie Classic Magazine

"'The Garden of Allah' shows how close we are to the time when all pictures will be made in color. I enjoyed 'The Garden of Allah' tremendously. Marlene Dietrich is radiantly beautiful." —Paul Harrison-N. E. A.

"It is the most superbly, subtly artistic production I have ever seen, with an added importance because it sets a new standard for color on the screen." —Reha, Screen Play Magazine

"'The Garden of Allah' is brilliantly done, the best Technicolor picture so far. It is an exceptionally outstanding drama that will appeal to everybody."
—Leo Townsend, Modern Screen Magazine

"'The Garden of Allah' tells a powerful, penetrating story of immutable spiritual allegiance in conflict with predestined human love. It is produced on a lavish scale with expert Technicolor application making each frame a beautiful picture." —Motion Picture Daily

JAPANESE CENSORS TIGHTEN REINS; ATTENDANCE TAX IS ELIMINATED

Joint Censorship System Is Established; Two American Pictures and One Japanese Film Are Turned Down

Substitution of Profit Tax for Admission Levy Cheers Exhibitors, but Local Units May Bring It Back

by H. TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

The Home Office of Japan, which has gone in for rigid enforcement of national cinema control, now is operating a "joint censorship" system.

The system was set up at an inter-office conference, the attendants including several high officials, among them Minister Ushio, Vice-ministers Yuzawa and Nabeshima, Councillor Kimotsuki, Director Kayaba of the Police Bureau.

The purpose of this conference was to establish an airtight system of censorship of recently imported foreign pictures, which, those officials said, were likely to injure our national spirit because of their low and frivolous taste.

Commissioner Tatebayashi of the Police Bureau was appointed chief censor.

The feature of the new "joint censorship" method is that a picture shall be censored first by all the designated censors in charge before final permission is granted or a ban proclaimed. In the joint censorship they are reported to adhere rigidly to the principle that importation be barred to any pictures (1) divulging the interior of the royal palace, (2) featuring the military in comic cinematization, and (3) having too many scenes of suggestive kissing.

Pictures recently rejected include two American pictures and one Japanese: Warner's "Sons O' Guns," Columbia's "The King Steps Out" and PCL's "Responsibility of the Kiss."

Earlier, "Things to Come" was about to feel the ax but finally it was passed just a day before it was released at Taisho-Kan and Nippon Gekijo of this city. Paramount's "Princess Comes Across" also was on the brink but the censors passed it after additional cutting. Hibiya Eiga Gekijo, which was to have presented this Paramount picture for first-run release, had to change it for "Rosita" to cover the program, as the permit came two days after the scheduled premiere date.

Warner's "Sons O' Guns," booked into Nippon Gekijo, was replaced by Columbia's "Counterfeit." For "Responsibility of the Kiss," PCL substituted "Haha Nareba Koso."

Thus the unexpected bans by the censors have greatly perplexed the distributors because of the setbacks in their publicity arrangements, not to mention the loss of money. Columbia was the greatest loser, as its "The King Steps Out" has generally been expected to become the biggest box office hit for this autumn season.

"Sons O' Guns" was barred because of having scenes contrary to the military discipline of Japan, such as a soldier acting insultingly toward his superior, although the picture is set aboard an American warship. As for "The King Steps Out," the ban was because the picture featured a love story in the royal household. Columbia's Japan Office tried to overcome the objection with superimposed titles in place of the dialogue, but had to take it down as there was no way to alter the story itself.

Times have changed in Japan. There were occasions when some pictures resembling in story those recently banned had passed the censorship, but the new principle is to lay stress upon the theme rather than scenes.

Commissioner Tatebayashi, the newly appointed chief censor, on a visit from three Japanese managers of foreign film distributing companies, is quoted as having issued this warning:

"The Home Office hereafter will never hesitate to eliminate pictures whose stories include themes which have bearings upon the royal family or deride the Japanese military and the nation."

As things now stand, distributors, according to the censors' suggestion, should bring pictures to the censor's office at least ten days before they are supposed to be released at theatres, so that the censors may make a thorough inspection, thus incurring as little inconvenience as possible.

Yet while the censorship lines have been tightened, foreign pictures shown at first and second-run theatres at Tokyo have been drawing particularly well as compared with domestic pictures. Even the three months of this summer grosses stood up on foreign pictures. Throughout September American product was particularly well received, with such offerings as "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Country Doctor," "Till We Meet Again" and "Moon's Our Home" in the first week. The first-runs of the Shochiku and Takarazuka circuits showed as high grosses as in the good season of spring. The second week continued high, with "Things to Come," "La Bandera," "These Three," "Ex-Mrs. Bradford" and "Sylvia Scarlett." In the third and fourth weeks, both circuits showed as good results with such product as "Rosita," "Forgotten Faces," "Counterfeit," "Robin Hood of El Dorado" and "A Message to Garcia."

American pictures are still in the ascendancy in this country, being released at the ratio of nine U. S. films to one European.

Admission Tax Dropped

The Hirota Cabinet has approved the taxation increase and reform plan of Dr. E. Baba, minister of finance.

The Government will create four new taxes and effect a broad increase in various existing taxes, aiming at an increase of 200,000,000 yen in annual tax receipts for the first year and 290,000,000 yen for normal years.

The Government will abolish several items of local taxes. Particularly as the reform includes abolition and correction of various items of local miscellaneous taxes, which include the show tax, it is generally considered acceptable by our exhibitors.

The minimum taxable amount of business profits shall be raised from the existing 400 to 600 yen.

The business profit tax (including surtax) on corporations shall be raised by about 10 per cent.

Rates shall be lowered for individual's net profits below 1,000 yen, but they will be increased where the net exceeds 3,000 yen.

It was decided at first that the business profit tax which took the place of show tax might be levied only on corporations, but now it is to cover individuals. The rates of the new assessment effective April, next year, on the reformed basis, are as follows:

To corporations: Y34 against Y1,000 of annual net profits;

To individuals: Y26 against annual net profits above Y1,000;

To individuals: Y22 against annual net profits below Y1,000.

Despite this easing of the tax burden exhibitors are nervous as to whether a return to an attendance tax would come if the new taxes prove insufficient. The ministerial authorities of finance and of the interior have been reported to be disposed to allow the local governments to establish taxes on film attendance. At a conference at Toyo-Ken, Tokyo, under the auspices of the Japan Society of Theatres and the All Japan Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, suggestions were sought for a counterplan whereby to avert any such tax.

R. Mishima, director of the Japan Society of Theatres, gave a detailed report of the course of the show-tax abolition movement, while K. Mayeda, M. P. suggested that both ministries, interior and finance, had been inclined to allow the local governments to establish an attendance tax.

FILM WORKERS NIP MEXICAN REBELLION

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico

Cinematographic workers became sleuths and exposed a unique sedition plot when unionized Mexican film employees helped the government to crush slick rebellious propaganda.

The plot was being furthered by the use of Bank of Mexico bank notes. On the billets were scribbled with pencil or pen or typewritten words, phrases and figures that gave a subtle idea of the plotters' work.

The picture men were officially thanked for their alertness.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

Eight for BIP

Working to a schedule which will entail a new picture going on to the floor at Elstree every week for the next two months, Walter Mycroft, director of productions of British International Pictures, plans to complete eight pictures before the end of December.

Already on the floor are "Sensation," screen version of "Murder Gang," with John Lodge, Diana Churchill, Francis Lister and Jerry Verno, and "The Dominant Sex," which Herbert Brenon is directing with Romney Brent, Carol Goodner, Phillips Holmes and Diana Churchill, who repeats her stage role in the film. Brent has been playing opposite Elisabeth Bergner in "Dreaming Lips," and at the same time in the West End stage production, "Three Men on a Horse."

Next on the floor will be "Aren't Men Beasts," a current London theatrical success. Robertson Hare will play for the film his leading part in the stage farce, but the director and supporting cast are still to be announced.

Another stage buy by BIP is the London Hippodrome musical comedy, "Please Teacher," which will be filmed with Bobbie Howes, Wylie Watson, Vera Pearce and Bertha Belmore of the original cast.

"Bulldog Drummond at Bay" will be another vehicle for John Lodge, and Gertrude Michael is expected from New York for the woman lead.

Also on the BIP schedule are "The Norwich Victims," a mystery thriller for which Otto Kruger is expected to come over, "Glamorous Night," from an Ivor Novello play which broke even "Cavalcade" records at Drury Lane, and a spectacular musical, as yet untitled, based on a wireless revue, "The Silver Spoon," and introducing "mike" favorites of America, England and the Continent.

Africa in London

For the Gaumont-British production of "King Solomon's Mines" at Shepherd's Bush, the experts of the property department have temporarily "gone native," and produced hundreds of African huts by methods exactly following black precedents in the art and craft of reed-weaving. Sound stage number four is now known as the Beehive, from the appearance of these primitive homes in a set reconstructing a jungle village.

More local color, using the word in its most literal sense, is provided by various native members of the cast whose claim to celebrity is more than skindeep. E. I. Ekpenyon, for instance, is the author of a standard textbook on Eftik and has been coaching Paul Robeson in that tongue. Toto Ware is the grizzled Negro who made a hit in "Sanders of the River."

SIDNEY R. KENT, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Mrs. Kent arrived in New York Monday from London, aboard the Queen Mary. Mr. Kent had been in England on the Gaumont British negotiations, as reported on page 78.

"King Solomon's Mines" is being directed by Robert Stevenson, with Glenn MacWilliams at the camera. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Anne Lee and John Loder are the leading white players in the Sir Rider Haggard story.

Welcomes Donat

Robert Donat's first scene for "Knight without Armor" at Denham brought him opposite Marlene Dietrich, who for several weeks has carried on without a leading man while Donat has lain in a specially air-conditioned nursing home bedroom. The episode shows Donat as a Russian Red Army commissar, escorting the beautiful refugee aristocrat, in peasant garb, to imprisonment in Petrograd. It opens before a Denham reconstruction of one of those delightful Russian country villas since converted into Soviet creches or the like. Donat, nicknamed "Knight without Asthma" since his escape from the doctors, is living within easy reach of the studio and still finds special daily treatment necessary to keep him fit for the camera.

On the conclusion of "Rembrandt," last personal direction of Alexander Korda, it is said, London Films have shipped back to Holland the several almost priceless pictures by the master which were collected by the Society of Dutch Art Dealers for use in the film. The treasures included Rembrandt's portrait of Henrickje. They were under day and night guard during their stay in England and their insurances made those of the most highly paid stars look insignificant.

In another Denham stage Victor Saville has been working in a full-size replica of a German submarine for "Dark Journey." Sections of a tramp steamer were also used in scenes showing the methods by which "Q Ships," or camouflaged merchant vessels, trapped the "U" boats. Used as extras were many ex-seamen who actually sailed on the mystery ships, and were able to provide much valuable information about actual wartime procedure.

Vivien Leigh, who took up the lead in "Dark Journey" immediately after completing her part in "Fire Over England," is on holiday in Austria previous to playing in "Storm in a Teacup," which starts at Denham next week.

GB TO STAND PAT ON 24 FOR AMERICA

Gaumont British will definitely release 24 productions in America as announced at the beginning of the season, Arthur A. Lee, vice-president and general sales manager, said in New York this week upon his return from a tour of exchanges through the middle west and west coast.

Seventeen of the scheduled 24 features are already completed, while plans for the remaining seven are well advanced, Mr. Lee said.

Itemized

Thomas Bentley returned to direction of "Silver Blaze" at Twickenham studios, after two weeks' illness. . . . Ralph Ince is directing Claude Hulbert in a detective-comedy, "The Vulture," on the new floor of Warner-First National Teddington studio. . . . Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., invented a red and yellow striped cravat, to be known as the "Criterion tie," for his associates at Worton Hall. . . . Cecil Goodman, on completion of his job as production manager for Paramount's "Full Steam Ahead," sailed for Australia to get a shark-fishing picture. . . . Donovan Pedelty is to make "Landslide," from his own script, for Paramount. . . . Marcelle Chantal, French star of Twickenham's "Widow's Island," flew to Paris to complete scenes in a French picture.

His Majesty's theatre in Montreal, operated as a legitimate and roadshow house for many years, has adopted a policy of showing all-British pictures.

Come and Get It

(United Artists - Goldwyn)

Dramatic Romance

Impressive in its picturization of that quality of physical and elemental conflict so well appreciated by men folks, appealing in its presentation of a story of dramatic and romantic conflict, the production is of the kind generally alluring to women. "Come and Get It" is distinctively an adult attraction. Its theme, following the thrill action prologue, is completely over the heads of those in and below the teen ages. It treats a delicate and intimate story with discriminate good taste.

For adults the picture is both a character drama and an absorbing romance drama. Reversing the customary production formula, it presents its spectacular mechanical thrill in the opening sequences. The details depicting lumber camp activities, the felling of huge trees, getting the timber out of the snow-buried forests, shooting the logs down flumes and breaking up jams, together with the fury of a mob, take place before the actual story motivation gets under way. So placed, they are thrilling, however, and are effective in establishing the mood to appreciate the human conflict that is to follow.

The story concerns an ambitious lumberjack who violates every principle of business ethics and every tenet in the moral code in a ruthless drive for power and might. Breaking the heart of his dance hall paramour, he makes a loveless business marriage. Cold, even inimical to his wife and son, tolerant only of his daughter, he builds himself up as the tyrant of a vast lumber empire during a score of years. In middle age, he meets the motherless daughter of the buddy of his old lumberjack days and falls madly in love with the child of the woman he once cast aside. Spending money lavishly on her, her father and aunt, his objective is to make the girl his kept woman. But the girl and the man's son fall into honest love. The situation becoming known to the man, he turns on his son with bitter enmity. Deprived of the only thing in life he wanted and could not have, he challenges the boy to fight. A physical lamb in the grip of a lion, his spirit is broken not by force and power, but by the pleading words of a terrorized girl who begs the boy to pity him because he is "only an old man."

The film boasts no magnetic box office names—personalities who can be counted upon to stand patrons in line regardless of the quality of story or production. But Edward Arnold, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Andrea Leeds, Mady Christians, Mary Nash, Cecil Cunningham and especially Frances Farmer, who plays the roles of both women, contribute sincerely convincing and realistic performances. The story of a man who defied custom, convention and all the laws of ethics, a man who considered everyone who came in contact with him as pawns in the chessboard of life as he saw it, the picture places in the hands of exhibitors solid, substantial and intelligently treated dramatic entertainment that gives them legitimate right to make an honest and forceful bid for adult patronage.

Previewed in Warner Hollywood Theatre, following "A Midsummer Night's Dream." As is usually the case when a Goldwyn picture is on the preview screen, there was a goodly assemblage of Hollywood professional and executive figures. Yet the contrast between the two attractions, one whimsical fantasy, one powerful and vivid drama, had the paying customers vividly excited about "Come and Get It."—GUS MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

The Garden of Allah

(UA-Selznick)

Romantic Drama

When an audience sits motionless watching a picture, breaking its silence only when it applauds in appreciation of some particularly beautiful exhibition of color photography or exceptionally worthy bit of acting, that picture must have something. As "The Garden of Allah" unfolded on the screen of Grauman's Chinese theatre, it was evident that its auditors were impressed by its high production quality, the accomplished performances given by the leading players and supporting cast, the intelligent manner in which the intimately delicate love drama had been adapted, the significance of the musical score and the sane, discriminating fashion in which directorial technique had welded all together. The patronage included a large percentage of professionals, attracted by the news that the picture promised something daringly different in theme and in advanced color application, and the reaction of this contingent, together with that of the paying customers, indicated that in "The Garden of Allah" smart showmen have a show in which they really may become enthusiastic.

Two troubled souls meet at the edge of the Sahara Desert, legendary Garden of Allah. The man, yielding to the temptations of the flesh, has broken his sacred vows as a monk and fled his cloistered Trappist monastery. The woman is seeking an ethereal happiness which only God and she know is in her heart. Together they come under the exotic fascination of the Orient as their mortal hearts call to each other. A stirring passion dance, vividly executed by a desert siren, sets aflame the animal natures of both. The man who hates and fears the living and material symbols of God and the woman, victim of an unfathomable attraction, marry. The beauty of their love, portrayed in sequences that are the ultimate of good taste and dramatic propriety, tumbles into the dust of tragedy as the secret of the man's identity and past history is revealed. There is no bitterness in the heart of husband or wife as the man, confessing his sin to God and woman, cleanses his soul and is surrendered to his monastery by the woman. Both see beyond the horizon of temporal existence a greater happiness in another life.

While different to the point of being daring, "The Garden of Allah" in story and manner of telling does not come into conflict with any, even the most austere, standards of fitness or propriety except in the Tilly Losch dance sequence which is so far outside the bounds of decency—and Code Regulations—that sharp cutting is in order. Quite naturally, it is an attraction for adults. It behooves showmen to give the attraction close study.

Undoubtedly the inititial presentations will be accompanied by an intense publicity and advertising campaign. It is also quite likely that critical reviewers will have much to say about the film. It would seem to be advisable on the part of individual exhibitors to pay closer than usual heed to the tenor of the initial marketing drive as well as note the reception which audiences in the more metropolitan centers give the film.—G. The Legion of Terror

Contemporary Melodrama

The producer's descriptive catchline for this film is "as timely as today's headlines." The headlines referred to are those used atop newspaper stories of the recent trial of alleged members of a secret organization in the Middlewest on charges of murder.

In common with other motion pictures predicated on headlines of contemporary currency, this one presents a fiction paralelling in essentials the facts dealt with in the stories concerned. In common with such others, also, it relies for box office interest upon the measure of general reader interest in the factual story as published in the news press, sacrificing, in exchange for that exploitation factor, the elements of surprise, unfamiliarity of material and uncertainty of plot outcome generally inherent in original story matter. All of this points clearly to the type of promotional enterprise exhibitors are expected to employ if they elect to offer a production of this kind to their patrons.

For picture purposes the story told in the newspapers is varied slightly as to circumstance and to the terrorism which is its principal factor is added a dash of romantic interest, and for the trial finish is substituted a motor pursuit of the mob leader and his death in flaming wreckage, the while state militia presumably rounds up the hooded members of the organization.

The scene is a middle sized American city, the organization leader the editor of a newspaper, his instruments its pages and radio commentator, his aids the municipal officers and executives of the city's business enterprises. The investigator who brings about the downfall of the terrorists is a postal inspector. He divides the romantic interest with the sister of a victim of the hooded legion.

The Man I Marry

(Universal)

Comedy

Intent here is to amuse. No dramatic element is inserted in a series of incidents relating to the romance of a playwright and a stage producer's niece. Comedy ranges, as to kind, from sophisticated repartee to a Chic Sale characterization, by Chic Sale. Somewhere in between these extremes lies a double-drunk performance by Skeets Gallagher and Cliff Edwards. The locale is New York and a small town and country place in Connecticut.

Doris Nolan is the girl, script reader for her uncle, a stage producer, both of them related to but not overly supplied with wealth. Michael Whalen is the boy, heir to millions, posing as a struggling playwright to prove his literary ability. They are thrown together in a vacant country place owned by her aunt and fall in love without knowing each other's identity. After that everybody's efforts to help everybody else result in numerous complications which, at picture's end, are brought to abrupt conclusion in a clinch.

Smartest Girl in Town

(RKO Radio)

Romance with Music

Light, gay music tinged comedy romance that bends nicely towards farce, this film, which again features the Gene Raymond-Ann Sothern combination, has the essentials that generally have done well at the box office. The story, all its action and dialogue, together with the situations both precipitate, is of that frothy never-to-be-taken-seriously line of amusing entertainment.

Well mounted, moving speedily in a modern atmosphere, the well acted show has an unusual down-to-earth character. Clever team work, on the part of actors, writers, director, producer and lyricists, combines to bring out this quality in effective fashion.

In the yarn, which has been given colorful production Gwen runs a style modeling advertising agency. Frances is the attractive photographer's model. The pair are humorously pestered by Italian nobleman Torino, who, in addition to being an exasperating suitor for Frances' hand, has other engaging hobbies. Needing a swank background for a special job, Gwen and Frances prevail upon Philbeam, valet to wealthy Dick Smith, to let them use his yacht. On the day set for the pictures, Frances' professional male partner forgets to show up, and Dick is a willing substitute. Complications that provoke glee interluding, Dick under Philbean's management goes into the advertising business, keeping his identity disguised. The fun is gay and giddy, as Dick fights off the volatile Torino until he can win Frances and win over her crabby Aunt Gwen.

The type of entertainment that is usually of appeal to customers above the adolescent age, there is plenty of showmanship possibility in addition to the prestige of the Raymond-Sothern team that should make the selling job comparatively easy.

Yellow Cargo

(Grand National)

Melodrama

The yellow cargo of the title is composed of Chinese aliens. The plot has to do with methods of smuggling them into the United States. The device principally employed to this end is a motion picture production company which does not produce pictures but serves as a front for the smugglers and cloaks their operations. The two whose investigations thwart the smugglers are an agent of the immigration bureau and a representative of the department of justice, the boy and girl of the love interest, respectively, he posing as an actor and she as a reporter.

The foregoing indicates the nature of the material, hence the probable character of suitable exploitation, and it may be added that justice triumphs and that there is relatively little bloodshed although there is much brandishing of firearms toward the close of the picture. It should be made known, too, that whatever dark reflection upon the motion picture industry might be expected to result from the use of a production company for ulterior purposes is offset by a scene in which the chief conspirator makes it evident that the "producers' association" is investigating the comany and that it is futile to attempt continued deception.

The story takes one O'Connor, investigator for the immigration bureau, to Hollywood in search of smugglers known to operate from there, and into the employment of the chief smuggler as an actor. The smugglers' system is to take 20 extras out on location daily, costumed as Chinese, releasing and returning them by another route, and bringing in, after nightfall, 20 Chinese aliens in their relinquished costumes. O'Connor meets and falls in love with Bobby Reynolds, Department of Justice agent posing as a reporter, and when the criminals have been rounded up the two are married.

Killer at Large

(Columbia)

Melodrama

The homicidal maniac, vengeful, cunning and operating alone, is the creature of the title. His immediate occupation is gem burglary, his secondary engagement the wreaking of vengeance on the young couple whose romance is the love interest in the picture. The things that happen are represented as of the big city and there is some attempt to preserve plausibility.

The killer burglarizes a department store by posing as a figure in a show window and learning the combination of the vault, stealing valuable gems. A clerk under suspicion and the girl detective employed by the store trace him to a wax works, narrowly escaping with their lives, and are instrumental in leading police to the cemetery where the jewels are buried with the body of a victim of the killer. Thereafter the police trail the young couple, believing the killer will seek to avenge himself upon them, which he does. The killer is killed and the young people are married.

The title suggests directly the type of picture it is and, no doubt, the type of exploitation likely to attract the type of patronage likely to care for it.

Crime Over London

(Criterion - United Artists)

Melodrama

The selling angle here is that American gangsters, with things made too hot for them at home by "G" men and the like, are seen attempting to try out the old tricks in conservative, but well organized, England. This gives an opportunity for some provocative publicity about the respective crime preventive methods of the old and the new world. Whether gangsters could exist in Europe is a question which may be posed, with the further problem whether, perhaps, America might learn how to tackle its crime problem by studying European police methods. Additional is a really ingenious story, the development of which largely turns on the fact that a wealthy store owner has a "double" in an old actor employed by a thug gang.

Sherwood, old self-made owner of Sherwood's Stores, is about to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the opening of his great department store by a big reception at which every employee is to receive a month's pay.

Too much attention to business has affected his health and, in order to keep up the tradition of personal supervision, he engages an old actor, Riley, to impersonate him in the store while he obeys the doctor's orders to pay more attention to golf.

Riley is in the power of a group of American gangsters, who have come to England in search of easy money because America has become too hot for them. They conceive the idea of kidnaping Sherwood and having Riley impersonate him at the Jubilee celebrations, making it possible for the gang to get away with the big cash accumulated for the staff bonuses.

One of the gang is shot by the leader, his rival in love for the only woman member of the gang, and Sherwood's nephew is suspected, on the strength of carefully manufactured circumstantial evidence. The great day of the celebrations finds the gang's plans working according to schedule. The bogus Shewood is accepted as the real article and the cash is collected. Police surround the store, and a battle royal ends in death for the gangsters and establishment of the innocence of the millionaire's nephew.

The double role of Joseph Cawthorn is the big asset of the picture. He acts admirably. The love interest interpreted by Rene Ray and Bruce Lister is subsidiary but interesting. Editing will definitely improve the picture for American audiences.

Tarzan Escapes

(MGM)

Jungle Romantic Drama

Momentum given public interest, especially the youngsters, by the previous Tarzan films, plus the continued popularity of the ape man's amazing experiences as a colored supplement newspaper feature, stand in good stead for this attraction. From the standpoint of production value, story quality, caliber of acting and exciting action, this production is several strides ahead of its forerunners in both potential entertainment and commercial quality. As all that is expected of a Tarzan show is intelligently delivered, "Tarzan Escapes" is almost a certainty to interest the red-blooded youngsters greatly. At the same time, it is of such a character that adults who see it are not likely to consider the time wasted.

Naturally Tarzan's jungle stamping ground is the locale. The small screen personnel supporting cast, of course, are important in the picture. They provide romantic and dramatic excitement as well as comedy. But in the punch sequences it is Tarzan's jungle friends, tribesmen and animals, that are the principal objects of interest.

Tarzan and his mate, Jane, are living happily in the jungle. As a sort of prelude to the actual story, production details present them undergoing many dangerous experiences. Into the idyllic land comes a safari, guided by Captain Fry, animal procurer, and including Rita and Eric, relatives of Jane, who have come to inform her that she is an heiress and must return to civilization. Jane explains to Tarzan that she will return, however. Meanwhile Captain Fry has sensed that Tarzan would be a seventh day wonder circus attraction in England, and captures him. Action following the pattern established in the Edgar Rice Burroughs cartoons, the savage tribes rush to the rescue of their friend. Atmosphere building to a highly dramatic pitch, Tarzan makes his escape to summon a herd of stampeding elephants to forestall the natives from wreaking vengeance on Fry. In the climax Jane returns to Tarzan.

Though the film is long in running time, there are no noticeable letdowns or pauses. Contradistinctly there is always something doing on the screen. A feature that lends itself readily to unique and colorful exploitation, the film has the elements for a showman's holiday for those exhibitors who really like to get out and do things.

Previewed in the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. The audience, made up mostly of adults, got quite a thrill out of the film. The few youngsters in attendance gave vent to an enthusiasm that augurs well for Tarzan's reception when it plays before a predominantly juvenile gathering.—G. M.

Hopalong Cassidy Returns

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

The longer the "Hopalongs" continue, the better they become from a production, entertainment and commercial standpoint. The quality of the series already pretty well established in patron favor, this release retains all the values of its predecessors and adds a few others for good measure. Brimful of valor in conflict with intrigue and deceptive double dealing, this sound premise is highlighted with action, primitive emotions, romance, drama, comedy and more action.

As the picture unfolds, familiar old friends greet the patrons. William Boyd and George Hayes again appear in their characteristic roles, and such other screen personalities as Evelyn Brent, William Janney, Irving Bacon, John Beck and Al. St. John are important in the action and delineation.

With Western locale, the yarn has to do with a gang of crooks, led by the woman boss of the town, Lilli Marsh, attempting to jump a gold claim. All is presented logically and naturally. Prosepctor Peg Leg is murdered by minions of Lilli, who is desirous of knowing the location of his claim. The ruthless act arouses the townspeople, and crippled editor Saunders is made town marshal to bring some semblance of law and order and safety. He summons to his assistance the wandering cowboy, Hopalong, his weakling younger brother, Buddy, and old time desert rat Windy. But furiously avaricious Lilli is determined that she shall not be beaten. The spectacularly contrived slaying of Saunders permits Hopalong to become marshal. Simultaneously romance springs up between him and Lilli. The film builds to its climax through an intelligently handled series of action episodes which start to work a regeneration in the life of Lilli. But the forces she has let loose are too strong for her to control. In an effort to eradicate lawlessness and to atone for misdeeds, also to protect Hopalong, she dies in a fight that wipes out her erstwhile confederates.

The picture is well prepared, acted, directed and produced. Action is applied principally to amplify the dramatic premise. Logically for this type of picture, romantic love interest has only a small but nevertheless important interest creating function. And when situations become vigorously menacing, amusing comedy bits are inserted to lessen the tension.

Substantial entertainment for the Hopalong admirers, the film also has a quality which properly sold should bring it to the attention of audiences not regularly going in for westerns.

Alla en el Rancho Grande

(There On the Big Ranch)

(Bustamante y de Fuentes, A. en P.)

Mexican Drama with Music

Here is something brand new and of definite American appeal in an all-Mexican picture. Not only is this production, with the theme of the famous song, "Alla en el Rancho Grande" ("There on the Big Ranch"), which is already known in the United States and which many consider more tuneful and swingy than "La Cucharacha," a deftly directed and played drama of ranch life in Mexico as it really is, but it is brimful of exploitation angles: an appealing love story; songs that are easily hummed; the performance of Tito Guizar, noted Mexican tenor; and a splendid rendition of "El Jarabe Tapatio," Mexican national dance which features the "charro" (Mexican cowboy garb) and the "china poblana" (Mexican feminine costume). The picture is head and shoulders above other Mexican made films. American tourists and residents went for it in a big way during its exhibition at the Cine-Teatro Alameda, Mexico City.

Fernando de Fuentes has done his best directing in this feature. The photography is very good and the sound is satisfactory. It is a simple yet forceful tale of a comely though sickly orphan girl who attains happiness despite a double timing foster moster. Gun play is limited to one shot—of the pistol—and rough stuff to a few feet of Anglo-Saxon fistics. A kindly old soak, typical of Mexican ranches, is good comedy relief. There is high drama in the incident of the young ranch owner, who takes the heroine home unmolested when he discovers she is the sweet heart of his best friend.

Two outstanding novelties are in the picture: a "song-guitar duel," a Spanish-Mexican game of a pair of gallants warbling gibes at each other's defects to guitar music, between Guizar and Lorenzo Barcelata, who wrote music and songs for the picture and plays the rival for the girl's hand. Another highlight is a good rendition by Olga Falcon and Emilio Fernandez of the national dance, a spirited performance of difficult steps and prodigal displays of lacy white petticoat.

Guizar has a considerable radio name north of the Rio Grande. Mexico's glamour and the fact that this is an authentic cross section of a virile phase of life just south of the Rio Grande are factors for exploitation. De Fuentes' intelligent direction makes the picture further acceptable to American audiences.—JAMES LOCKHART, Mexico City.

Two Too Young
(MGM-Roach)
Very Good

This has the usual flavor of the "Our Gang" comedies. Spanky and "Alfalfa" plot to obtain some firecrackers that two other members of the gang possess. Failing to get them on the first try, Spanky and "Alfalfa" dress up as G men, and this method brings results. Before they can shoot the fireworks the bell rings for school and the gang goes to class with "Alfalfa" putting the firecrackers in his back pocket. When "Alfalfa" gets up to recite, another member of the gang sets off the firecrackers by using a magnifying glass. Running time, 10 minutes.

Merry Mutineers
(Columbia)
Good

Two boys, one of whom is Scrappy, are sailing their boats in a small pond in the park. The boats are manned by famous motion picture characters but appear lifeless. Suddenly, in this animated cartoon, the figures come to life and a battle is staged. The animated caricatures include W. C. Fields, the Marx Brothers, Bing Crosby, Jimmy Durante, Major Bowes, Charles Laughton, Laurel and Hardy, Wallace Beery and Joe E. Brown. Running time, 7 minutes.

Whose Baby Are You?
Very Funny

This is good entertainment with Bert Lahr in fine form, aided by comic situations and good dialogue. Lahr gets into hot water trying to help a friend, owner of a candy and ice cream store. The friend's wife is in a maternity hospital. He is trying to negotiate a loan but doesn't want the finance folk to know about the expected baby. Lahr becomes quite involved in the tangle, and with the girl to whom he is engaged, before everything is explained. Other players are George Haggerty, Gertrude Mudge, Sally Starr, Earl Gilbert and Eddie Lambert. Running time, 18 minutes.

Star Gazers
(Columbia)
Instructive

This is an instructive and interesting subject on the progress of the telescope from Galileo's little spy-glass to the 200 inch "eye" that was constructed at Corning, New York, and is now being ground at Pasadena, Cal. After scenes of Galileo receiving the professorship of science at the University of Padua, the camera records present day activities of astronomers and the equipment perfected for their use. Various observatories, including that on Mount Wilson, are shown. The subject ends with a flashback to Galileo, his life in danger for professing that the earth moves around the sun. Running time, 10 minutes.

Kiko Foils the Fox
Animated

This is a lively cartoon with Kiko, the happy Kangaroo, befriending the birds of the forest. Kiko is entertaining the birds with his flute when a wily Fox intrudes on the scene. The Fox harasses the birds but Kiko bombards the villain with pellets and finally drives the Fox against a hornet's nest. The hornets complete the rout of the Fox. A Terry-Toon subject. Running time, 8 minutes.

Olympic Ski Champions
(MGM)
Excellent

Extraordinarily effective photography contributes towards making this an outstanding short subject. Pete Smith has compiled the subject from the Official Olympic Pictures, which were made by a crew of 50 cameramen and are particularly notable for the detail evidenced in their making. The thrills of ski jumping never have been more vividly caught than in these shots from the Bavarian Alps, scene of the Olympic winter sports. Shown, too, are the relay cross country ski race and the combined Slalom and downhill race, but the jumping contests hold the most thrills. Running time, 10 minutes.

Krazy's Newsreel
(Columbia)
Clever

A burlesque of a newsreel with "Krazy Kat" in the saddle, this is good for plenty of laughs. "Goofy-Tone" offers goofy peace conferences, goofy floods and goofy sports. "Kitty Kat" describes the latest in fashions. A wrestling bout tops the program. Running time, 7 minutes.

Hollywood Extra
(MGM)
Good

This is an interesting camera study of the average day in the life of the typical Hollywood "extra" girl. The girl, Jane Barnes, is in the chorus of a musical production. Told there is no work for her tomorrow, Miss Barnes goes home dejected, and en route returns borrowed money, stockings and lends money to other "extra" girls. A call to the Central Casting Office with a negative result is followed by a call each day in hopes of a job. Finally, after money and patience is practically exhausted, Miss Barnes gets a hurried call at night, and when the studio car calls for her she feels that at last her opportunity has come. Instead of a dramatic part, however, Miss Barnes has been chosen because her underpinnings photograph well. Running time, 11 minutes.

Fun in the Fire House
(Universal)
Good

Acting as masters of ceremonies, Smith and Dale, nationally known vaudeville comics, are conducting a variety show on the floor of their fire house to raise money for new equipment. The show's routine is repeatedly interrupted by a call to a fire but so interested are the two comedians in the presentation of the talent that they refuse to answer until they finally discover that Dale's home has been blazing all the time. In addition to Smith and Dale's usual brand of comedy and some clever trick photography, Ferry Corway, a dexterous bellringer, Jeanne McCully, nimble tap dancer, and Virginia Verrill, songster of radio fame, assist to make this a pleasing and amusing short subject. Running time, 10 minutes.

Symphony In Snow
Good

Scenic beauty and three Alpine climbers contribute to the effectiveness of this number of the Treasure Chest series. While the climbers ascend the snow covered Alps the camera records the perils and hazards they encounter. Of special note, if one looks behind the scenes, is the exceptional work of the cameraman in obtaining the shots. Story and narration by A. L. Alexander. Running time, 9 minutes.

Philippine Fantasy
Of Interest

Highlighted by excellent photography, this number of the Magic Carpet of Movietone series is an interesting excursion to the Philippines. Scenes of Manila, its building, streets and industries, including the art of cigar and cigaret making, are shown. Also in the camera's itinerary is a trip to the island's prison, Fort Santiago, and a tour through the interior. Produced by Truman Talley. Edited by Lew Lehr. Running time, 10 minutes.

Ace Drummond
Action Serial

Taking the first three chapters as a basis, this gives promise of being an entertaining action serial for the juvenile trade. The production has those ingredients that sustain a serial from week to week. Based on the newspaper feature of the same name and created by Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, this has, as might be supposed, an air theme, and a timely theme, for it has to do with the establishment of an international airway that will link all the nations of the world. The setting is the Orient, in a place called Magnolia, and the force trying to halt the development of the airways is a mysterious organization headed by an equally mysterious "Dragon." John King as "Ace" is well cast in the title role. Supporting players include, in a large cast, Jean Rogers, Noah Beery, Jr., Lon Chaney, Jr., and that veteran of the legitimate stage and of the "Roses and Drums" radio feature of a year ago, Guy Bates Post. Directed by Ford Beebe and Cliff Smith. Running time, each chapter approximately 20 minutes.

No Place Like Rome
(MGM)
Excellent

A very amusing musical comedy short subject, this is a satire on the Roman edict compelling all bachelors to marry. With a setting of ancient Rome, a cast headed by Frank Albertson and Suzanne Kaaren, and dialogue that is a combination of the ancient and modern variety, the production is decidedly well done. Albertson and a group of his bachelor friends parade in protest against the marrying law, soon to go into effect. One by one Albertson's friends marry, until he is the only bachelor left. On the day the law goes into effect Albertson falls in love with Miss Kaaren, a slave in his father's employ, but before he can marry her he is accosted by the guards and thrown to the lions. Miss Kaaren jumps into the arena with Albertson and both are pardoned by the emperor. Running time, 19 minutes.

POTENTIAL

Of the 29,066,72 young Americans in school this year, a survey, made by FORTUNE and widely published by the U. S. cinema trade press, estimates that only 56.4% attend motion picture theaters once a week. Biggest potential then for the development of regular patrons is the remaining 43.6% eager to go but discouraged by the unwarranted disapproval of U. S. cinema fare by parents and teachers.

MARCH OF TIME, heir to TIME's long popularity as an authoritative textbook in U. S. schools, for more than a year has experimented with school cooperation to overcome this condition. In widely scattered areas pioneering exhibitors have proved to their own satisfaction the box-office value of MARCH OF TIME's school tie-up.

Now for all exhibitors

...a complete manual containing a plan with samples of letters, MARCH OF TIME's own publication for schools—THE PHOTO REPORTER, published monthly with each new issue, and a TEACHER's MANUAL, prepared by leading educational authorities, is available. Full instructions on how to use this plan, compiled from actual working experiences of exhibitors during the past year, are included. For your copy, ask your RKO Exchange or write direct to THE MARCH OF TIME, 460 West 54th Street, New York City.

BAR AND ESCALATORS IN THIS NEW THEATRE

There's Also Free Parking for Baby and Car at the Walton in Chicago

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

A bar, a nursery, escalators and free parking are a few of the features to be offered by the newest Chicago theatre, to be built by Essaness Theatres Corporation at 911 Rush street.

The new theatre, to be called the Walton, will have 1,600 seats and will cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. Newhouse and Bernham are the architects.

With a bar and nursery available, Chicago mothers can park the car in the lot, the baby in the nursery, the husband at the bar and enjoy the picture undisturbed—unless they join their husbands.

Patrons who wish to sit in the balcony or mezzanine at the new Walton theatre will not have to climb stairs to get to their seats. This is the first time the escalator is used in theatre construction here.

The new theatre, which is to be air-conditioned, will be ready by June 1, 1937. The lot is "L" shaped with a 90-foot frontage on Rush street, a depth of 200 feet, and an additional 70-foot frontage on Walton street with a 45-foot depth. Essaness bought this site from Julius Strass. The deal was handled by Frankenstein and Company.

This new theatre is in line with the expansion program of Essaness, which now operates 26 theatres in the Chicago area.

Sam C. Meyers of Wilmette will build a new theatre on Chicago's Northside at Devon and Maplewood avenues. The new theatre, which will seat 1,200, is to open May 1. It will cost about $200,000. C. W. and George L. Rapp are the architects.

The Fred Anderson circuit at Morris, Ill., is rapidly expanding. Last week this downstate theatre group took over the management of four theatres at strategic points. The new houses to join the Anderson circuit were the Lyric in Genoa, and the Fargo theatres in Sycamore and Geneva. These houses were formerly operated by C. G. Lekander. The fourth house to be taken over was the Arcada in St. Charles, which was operated by Lester Norris. This new arrangement makes the Anderson group one of the most important in the state.

The 2,000 foot reel, although approved by the operators' union and already in use in a number of Chicago theatres, is still far from having smooth going. The Chicago city officials who approve motion picture equipment have yet to give the 14½ inch spool their approval as it allows but three-quarters of an inch clearance on a 16 inch magazine. The Film Board of Trade is endeavoring to get a resolution through to accept these big spools, and the bill they are presenting will go before the Chicago City Council soon.

In the meantime the operators and exhibitors are concerned over something else of seemingly more importance. That is the carbon situation. With the 2,000 foot reel it is necessary, in the larger theatres, to change carbons with each reel. The use of high intensity lamps in the projectors makes it impossible to use a carbon for more than one of the larger reels, though the many short pieces of carbon left over would be usable for shorter reels. The use of special adapters for carbon is being suggested.

In a surprise move United Artists booked "The Gay Desperado" into the RKO-Palace theatre for the coming week. Balaban and Katz had just signed a new contract for the UA product. Neither circuit would comment but it was reported that the recent joining of Jesse L. Lasky with Radio Pictures had something to do with the situation, as B & K had too many bookings set for the United Artists theatre.

"Dodsworth," the current attraction at the UA, will be followed by "Come and Get It," according to the latest reports.

Double features will be general in Chicago in the next few weeks, say most exchange managers. The starting of duals in B. & K.'s "B" and "C" week theatres this coming week is expected to start the ball rolling. The independents maintain they will not start duals, and other circuits make the same statement. However, when B. & K. gets the twin bills operating in their other theatres it is expected that one by one, or in groups, the other theatres will fall in line with the dual program idea merely as a matter of protection.

The New Capitol theatre in Canton will be opened the 24th of this month. The theatre has been entirely remodeled at a cost in excess of $50,000.

By using the General Film Laboratories Paramount News was able to release specials on Sunday for their midwestern territory on the football games between Northwestern and Minnesota and Notre Dame and Ohio State.

The Chicago Amusement Publicists Association will have new quarters within the next few weeks. Arrangements have been made for additional space in the Sherman hotel and the new headquarters will include a bar, card room and assembly room.

The dance to be held Thanksgiving eve at the grand ballroom in the Sherman, with Ina Ray Hutton and her Melodears presiding, is one of the many functions planned for the season.

Sara Phillips, cashier at Aaron Jones' Woods theatre, has just completed thirty years of continuous ticket selling for Mr. Jones, in return for which he surprised her with a check for $500 and a four week trip down south with pay.

Hollywood Newsreel Planned

Hollywood Newsreel, Inc., has been formed by Erman Pessis and William Klein to produce 26 one-reel subjects, all dealing with news of Hollywood, and will be released every other week. Mr. Klein will have charge of production.

McCoy To Make Eight Films

Tim McCoy, western star, has started work on a series of four outdoor features and four G-Man productions to be distributed through Imperial Distributing Corporation. Imperial has contracted with RCA for the use of High Fidelity sound in all future productions.

Havrilla Signed as Commentator

Universal has signed Alois Havrilla, radio announcer, as commentator for its "Stranger Than Fiction" series of short subjects made under the supervision of Charles Ford.

Harold Winston, stage and dialogue director for Columbia, has been delegated by the studio to go to New York to organize a new talent department at the home office.

AMERICA SPEAKS!

"Good murder mystery well handled all around with appeal to audiences in general. Republic presents a timely subject in an exciting, interesting manner. They have seen to it that the picture is good entertainment, besides concerning itself with a subject of wide interest."
—Film Daily

"This emerges as Republic's best effort and seems certain to reach the upper brackets as an important grosser. The direction of Phil Rosen builds continuous suspense from the various situations, never letting interest diminish. The picture will back up all claims made for it."
—Motion Picture Daily

"President's Mystery" B. O.
Properly Sold Can Prove a Clean-up

"When the President of the United States suggests the story, when a national magazine hires six famous name writers to put it into words, then you have exploitation possibilities that should make 'The President's Mystery' a box-office natural, if properly exploited."
—Hollywood Reporter

"Picture is one of Republic's most important endeavors, lavishly and carefully made and dealing with topic of most intimate national concern in seriously conceived drama. Generally it stacks up well on credit side and should do business everywhere. Has solid dramatic wallop and human interest."
—Daily Variety

Kolbe Quits GN As Pathe Sells Its Holdings

Pathe Exchange, Inc., has disposed of its stock holdings in Grand National Pictures, ending the interest it has had in the new motion picture company since its formation, following the resignation from the Grand National board of directors of Frank F. Kolbe, a director and former president of Pathe, according to Motion Picture Daily. The company's Grand National holdings were disposed of in the open market over an extended period of time, it was said.

A large block of Grand National stock was issued to Pathe on the formation of the new picture company in return for Pathe's interest in First Division Exchanges, which was taken over by Grand National. Pathe's liquidation of its First Division and now of its Grand National holdings has been in line with its declared policy of withdrawing from production and distribution interests to concentrate on its laboratory operations. Arrangements were completed recently by Pathe for the retirement, as well, of obligations of the Van Beuren Corporation which it holds.

Mr. Kolbe said that he would continue on the Pathe board, but would devote less time in the future to actual film work than heretofore. He is identified with the brokerage firm of Young and Kolbe. He resigned the presidency of Pathe several months ago after occupying that position for about three years and was succeeded by O. H. Briggs.

Samuel Tauber Sues Vocafilm and Hochreich

A $100,000 suit alleging fraud and deceit was filed Monday in the New York supreme court by Samuel Tauber against Vocafilm Corporation of America and its president, David R. Hochreich. The complaint charges that in December, 1935, Mr. Hochreich represented to Mr. Tauber that he was president of Vocafilm and that he was working on a plan for organization of a company to be known as the Exhibitors' Franchise Corporation, which was to take in several other film companies. Mr. Tauber charges that Mr. Hochreich further represented that he was to become president of this new corporation in addition to securing for Vocafilm a settlement of the $5,500,000 suit which is pending against American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc. He further states that he had a three-year contract calling for $500 a week compensation and that he performed services up to last June 16, but received no compensation.

Companies' Officials Attend Universal Club Banquet

First public social function to be conducted by the "new Universal" was the annual Universal club dinner dance held Monday night at the Waldorf Astoria in New York at which virtually all of Universal's executive personnel were at hand, and many officials of other motion picture companies.

Warner Stockholders To Meet December 14

Warner Brothers have set December 14 as the date for their annual stockholders' meeting in Wilmington, Del. Five directors will be elected at that time. Those whose terms expire are: Samuel Carlisle, Stanleigh P. Friedman, Charles S. Guggenheimer, Sam E. Morris and Morris Wolf. All are expected to be renamed for another three years.

Ivan Culbertson, Joseph Hazen and Mr. Carlisle have been empowered to act as a committee for the representation of proxies. The annual financial report for the fiscal year ending August 29 will be completed about November 15, according to a letter to stockholders and signed by Robert W. Perkins, secretary.

Wilcox Production Costs at 5 Million For 14 Pictures

Herbert Wilcox, executive producer of General Films Distributors of London, releasing agent of Universal Pictures in the British Isles, announced on his arrival in New York this week that he plans to make 14 features for his 1936-37 program at a total cost of $5,000,000. Mr. Wilcox is in New York to confer with Charles R. Rogers, executive producer of Universal, on interchanging talent and to arrange for the distribution of his pictures in this country.

Mr. Wilcox will also confer with R. H. Cochrane, president of Universal and with J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board. He brought over with him from England prints of "The Three Maxims," in which Anna Neagle is starred, "London Melody," "The Navy Eternal," featuring H. B. Warner and Richard Cromwell, and "This Will Make You Whistle," starring Jack Buchanan. The pictures are part of his 1936-37 program.

Accompanying Mr. Wilcox was G. C. Woodham-Smith, counsel for General Film Distributors.

Herschel Stuart Is Consolidated Manager

Herschel Stuart has joined Consolidated Amusements, New York circuit operating a number of neighborhood houses, as general manager to relieve Laurence Bolognino, operating head, of duties in the field.

For eight years, Mr. Stuart was chief aid to Harold B. Franklin at Paramount, for four and a half years general manager of Fox Poli and in 1933 he joined RKO as general manager of circuits. He made a survey for Paramount in 1934 and in the same year became publicity, advertising and exploitation head for Columbia. Within the past year he has handled a few shows for Al Rosen, Hollywood producer.

NBC Holds Television Demonstration in East

National Broadcasting Company is to demonstrate television in New York this Friday. The test comes right on the heels of the inauguration of daily television broadcasts in London at the Alexandra Palace Television Service.

The NBC engineers for several months have been experimenting and "building" programs for television and they plan to reveal their technique in the Friday test, using the 10-kilowat transmitter atop the Empire State Building to flash the televised programs to Radio City receiving sets.

Rolsky Files Appeal In Conspiracy Action

Emanuel Rolsky and seven independent exhibitors have filed an appeal in Kansas City from the verdict in their conspiracy suit against Fox Midwest and major distributors. The case was decided in favor of the defendants on August 5 in the federal court there.

Argentine Group May Build Studio Near Montevideo

by PAUL BODO
in Montevideo

A production industry for Uruguay is envisioned as a result of a recent visit here of Jorge Mendez Delfino, owner of a large studio in Buenos Aires, and Amador Feliu, technical manager, to study local conditions with a view to building a studio and laboratory here.

Local authorities have gone more than half way to meet Delfino's proposal in the matter of franchises, since his would be the first production studio in the country. It is claimed that weather conditions here are superior to those in Argentina, resembling the climate of southern California, and production costs are expected to be lower than in other production centers.

Teatro Albeniz, former legitimate house, has been transformed into a second run film house, operated independently. The lease on the house has been bought by the Glucksman circuit, which plans to replace the theatre with a modern house to be called Radio City, to seat 1,000, and using American equipment. The house is only a block away from the new Cine Metro.

Juan V. Porta and Francisco Hermann, representatives for Republic, have opened a new office here. They are handicapped by the fact that all circuits virtually have completed their release schedules. The two also are agents for Screeno, and plan to introduce the box office stimulant into local houses.

Unusual success accompanied the presentation of the French picture "Lucrecia Borgia" in Cine Ariel of the Glucksman circuit. Box office returns reached the top; in two daily performances the house was sold out. The result is due partly to the really artistic value of the picture, and principally to the fact that "Lucrecia Borgia" is quoted apt only for adults. The obligatory mention "pelicula no apta para menores"—not apt for minors—appearing only exceptionally on our programs, was exploited by Mr. Nebio Caporale Scelta, publicity manager of the Glucksman theatres.

In the fourth week after the opening, the new Cine Metro is operating satisfactorily. After opening with "Melodias del Broadway 1936" (Broadway Melodies of 1936), "Anna Karenina," "Rose Marie," "Historia en dos Ciudades" (A Tale of Two Cities), followed. To be shown are: "Motin a Bordo" (Mutiny on the Bounty) and "Dos fusileros sin balas" (Bonnie Scotland).

As MGM pictures had been withheld from this market this year for the opening of their own house, stars of exceptional drawing power, not seen by our public for a year, are appearing for the first time on a Montevideo screen, backed by an unusual publicity campaign. MGM publicity covers daily papers, weeklies, broadcasting stations and even street cars. Cine Metro mails the weekly program regularly to thousands of addresses.

Twentieth Century-Fox presents its productions in the Cine Mogador, first run house of Delmaur Ltd. It is reported that Twentieth Century-Fox, under a recent arrangement between the two companies in New York, will release some pictures in Cine Metro, but according to M. Smith, manager of MGM of Uruguay, Inc., no definite decision in this matter has been made.

A job for the cameraman. Shooting a scene of "Port Arthur", Czechoslovakian production, starring Adolf Wohlbruck and Danielle Darrieux, and most ambitious screen undertaking at the mountain studios in Prague.

by HARRY KNOPF
in Prague

ATOP the Barrandov mountain, to which Prague clings, the studio center of Czechoslovakian film production was erected some years ago. Here have been produced many pictures which have found their way around the world, such as "Ecstasy," "Marysa," "Janosik," "Stefanik" and "Golem." And here, now in full activity, the producer trio, Emil Lustig, Pierre O' Connel and Nicholas Farkas, are working on the most ambitious picture ever attempted in this country, "Port Arthur." It is to be made in three versions, English, French and German, at a cost expected to reach $750,000.

Based on the wellknown book of Pierre Frondaie, "Port Arthur" is the story of the heroic defense of the last Russian Fort, Port Arthur, known from the Russo-Japanese war in 1904. The romantic element is the great love between a Russian officer and a Japanese girl, with the conflict theme of love versus patriotism.

Adolf Wohlbrück,, famous German actor, who plays the chief role, is to leave in a short time for Hollywood, where he is under contract to RKO. Danielle Darrieux is Youki, the Japanese girl. Nicholas Farkas, for years a cameraman, is directing, after such successes as "La Bataille" and "Variéte," with Annabella.

Two versions are in work, the French and German, while preparations are underway for reproducing the picture in England this month with a complete English cast. Otto Heller will again be behind the camera. Mr. Lustig's plan of production in England is aimed directly towards the American market.

In the scenario a close parallel has been drawn between the fate of the Fort and of Boris and Youki.

Interiors will have been taken in a few more days and the staff will leave for Bulgaria for the exterior shots. The Bulgarian government has assigned 16,000 soldiers for the climactic battle.

Rentals Abroad Seen Higher for Native Products

by J. K. RUTENBERG
in Berlin

Foreign productions are generally sold at smaller rental figures than are charged for domestic pictures in practically all European countries, it is indicated by a survey of distribution details in 17 countries adhering to the International Association of Cinema Proprietors.

The general trend throughout Continental Europe, the study indicates, is in favor of the selling of pictures on a percentage basis, the flat rental method being used for the most part only in the case of minor houses and theatres in outlying country districts.

Percentages range on the average from 20 to 50 per cent. A specific average is approximately 30 per cent. In France, Germany and Italy there is no differentiation between domestic and foreign product as far as rental figures are concerned. In Esthonia, Luxemburg and Yugoslavia there is virtually no domestic production, the theatres in general showing about half European films and half American product.

Switzerland has a minimum rental, stipulated by the renters' association, of 100 francs, no matter what the size of the house may be. In many cases percentage figures are computed on the basis of the theatre's total income before the deduction of the entertainment tax, which in many cases is quite severe. In Germany, Poland and Norway, however, the percentages are computed after the deduction of the tax.

In Finland on domestic product as high as 50 to 60 per cent goes to the distributor, owing to the Federal law which exempts domestic product from any form of taxation.

In France films are rented almost entirely on the basis of quality of product, which makes for a wide range of rental figures, dictated to a large extent by supply and demand. The range is from 25 to 50 per cent, with the average approximately 40 per cent.

In the small country of Luxemburg films are rented exclusively on a flat rental basis. German product, being the most popular, brings as high as 12,000 francs per house, with other films drawing only half as much.

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR, THE: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker—This picture pleased 90 per cent of patrons. A swell little program picture with an open atmosphere. Did fair; above average for Tuesday and Wednesday run. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 29-30.—C. J.. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Rural and small town patronage.

SECRET PATROL: Charles Starrett, Finis Barton —Very good. Our western fans think young Starrett is a comer. Business slightly above normal. Played October 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Chester Morris, Fay Wray—Just another program picture that was helped out by Stander as "Fingers." That was the high point of the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

First National

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Up to this one my patrons have not cared much for the Dick Foran Westerns. However, the star is improving with each picture and there were many compliments on "Trailin' West." The story is excellent and there is enough action to make it a splendid feature for a double bill. Just a few more as good as this and Foran will build up a following. Running time, 56 minutes. Played October 22-24.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

Grand National

IN HIS STEPS: Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker—Leaving all its mediocre achievements of the past behind and selecting "In His Steps," the most widely read book in the U. S. as the base for its first motion picture production released under a new banner, "Grand National," formerly First Division and subsidiaries, have announced its entrance into the category occupied by the foremost major producing companies. Preview audiences here have acclaimed "In His Steps" as one of the finest films exhibited in this territory during the fiscal year. Many women, as well as men, were in tears during the tender and more touching scenes while the timely injection of amusing comedy was met with hearty laughter. Cecilia Parker and Eric Linden are admirably matched as the young lovers and their individual histrionic renditions proclaim a bright future while the acting of the finest aggregation of supporting players cannot be overlooked for the splendid parts they played in making "In His Steps" a truly fine and most successful production. Exhibitors will particularly notice the startling change that has taken place in the directorial as well as the technical status of the first production under the new banner. Gone is the poor direction. Gone is the poor fog-like photography. Gone are the poorly illuminated settings, while in their places we find clear and clean-cut photography upon beautiful settings; clear, even, undistorted sound, all under capable and masterful direction of Karl Brown. Compliment should be forwarded to Grand National for its grand effort to produce bigger and better productions, and sincerely hope all future releases can compare or better their first and it will not be long when exhibitors shall heed the progress of Grand National. Grand National has made a "Grand" start. Business good. Running time, 80 minutes.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOHEMIAN GIRL, THE: Laurel and Hardy—A good Laurel and Hardy to above average business.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—All three boys were great in their roles, as were all the others. It is a swell picture regardless of the title. Ian Hunter, Peggy Conklin and Jonathan Hale were all good, especially the latter as the judge. Intelligent portrayals of the roles and also the directing made the picture, as it does so many of them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Rockefeller Center, New York

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton —Good rowdy fun to average business. Running time, 7 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

MURDER MAN, THE: Spencer Tracy, Virginia Bruce—A swell show for a regular program. Very interesting and in every way entertaining. Good for Friday and Saturday. Running time, seven reels. Played October 23-24.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—I would class this as a little above an average programmer. The stars both draw fairly well here. Played September 19-20.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—It seems that when the title contains the words "small town" or "farmer" business is good. This drew better than any picture for several weeks.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

SPEED: James Stewart, Wendy Barrie—A very interesting picture showing the testing of automobiles at the factory. The automobile races were very thrilling and interesting. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SPEED: Wendy Barrie, James Stewart—One of the best action pictures we have played in some time. It's worth playing and should do extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA RAIDERS, THE: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—This is the finest little western we have played for some time. Quite a bit of comedy in it and a slambang ending. Even the women enjoyed this one. Played September 16-17.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

EARLY TO BED: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—An average comedy programmer. No entertainment. Played September 12-13.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—Different and pleased all who came in. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 19-20.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

MOON'S OUR HOME, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Henry Fonda—Pretty good program picture that did poorly at the box office. Margaret Sullavan has never made money for us. Running time, 83 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

POPPY: W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson—Good program picture that kept the audience laughing all through the show. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PRINCESS COMES ACROSS, THE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—For some unknown reason, we had light business, but this was no fault of the picture. We can recommend it without reservations. Played October 21-22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

TIMOTHY'S QUEST: Dickie Moore, Eleanore Whitney, Virginia Weidler—A very good family picture. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Henry Fonda, Sylvia Sidney—Our first Technicolor that really clicked. Wanger was sure Santa Claus when he released this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

13 HOURS BY AIR: Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett—This turned out to be a very fine show. Seemed to please nearly 100 per cent. Business above average. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 9-10.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

Republic

HEARTS IN BONDAGE: James Dunn, Mae Clarke —As well produced as any of the majors' productions. Production of historical value to school children; of interest to all classes. Good action and dual romance.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

OH, SUSANNA: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—The best Autry to date. Business above average. Autry building all the time. We have established a good following for the Autry pictures.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS: Ray Corrigan, Kay Hughes—By far the best audience appeal of any horse opera in years. Syd Saylor is in a class by himself as a comedian. Excellent audience reaction and excellent business.—C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—Dandy football picture. Played midweek in special hookup with local football team to good business and audience reaction. Running time, 8 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

EX-MRS. BRADFORD, THE: William Powell, Jean Arthur—Terrible flop at the box office. Played September 26-27.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL, THE: Fred Stone, Jean Parker—A pleasing picture for any rural community. —P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

IN PERSON: Ginger Rogers, George Brent—In spite of a rainy night, we did very well in the matter of attendance. Most of the audience enjoyed the feature, although some expected Ginger Rogers to do more singing and dancing. The picture really was good. Played October 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson—This is my idea of what a good western should be. An interesting story, excellent cast, comedy relief and superb direction. With good crops in this section the farmers are coming back to picture shows and they are hungry for good westerns. If an exhibitor could promise his patrons splendid westerns like this one and "Powder Smoke Range," he could soon build back the oldtime Tom Mix crowds on the weekends. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 1-3.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta —Pretty good program picture. The singing by Bobby Breen was not clear enough to be appreciated by the audience. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March—Seemed to satisfy everybody and pleased some. More for class audiences. Running time, 123 minutes. Played October 23.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Here's a dandy feature for a double bill. One of the best that Wheeler and Woolsey ever made. The laughs are well spaced and even the story is fairly good. If your audience likes this pair of comedians you may rest assured that this feature will give good satisfaction. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 18-20.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

MURDER ON THE BRIDLE PATH: Helen Broderick, James Gleason—A rather mediocre murder mystery that did normal business. Should be double billed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Astaire and Rogers still making shows that the public will go for and come to see. Pleased everybody. Running time, 103 minutes. Played October 21-22.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville—I think this is the best Temple we have played to date. As usual, business was very good. You can depend on Shirley for that.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE RACE TRACK: Warner Oland, Helen Wood—With ideal set-up and conditions the film gave us the lowest Chan gross of any of this series of pictures. Running time, 7 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—Very good show of the North country. Buck the dog is wonderful and the cast does well also. Good scenery, plenty of snow. Good show for the hot summer days. It makes you feel cool when you can look at the snow in hot summer. Running time, seven reels. Played October 16-17.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT: June Lang, Thomas Beck—If the rest of the Jones Family series are as good as this I believe they will work up a certain following in small towns. Played on a double feature to above average business.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

FIRST BABY, THE: Shirley Deane, Johnny Downs—Excellent comedy for the whole family that pleased the majority. A number one program picture. Running time, 74 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—Little Jane Withers is just as good a drawing name to us as Shirley Temple and in every picture she has starred in she has turned out a swell performance. Our patrons go for her big. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 2-3.—Emmett Lyons, Nordland Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Suburban patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Herbert Marshall, Simone Simon—Publicity made it pull above average, but none of the three main leads can talk plain American and patrons go out somewhat disappointed. Running time, 7 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

HIGH TENSION: Brian Donlevy, Glenda Farrell—Only fair program picture. Running time, 63 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan, Betty Jane Hainey—Very good show. Should please them all. It brings the house to an uproar when Jane and Mary get into a fight with a crook that wants to rob Mary's home. Running time, nine reels. Played October 18.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan—We had them standing out on the street waiting to see this one. House was filled to capacity (900 seats) one hour after box office opened. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 17.—Emmett Lyons, Nordland Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Suburban patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—A good picture with an entirely satisfactory cast. However, our little friend, Jane Withers, tries singing and dancing in this. It is my opinion that there are better singers and dancers than Jane.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple—Shirley Temple is always good for extra business, although it was not quite as large for this attraction. Gave satisfaction. Played October 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THREE MORE JOIN REPORTING CORPS

Three contributors joining the staff of exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week come from as many states.

C. J. Schultz, Orpheum Theatre, Tremonton, Utah.

James N. Saunders, Avalon Theatre, Easton, Maryland.

Returning to the fold after almost a year's absence is a veteran reporter to the Department:

William Daab, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa.

Read the reports of these showmen in the columns of the Department.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—This picture brought diversified comments, but pleased in general and did some extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry—Our first Autry and it's a real knockout, not because we have bought them, but because it's good. Plenty of action, riding, songs and music. We have played scores of worse pictures on Sundays. Running time, six reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter, Lionel Barrymore, June Lang—A swell war picture, fine acting and good story. Did average business considering night football games. Running time, 110 minutes. Played October 22-23.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Rural and small town patronage.

STATE FAIR (RE-ISSUE): Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor—These reissues not what cracked up to be; although we did very good business, was still fifty per cent short of his last few. Good picture; my patrons enjoyed seeing it over. Played September 24-25.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

AMATEUR GENTLEMAN, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Elissa Landi—We double billed this with "Speed." The combination sold us out. Each picture had its followers. Recording poor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel, Bruce Cabot—This was one of the few releases from United Artists during the current year that made me some money. The story is well told, the acting is good and the picture has a splendid box office draw. The first night was about average but word-of-mouth advertising brought the two following nights way above expectations. Many patrons remarked on how well the picture followed the book. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 4-6.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino—A musical picture that gave us a surprise the first night and sorrow the second at the box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

INVISIBLE RAY, THE: Karloff, Bela Lugosi—A show that keeps you guessing all the way through and it is so different that it seems a novelty to run a show of this kind. Very exciting and thrilling. Running time, nine reels. Played October 21.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—Excellent!! Photography and sound as good as we have ever run, and this, of course, serves to bring out the superb work of the cast. Tears, laughs, pathos, comedy; this one has an ample supply of each, and neatly woven in the thirteen reels is the central theme of the Lloyd C. Douglas masterpiece; i.e., that by helping others, unknown to the rest of the world, "power" is gained to accomplish one's greatest desires. It is a tribute to the picture when an audience such as ours sits in absolute silence throughout the dramatic situations and winds up with copious tears. This will rank with Universal's best of all times. Running time, 112 minutes. Played October 24th.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Warner Bros.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—Negroes upheld business, otherwise would have flopped completely. My patrons didn't care much for it; what few saw it found it to be so much different than expected. Bucked Parish Fair as opposition. Played October 6-7.—C. J. Hubley, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Tallulah, La. Rural and small town patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—This picture pleased the ones that came in. It did not draw as was expected. Running time, 93 minutes. Played September 29-October 1.—Emmett Lyons, Nordland Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Suburban patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Don't pass this one up; it's a small town natural. Play it three nights, and watch it build up. It's the best western we've played in some time. When you hear Foran sing, you'll become a Foran fan at once. He should go places. Play this by all means. You'll never regret it, and you'll make new customers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TREACHERY RIDES THE RANGE: Dick Foran, Paula Stone, Monte Blue—Not as good as "Trailin' West." Foran's voice makes him popular with our western fans.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

PAIN IN THE PULLMAN, A: Broadway Comedies—An excellent slapstick Stooge comedy. Just as crazy as ever but they like it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Educational

DAME SHY: Buster West, Tom Patricola—Pretty good comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FARMER AL FALFA AND THE RUNT: Paul Terry-Toons—Don't let this one go by. Running time, six minutes.—Emmett Lyons, Nordland Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Suburban patronage.

HILLBILLY LOVE: Song and Comedy Hit—Pretty good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HURRAY FOR RHYTHM: Song and Comedy Hits—A good single reel musical novelty.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

KIKO FOILS THE FOX: Paul Terry-Toons—Just an ordinary black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

19TH HOLE CLUB, THE: Paul Terry-Toons—An average cartoon.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

RAIL BIRDS: Tom Howard, George Shelton—This is about the best comedy that these two have turned out in many months. Is sure to draw laughs from every patron. Running time, 18 minutes.—Emmett Lyons, Nordland Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Suburban patronage.

SLEEPLESS HOLLOW: Harry Gribbon—A good comedy with plenty of laughs and excitement all the way through. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WHITE HOPE, THE: Joe Cook—Very funny all the way through. Joe does well in his role and the laughs come easy just as soon as he hits the screen. O. K. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALIAS ST. NICH: Harman-Ising—One of the cleverest Happy Harmonies we have played to date. Running time, one reel.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

BORED OF EDUCATION: Our Gang—Good. Got enough extra kids to pay its rental. Running time, 1 reel.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

FOOL PROOF: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Our people like all these crime reels of Metro and this is no exception.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LUCKY CORNER, THE: Our Gang—Another outstanding "Our Gang" comedy. These are our most popular two-reel comedies.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

MODERN TOKYO: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A fairly entertaining travel reel. Running time, one reel.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE: Charley Chase—A good Chase comedy depicting Bank Nite troubles. Running time, two reels.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale Special—This short caused more favorable comments and made a little extra business for us. However, some people read a political significance in it. Running time, two reels.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Charles (Chic) Sale—A wonderful reel of its kind. The rental charge was too high. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PUP'S PICNIC: Harman-Ising—An excellent colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RACING CANINES: M-G-M Sports Parade—A swell turnout by Metro with Peter Smith as commentator. Good shots of dogs in slow motion. Will please all. Running time, 10 minutes.—Emmett Lyons, Nordland Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SLIGHTLY STATIC: Todd-Kelly—Oh boy, what a good comedy. Patsy Kelly sure puts it over with a bang. Plenty of laughs. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

STARLIT DAYS AT LIDO: Musical Revues—A very good musical and dancing reel showing screen and radio stars. Color good. Running time, two reels.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

Paramount

I-SKI LOVE-SKI YOU-SKI: Popeye the Sailor—Another Popeye that made the kids noisy. They roar when Popeye shows.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

KING OF THE MARDI GRAS: Popeye The Sailor—One of the best Popeyes we have played so far. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE, NO. 1: A very good reel in colors. Reels like this take the place of a news which we do not use.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

SPINACH OVERTURE, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Not near as good as many of his other ones. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE NOT BUILT THAT WAY: Betty Boop Cartoons—An average Betty Boop.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CORAL ISLE OF THE ATLANTIC: World on Parade Series—Very interesting. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DUMBBELL LETTERS, NO. 6: Why the exhibitor buys these reels I cannot understand.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IN LOVE AT 40: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Edgar Kennedy comedy that didn't bring as many laughs as some.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IT'S A GREEK LIFE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Just a fair colored cartoon. Will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2 (1936 Issue)—Very timely subject but not worth more than any other two-reeler. We will be glad when the contract runs out. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW AND RIP VAN WINKLE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—These Technicolor series are becoming more popular.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TROLLEY AHOY: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF THE NEWSREEL CAMERAMAN SERIES: These single reels always take.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Ont. General patronage.

NIGHT LIFE IN EUROPE: Adventures of the Newsreel Camera—An "Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman" reel showing glimpses of entertainers in Europe. Some good music and dancing. Running time, noe reel.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

WEST INDIES CRUISE: Magic Carpet Series—Fair travel reel. Very good musical score. Running time, one reel.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

United Artists

COOKIE CARNIVAL, THE: Silly Symphonies—Pretty good. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TWO GUN MICKEY: Mickey Mouse—The Mickey and Silly seem to go over well second-run. Would advise everyone to pick them up.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

MONKEY WRETCHERS: Oswald Cartoons—Best Oswald cartoon we have had yet from Oswald. Keep up the good work, Osie. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Ruba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PLAYING FOR FUN: Mentone Musical Comedies—Excellent vaudeville reels.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

DAY'S JOURNEY, A: Our Own United States Series—A very interesting single on Benton Harbor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FOR THE LOVE OF PETE: Big V Comedies—Warners' comedies are not as good as the two-reel musicals.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

I'M MUCH OBLIGED: Vera Van, George Debbs—A real smart musical, with diversified fast-moving entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A very fine single that pleased everyone.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RHYTHMITIS: Hal LeRoy, Toby Wing—This boy did some very fast dancing that appealed to both young and old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RUSH HOUR RHAPSODY: Broadway Brevities—A weak sister. Thought it might be a Major Bowes Amateur Hour until we saw the end. Will get by in your weak spots.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SLIDE, NELLIE SLIDE: Big V. Comedies—A two-reel Big V. Comedy of a beautiful girl soft-ball game that seemed to take.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SLUM FUN: Johnny Berkes, Charles O'Donnell—A real slapstick comedy on building repairs that brought the house down.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

NEWSREEL: The intense interest in the political campaign, and there is a lot of footage being used up, is making for rowdy houses. They clap and boo and boy, I will be glad when the damn thing is settled one way or the other. Then maybe we will get some news in them again.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OSTRERS' "B" SHARES TO MAXWELL FOR 3 MILLION

Believes Delay May Be Expected in the "A" Stock Sale Due to 20th Century-Fox Claim

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures is paying the Ostrer brothers £618,125 (approximately $3,000,000) for their 250,000 "B" or non-voting shares in the Metropolis and Bradford Trust, which controls Gaumont-British.

Transfer of the "B" shares formally will complete the "first stage" in the operation whereby Mr. Maxwell for his company plans to obtain control of Gaumont-British.

The "second stage" will be the acquisition of the 5,100 "A" or voting shares in Metropolis held by the Ostrers, against 4,900 shares in the hands of Twentieth Century-Fox. Its completion is unlikely for some time, due principally to the fact that Twentieth Century-Fox is claiming that the Ostrers may not sell their "A" shares without making it a condition that at least half of the "A" shares held by Twentieth Century-Fox are also bought.

Formal announcement of the terms on which the "B" shares were being transferred came from G. H. Gaunt, secretary of Associated British Pictures, who said that the Ostrers were receiving £350,000 in cash and 300,000 fully paid 5s ordinary shares of ABP. The market value of these shares is 17s 10½d each, giving the value of £268,125 to the 300,000 shares transferred to the Ostrers.

"Bonus" Rate Plan Voided

Embodied in Mr. Gaunt's statement was an intimation that the 300,000 shares were part of the 1,800,000 unissued ABP shares which, it was announced at the annual meeting, were to be offered to existing shareholders at "bonus" rates (less than current market value). This promise to shareholders, said Mr. Gaunt, could not now be carried out as it was intended to use the balance of the unissued shares "in completing this and possibly further acquisitions in the same direction."

The deduction was made in trade quarters that it was planned to pay at least part of the purchase price of the Ostrer "A" Metropolis shares also in ABP ordinaries, and that there might further be a desire to use some of these shares in purchase of the Twentieth Century-Fox shares, if a deal were finally concluded with the American company. It was noted that the 1,500,000 shares remaining, with a nominal value of £375,000, had a market value of approximately £1,340,000, if the ruling price on the Stock Exchange was maintained in face of the increased issue.

No official information was available with regard to the price to be paid by Mr. Maxwell for the Ostrer "A" shares, or to the offer which he had made to Twentieth Century-Fox for its holding. It was a general rumor that the former figure was £800,000 and that to Twentieth Century-Fox an offer of £1,500,000 had been made for their "B" shares.

Emphasizing the fact that all arrangements for the transfer of control in Metropolis (and therefore in G-B) to Mr. Maxwell were, formally at least, tentative, was a statement from Mr. Mark Ostrer once again repeating that press stories about the deal gave a misleading impression and that the control of Metropolis and of G-B remained exactly as before.

In Maxwell quarters the attitude remains that the completion of the "second stage" of the ABP-Ostrer deal cannot be stopped by Twentieth Century-Fox. Although the American company controls 2,186,250 G-B shares against 728,750 controlled by the Ostrers, through the respective holdings of the parties in Metropolis, it is claimed that they will be unable to prevent the Ostrers from transferring the control to Mr. Maxwell.

A Puzzling Situation

A somewhat puzzling trade situation has been created. The repeated affirmations of the Ostrer brothers that control has not passed read somewhat strangely in combination with various pronouncements attributed to Mr. Maxwell which, if they do not assume that the control has passed in all but the legal sense, at least seem to indicate that its passing to him is inevitable.

On the one hand he has said that he joined the G-B board because "we have now a substantial interest in its shares" but that the no-dividend policy had been settled long before and that "we are not at present in control, either voting or administrative."

On the other hand, he speaks very much as an executive in power in saying in regard to the G-B American organization:

"My own view is that its services should be at the disposal of any British producer who has a picture which the American executives of the company consider suitable for distribution in the States," and that "I have already instructed our agent in New York to make available to the G-B distributing organization there all our pictures in that country."

Dispelling fears that may have arisen as a consequence of the original Fox-Metro-G-B plan is his further statement that "I would regard it as a calamity should it be necessary to disband" the American G-B organization.

Gaumont Meeting Postponed

Shareholders, at the Gaumont British annual meeting, succeeded in passage of a resolution that the meeting be adjourned two weeks, or until the directors can present a complete consolidated balance sheet for the company and its subsidiaries. This action followed a stormy meeting. An earlier amendment to appoint a committee of investigation lost by a show of hands.

"Unless we are prepared to put a part of the cost of production of world films into a development account we cannot guarantee even this year to receive back the whole of our cost," Mr. Ostrer said, while if production for the world market is discontinued the shareholders must face the alternatives of a program of inexpensive films for the home market or complete abandonment of production. "Either would make dividends certain," he said, "but we would do nothing to help the foreign prestige of British films or to make the British film industry an international business." This was the explanation for the allocation of £200,000 to a special reserve.

Dixey Directors Nominated

Twenty nominations have been made by provincial theatre men for the four directorate posts reserved for exhibitors on the board of Capt. A. C. N. Dixey's Independent Exhibitors' Distributing Company. Further exhibitor meetings in aid of the plan, organized independently of the Dixey offices, were to be held in Newcastle, Nottingham, Cardiff and Bristol.

20TH CENTURY-FOX TO OPPOSE OSTRER SALE

Twentieth Century-Fox will withhold approval of the proposed sale by the Ostrers to John Maxwell and associates of their 5,100 shares in Metropolis & Bradford Trust, holding company for Gaumont-British, according to President S. R. Kent, returning to New York after five weeks in England. Under terms of the trust agreement made when his company acquired 4,900 A shares of M. & B., Twentieth Century-Fox has veto right over any sales transactions conveying voting power.

ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK

Tribute Paid Richardson For Projection Service

A LUNCHEON given by Martin Quigley and Quigley Publications on Thursday at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, concluded the round of events in "Richardson Week," a series of tributes to F. H. Richardson, technical editor of Motion Picture Herald, by theatre projectionists, equipment manufacturers and his colleagues in the motion picture trade press.

At the speakers' table at the luncheon, at which Terry Ramsaye was toastmaster, were John Chalmers, publisher of Moving Picture World before its amalgamation with the Herald; Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, technological engineer and former president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers; Walter E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply Company; W. W. Byrne, president of the American Projection Society; P. A. McGuire of International Projector Corporation; Colvin Brown, vice-president and general manager of Quigley Publications; Mr. Quigley, and the guest of honor.

The events, in recognition of the 30 years of service to the industry completed on Mr. Richardson's seventieth birthday, October 25th, began with a testimonial banquet Saturday night. On Tuesday a luncheon was given by National Theatre Supply Company and International Projector Corporation. At the Wednesday luncheon the hosts were the members of the Pioneer Projectionists Association.

Fairbanks and Goldwyn Joining for One Picture

The partnership arrangement announced last week in Hollywood between Douglas Fairbanks and Samuel Goldwyn will only be for one production, "Marco Polo," Mr. Fairbanks said in New York this week. He has no definite plans at this time for additional production activity beyond that one picture.

Questioned as to the possible effect on "Marco Polo" of an adverse court decision for Mr. Goldwyn in the latter's litigation with Paramount over Gary Cooper, who will star in the film, Mr. Fairbanks said, "That is not my worry. Cooper's contract is supposed to be with Goldwyn. I haven't given the matter any thought."

"Marco Polo" is budgeted now at $1,500,000. A director has not yet been chosen but Mr. Fairbanks will supervise the picture, for which he prepared the story from Captain A. Pogson's novel. Robert E. Sherwood is doing the screen play.

Mr. Fairbanks sails for Europe this week on the Queen Mary and will return to Hollywood after the first of the year.

American Seating Not With Reade in Circuit

H. M. Taliaferro, president of the American Seating Company, writes from Grand Rapids, Mich., to deny articles which appeared last month in motion picture trade publications inferring that this company is about to become interested in the operation of a circuit of theatres. "Such is not the case," he declared. "We have never been, are not now, and do not expect to be interested directly or indirectly in the operation of theatres. Our sole interest in connection with the theatre field, is to properly manufacture, sell and service our product"—theatre seats.

The appearance of executives of American Seating at a luncheon given by Walter Reade to the press to announce the formation of a new community theatre circuit, together with informal remarks made thereat, was construed at the time as an indication that American Seating might be interested with Mr. Reade in the venture.

New Artists Bureau Formed in New York

Central Artists Bureau has been formed in New York by Irvin R. Gwirtz, Sam G. Harris and Harry D. Goldberg, with offices at 1619 Broadway, to handle players, models for commercial photography or fashion shows, night club floor shows, radio programs and personal management of artists.

Mills Publicity Reorganized

The advertising and publicity department of Mills Artists, Inc., has been reorganized under the direction of Ned E. Williams. The new staff includes Helen Oakley, special features and trade press; Irving Hyland, metropolitan press and advertising, and Lupin Fien, out-of-town press and exploitation.

Invincible Schedules Nine

Maury M. Cohen, producer of Invincible Pictures, plans nine features for 1936-37. "Ellis Island," the first, is now in production with Donald Cook, Peggy Shannon and Jack LaRue heading the cast.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

TAKERS AND RIDERS, GIVERS AND PUSHERS

One of the more active and enthusiastic members some time back in referring to readers who secure workable ideas from these pages but report little in return, called them "takers" but not "givers." And now Pat Patterson, publicist of the State and Roxy Theatres, Marshall, Minn., offers the terms "riders" and "pushers" and has this to say about it:

" . . . The Round Table has added many years to my experience in showbusiness by compiling the experiences of veterans for my use. I cannot in any way express the regard I hold for the Round Table. It is beyond mere words. Please let me thank you for corralling all this information which I find absolutely invaluable. . . . Yes, my face is a bright scarlet when I am forced to admit that I have been a very enthusiastic 'rider' on your department without doing anything to 'push.' I shall try to do better in the future."

For the umpteenth time may we be allowed to say the success of this organization is due to the obligation that members voluntarily take upon themselves to report not too infrequently what they are doing to put over their attractions. And if it isn't too early for New Year resolutions the erring brothers might do far worse than resolve to do their share, as Pat so well puts it, by less "riding" and more "pushing."

MORE FERTILE FIELDS?

At lunch with a prominent out-of-town department store owner the talk turned to pictures and the executive spoke highly of a manager in his city known over the territory and farther for the successful operation of a children's theatre club with which activity the storeman cooperates to stimulate the sale of merchandise for juveniles.

In fact the showman made so firm an impression by his expertness in winning the confidence of the youngsters that the executive admitted he has offered the manager an important job in the children's department. The opportunities for advancement are many, the future promises real security. Whether the theatreman takes the job or not is besides the point but the offer again brings up the possibilities of success in the field of merchandising for seasoned but dissatisfied theatremen who do not see anything ahead of them in the way of advancement.

Much of the present day technique of merchandising promotion stems directly from the methods inaugurated by theatremen who spread the gospel by their successful tieins with merchandisers. The business of retailing until a comparatively few years ago was conducted along colorless conservative lines and a lot of today's general razzle-dazzle in store advertising and promotion was taught to shrewd retailers by exploitation-conscious showmen. It is not surprising therefore that the man who by instinct and training knows how to focus boxoffice attention upon his wares is regarded as sound timber for executive training in other lines dealing with the same masses and classes.

The beckoning finger of opportunity may be of little concern to showmen who are making actual progress and who look forward with reasonable assurance of getting somewheres. But, convinced they are making no headway, those who have the equipment and, more important, the opportunity are not to be scorned for looking upon offers to sell their savvy in more fertile fields.

WELL WORTH CHEWING UPON

The drives for business usually inaugurated in the early Fall with Greater New Season and similar campaigns speed merrily on their way up to around Thanksgiving which signals the completion one might say of the first lap in the theatre year's Boxoffice Futurity. At that point the manager takes a hitch in his galluses, gets his second wind and sets out on the second lap at a fast pace to get his slice of the holiday money that folks are saving for Christmas.

Shopping money already earmarked by anticipatory merchants for this year's Yuletide season is expected to reach an even higher amount than the most optimistic of totals. Which of course means business for the theatre as well—but not without fighting for a fair share. The fact that folks have more to spend for gifts this Christmas can also mean they will be inclined to spend more time in shopping and less in theatres.

An old-timer once said that the more Yuletide money there was in circulation the harder and more intelligently a manager had to work to keep up his pre-holiday grosses. The statement may not necessarily be a truism but it certainly contains plenty of food for thought.

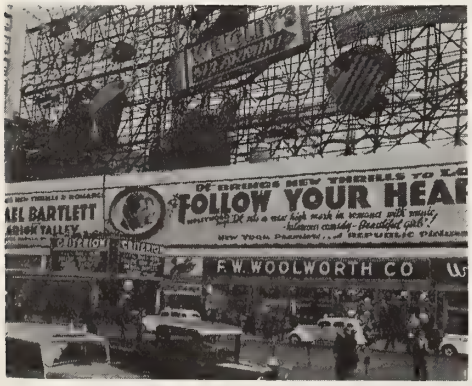
Universal News Cameraman Covers "Heart" Opening

The many top-line celebrities on hand at the New York Criterion for the opening of Republic's "Follow Your Heart," singer Marion Talley's first picture, were pictured by Universal newsmen as they entered the house, the stunt crowding the Broadway block in gala premiere fashion. Also of interest was banner covering front of entire building. Size was 200 feet by 22 wide spotted with giant oil paintings. Shadowboxes with color enlargements featured the front display at the theatre.



200-Foot Banner at the New York Criterion

Windows in smart spots were also arranged by publicist Arthur Jeffrey for tieins on the music in the picture. Counter displays were featured by department stores. On Marion Talley's radio program, mention was made of the picture and hit tunes played by top orchestras.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Flowered Float Sells "Swing Time" for Mensing

A neat tieup was engineered for "Swing Time" by Charlie Mensing, Empress Theatre, Owensboro, Ky., with local florist who got up a beautifully flowered float which toured the streets for several days. Float was arranged with a swing completely covered with flowers in which a boy in top hat and tails was swinging a pretty girl a la Rogers. Three-piece colored band almost entirely hid by flowers furnished the music and truck was well bannered.

Small swings were erected in each school yard and in two of the public parks, all carrying signs plugging the picture. And another highlight of Charlie's campaign was a gas-filled balloon anchored to the top of the theatre and properly spotlighted, from which was hanging a swing in which a dummy dressed like Rogers attracted considerable attention. While the balloon itself was safely anchored, the swing flew back and forth, in the balmy Southern breezes.

Steel Mills Tied To Date on 'Brute'

When "The Magnificent Brute" was booked for early showing in Pittsburgh, Managing Director George D. Tyson, Alvin Theatre cashed in on the made-to-order setting for the picture's "steel" angle with a nifty tieup with the steel mills and metal fabricating plants. Tyson prepared two different cards—one, calling the workers' attention to "The Magnificent Brute" as their picture, and the other cautioning against accidents so that they wouldn't have to miss the picture. These cards were tacked up on all the bulletin boards in the plants.

Also outstanding in the campaign was the local working of the national Premier-Pabst beer tieup. Pittsburgh agency tacked up five hundred posters with theatre and date imprints, on store windows, and devoted entire windows in three strategic spots.

Local distributor of Liberty Magazine bannered his eleven trucks, using copy tying up magazine with the story "Big," from which "The Magnificent Brute" was adapted. Sylvan Leff of the Universal Home Exploitation Department assisted.

National Air Tour Arranged To Plug "Gold Diggers of '37"

Starting on Nov. 15th, and set to cover 24 cities, a transcontinental air trip has been arranged by Warner Bros with American Airlines wherein studio featured players and selected girls from the chorus of the picture will visit cities in all parts of the country in advance of "Gold Diggers."

Trip will be inaugurated at El Paso and stops are set for Fort Worth, Dallas, Memphis, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco and back to Los Angeles.

ONLY A FEW WEEKS TO THANKSGIVING

Now that the members have just about got their football tieups to clicking, it's time to give a thought or two to Thanksgiving Day and the usual stunts that go with the Turkey. Most important at least as a prestige builder is the canned goods matinee, admission being foodstuffs to be turned over to local charities. Newspapers, civic organizations and leading citizens are always willing to get in line.

Show is usually set for Saturday ahead with publicity started well in advance. Contributions are piled up in front of the theatre for the traditional newspaper photo and, of course, theatremen will be sure to see that the divvy is made so that the various denominations are represented.

CHARNINSKY AND LIMERICK HONORED IN FIRST DOUBLE AWARD CEREMONY

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Celebrating the first time in the history of the Quigley Awards that both the Silver and Bronze Plaques were won in one month by theatremen in the same state, Governor James Allred of Texas, at the State Capitol in Austin, recently presented the Silver to Louie Charninsky and the Bronze to George Limerick. The honors were conferred in the executive offices of the state's chief executive officer in the presence of members of both houses of the Texas legislature and officials of the Interstate and Griffith's circuits, represented by the winners.

Charninsky journeyed to the Capital from Dallas, where at the Capitol Theatre he created his winning campaign on Warner Bros. "Bengal Tiger." Limerick came on from Cleburne and his entry was on Paramount's "Texas Rangers" at the Yale Theatre.

In presenting the Awards, Governor Allred said:

"It is a pleasure for me to make these awards in behalf of the Quigley Publications to Mr. Louie Charninsky and Mr. George Limerick. I feel their achievement reflects credit upon the State of Texas in our Centennial year. I am happy to present to you, Mr. Charninsky, the Quigley Silver Plaque Award for your fine exploitation campaign on the picture, 'Bengal Tiger' and to you, Mr. Limerick, I present the Quigley Bronze Plaque Award for your campaign of advertising on our own Texas film, 'The Texas Ranger.'

"When it is considered that you gentlemen have won these awards in competition with a field of several thousands of entries from all over the world it is easy to see that you are deserving of every congratulation, for it brings not only recognition to you but to Texas."

The September Awards are the first plaques to be taken down by either of the winners, although they have been active in the Competitions. The September voting also brings Texas into the plaque column for the first time and the signal honors accorded the Lone Star theatremen are expected to stimulate wider Quigley activity in that sector.

As previously stated, showmen voted the Silver and Bronze monthly awards in 1936 are eligible for the Grand Awards, which are to be again presented in Hollywood. Entrants selected by the judges for the top honors are to be transported to the Coast via United Air Lines as guests of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. In addition to the presentation ceremonies to be attended by leading Hollywood figures, the winners will be given a week's entertannment in the studios and in other California high spots of interest.

Jack Heinz Places First In New York RKO Contest

Top prize in the RKO Theatre metropolitan area Packard Swingtime contest for the best campaign on the picture was awarded to Manager Jack Heinz of the RKO Alden Theatre, Jamaica. The prize, a new Packard Six, was voted the winner from among the 28 entries submitted.

Five other campaigns were recommended for Honorable Mention and were awarded checks of $50 each by Ned E. Depinet, RKO Distributing Corp. head and by Major Leslie Thompson, RKO Theatre executive. Checks went to S. Wexo, Dyker Theatre, Brooklyn; Saul Schwartz, Albee Theatre, Brooklyn; Bob Ungerfeld, Proctor's Newark; Joseph Di Lorenzo, Proctor's New Rochelle, and Charles M. Oelreich, Proctor's Mount Vernon. Each of the three metropolitan divisions headed by Charles McDonald, H. R. Emdee and Louis Goldberg were represented among the winning entries, with the entire New York campaign under the supervision of John Dowd, RKO Theatres.

Judges were S. Barret McCormick, A-Mike Vogel, Fred Weil and Frank Denton.

The New York contest is separate from the national event, which closes on Nov. 10th, and in which three Packards are to be given for the best campaigns.

Double Opening Used For "Girls' Dormitory"

An effective exploitation campaign for "Girls' Dormitory" was put on by Spyros Cardas, Loew's State, and Dave Fred, Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles, with special announcements made during fall fashion show held at leading department store. Accompanying photo shows attractive window display in store.

Newspaper publicity was planted in eighteen community papers, special announcement made over station KHJ for five broadcasts.

Insurance Company Aids Lamm on "Bride Walks Out"

Local insurance company tied in with Louis Lamm, Warner's Palace, Lorain, Ohio, for "The Bride Walks Out" furnishing him with 3,000 pamphlets on the insuring of wedding presents, front cover showing picture of bride, imprinted with copy on picture, playdates, etc.

Special attractive window display was secured from local florist (see photo), various merchants came through with ads, copy reading "don't let your bride walk out, give her," etc., and Louie invited all couples who had become newlyweds during September to be his guests at the showing.

Air Lines Aid Lafferty On "Ace Drummond" Display

Frame of a full-size, open cockpit plane, propellers, rotary motor, airplane parts and maps obtained by William Lafferty, manager, Warner's Allegheny Theatre, Phila., through a tieup with the Eastern Air Lines made a realistic display for the "Ace Drummond" serial. Display was set up one week in advance of the first chapter showing (see photo). A very interesting panel, and one that repaid the Air Line for their courtesy, was composed of a number of photographs of the "Great Silver Fleet" in flight. Lafferty was assisted by William Finkelstein of the Philadelphia Exchange.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Newspaper Contest Planted By Westwood for "Show Boat"

A special tieup was arranged by Norman Westwood for the "Show Boat" engagement at the Metropol in Shanghai, China, with local newspaper giving one admission for everyone taking a six months' subscription to the paper. In exchange Norman received a half page for four days ahead and during engagement of picture in addition to one full page after first four days of showing.

Local busses were bannered with title, star names and playdates, attractive window displays secured in various stores and front was dressed with cutout title letters approximately five feet high. Westwood also ran personal endorsement ad in paper.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Various Stunts Used By Joiner for "Pastures"

As a result of the campaign put on by Maynard Joiner, Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., for "Green Pactures," the picture chalked up one of the biggest grosses in the history of the theatre. Joiner started his campaign by arranging a tieup with the Liberty magazine distributors in the city, whereby the latter inserted 15,000 heralds, plugging the picture and theatre, in each copy of the magazine.

Special editorial was run in the local News-Herald and special story with a three-column head in the Sunday magazine section of the Vancouver Sun. All book stores and book departments of department stores gave the picture numerous displays, while sixteen leading restaurants in town plugged the picture with counter displays.

Leading hotels and downtown newsstands carried display frames with theatre copy, and stores plugged picture with the mounted page from Liberty magazine showing the rave review which the film received in that magazine.

A number of influential women's societies were contacted for endorsements and recommendations, and the film received special radio plugs prior and throughout engagement. A special front was built for the Granville St. main entrance of the house.

Reactometer in Lobby Sells "Sudden Death"

Assistant John O'Connor, Warner's Parker Theatre, Darby, Pa., for "And Sudden Death" contacted local insurance company for loan of a "reactometer," new test machine to determine time it takes each subject to release accelerator and stamp on brake in emergency. Machine was planted in lobby (see photo) where it created considerable furore, uniformed attendant from automobile club gave the tests.

Traffic towers about town were bannered, half sheets posted on telegraph poles, automobile club distributed folders containing picture imprint and vest pocket programs with plugs were placed in stores and restaurants.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Swing Waltz Contest Held By Wartha for "Swing Time"

In conjunction with local ball room, Arthur J. Wartha, Roxy, Laporte, Ind., for "Swing Time" put on a swing waltz with prizes going to winners. Band constantly played hit tunes from picture and posters were spotted around the ballroom.

Campfire girls were selected to make house to house canvass securing signatures on pledge cards promising to see the picture and have Packard dealer give demonstration of the car. Girls received passes for their efforts.

Art bought a page from daily newspaper and then went out and sold merchants for co-op page, "Swing Time" stickers were pasted on stores' shopping bags and through tieup with Packard dealer, photos of Astaire were given to kiddies.

"Rangers" Booklet Sells

Putting over in London a picture with as definitely an American flavor as "Texas Rangers" was quite a job and to help sell it, Paramount ad chief F. L. C. Thomas created a very attractive booklet in color with lots of smart art and copy. Front cover was etching of mounted Ranger and inside pages detailed cast, photos of stars and their histories, illustrated story of the picture, shots of the Governors of Texas and New Mexico on location, etc.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Special Bally Constructed By Coughlan for "Swing Time"

Used regularly for advertising of coming shows is bally wagon (see photo) constructed by Burt Coughlan, Peoples Theatre, Maynard, Mass., measuring 27½ feet long, seven feet wide and five high, mounted on an old chassis and equipped with headlights and tail light.

Entire bally was done in two shades of blue, sky and medium, trimmed with aluminum. The box with the small black hole enclosed speaker.

For "Swing Time" Burt used photos of Astaire and Rogers set back in frame about eight inches and lighted from inside, all lettering was cut out of wood as were the notes and music bars. Coughlan says at other times he has used live models, depicting a beach scene with bathing beauties, lawn umbrellas, etc., and it has always proved an eye-attractor.

Indianapolis Theatres Have Little Opposition

Annual Memorial Day 500-Mile Automobile Race Is Called Sharpest Competition

by WALTER F. MORSE from Indianapolis

Proud of its classification as the Crossroads of America and one of the typical American cities, Indianapolis is a town where the typical American entertainment, the motion pictures, is snugly in the driver's seat among amusement enterprises.

No other form of entertainment offers severe competition, unless it would be the 200-odd beer taverns. Theatre men assert that tavern activity has hurt them little.

Managers of the fifty-four houses that dot the city find that a considerable proportion of the population makes movie-going habitual, but the number isn't large enough to keep any theatre man sprawled out on a bed of roses. To keep in the black ink the houses must keep their wares constantly in public notice.

Independent Ownership High

Independent ownership predominates. How independent the area is shows graphically in the size of the local staff of Ross Federal, whose checking needs require maintenance of its fourth largest office in Indianapolis, a town that's a good many notches below being the fourth largest city. R. R. Bair operates five theatres, the Tamler Theatre Company, headed by Charles and Nathan Tamler, four, and the Fountain Square Theatre Company, of which Louis B. Golden is president, three. All these are neighborhoods. The Indianapolis Theatrical Management Associates operate the Circle and Indiana, downtown first runs, with Art J. Baker manager. Manny Marcus of Fort Wayne owns three small downtown houses which Carl Niesse manages. Virtually all other operation is singleton.

Neighborhood business is in the foreground with thirty-nine spots, at least seven of which are in the de luxe class. The de luxe houses were built within the decade, the last in 1928, and represent in themselves the last signs of any definite movement in any direction in the Indianapolis theatre business. Since 1930 little change has come in and no startling new pathways are in sight.

Seating Capacities Vary

Seating capacity of the large neighborhood spots ranges from 1,500 to 2,500. All are exceptionally well equipped. These houses, the Granada and the Fountain Square, managed by Earl Cunningham; the Uptown and the Ritz of the Bar chain; the Zaring, operated by E. C. Zaring; the Rivoli, operated by Joseph Cantor, and the Walker (the last a Negro house, managed by Dudley Williston) have done well from the day they opened and continue to draw good business. In 1927 a 3,200-seat downtown house was completed, the Indiana, one of the state's largest houses.

Though the general theatre situation is favorable to motion pictures, showmen in the Hoosier metropolis are kept right on their toes to keep the folks coming to the boxoffice in profitable numbers. It may be the lack of outside opposition or the predominance of independent ownership that accounts for the regularity of sound exploitation campaigns and generous newspaper advertising but whatever the reason Indianapolis theatremen are found to be doing a generally smart job of selling.

This article continues the Round Table's Showman's Travelogue series written by Motion Picture Herald correspondents on the status of the theatre in the world's key cities.

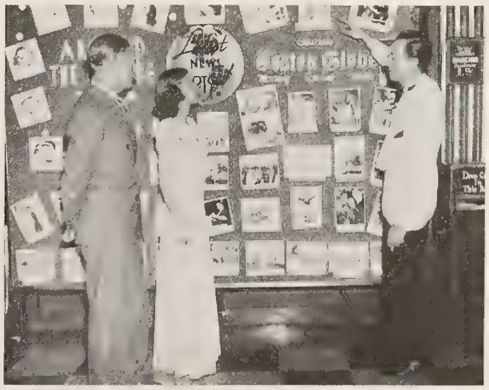
A-MIKE.

Theatre mortality, despite the depression, has been low and not one of the larger houses has come crashing down. The city has one more house now than five years ago and has lost but six from the high-water year, 1925, when there were sixty.

To point this out is to point out an achievement. The Great Unpleasantness that began in Manhattan in 1929 and came howling into Indianapolis in 1930 bowled over a large part of the city's industrial life and snuffed out a glowing expansionist program. In the Twittering 'Twenties glib gentlemen spoke easily of "a million population by 1940," and real estate men bought great stretches of moorland north of town in covetous expectation.

All this is over now. Today the city limits encircle about 370,000 souls and population growth is small. The big merchants draw customers from about a fifty-mile radius with a population totaling 800,000.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"



LOBBY CONTEST. Described in last week's issue, above is shot of Boston Metropolitan Theatres' newspaper tiein on lobby contest, explained by Al Donahue to Dick Merrill and Mary McKim.

Theatres, however, pull from about a thirty-mile radius with 600,000 people. The smaller cities in the area have some pretty foxy theatres of their own and first runs have early showings there.

Indianapolis has a square heart, the Mile Square, within whose limits are the five first-run houses, ten small theatres, most of the office buildings, all the public buildings, virtually all the large department stores and all but three or four of the large hotels. Three-quarters of a century ago the Mile Square held most of the town. It still is the heart of the city, although nowadays most of the industrial plants lie outside it.

Manufacturing and agriculture are the bases of economic activity. In general, wages and salaries are low, with living expenses above what they should be in proportion. Rise in food costs over last year, Department of Labor statistics show, are greater here than in any other city. Utility rates are high. Indianapolis is the only city of comparable size that doesn't own its water works, and it costs to turn on one's faucets.

Admissions Kept Low

In consequence, theatre admission charges must be kept low. First-run houses abide by a 25-40¢ scale, the top in effect after six p. m., except for the occasional ultra-ultra attraction. About a dozen of the tiny downtown and near-downtown houses charge 15 cents to all at all times. Neighborhoods seldom go above a 25 cent top and many have a 15 cent top plus a 20 cent top on Sundays.

At least 310,000 of the residents are native born whites. About 45,000 are Negroes. The colored population increases by several hundred each year, both through natural fecundity and through immigration from Kentucky and Tennessee. Four houses cater to the race, including the Walker, previously mentioned, which seats 1,600 and is equipped, ventilated and decorated on a par with the other large neighborhood houses.

Of the 15,000 not native born, most are Germans and many are Irish, English and Scotch. Southern and Eastern Europeans are few and Oriental population is tiny. First-comers among the Germans and the Irish were prominent in building the city, but there is no Germantown or Irish Hill worthy the name today.

Wages in unskilled labor are apt to be below the $1,000 mark and the skilled worker who reaches $2,000 per annum is doing well. Most white collar workers are moderately paid and business and professional men who pocket $5,000 to $10,000 a year are doing very well indeed. Low incomes, coupled with the inborn frugality of Hoosiers which seldom fails to impress newcomers, provide another reason for low figures on theatre tickets and long hours of work for managers.

These remarks are not intended to imply that decent, dignified living is difficult to achieve in Indianapolis. The people enjoy their homes and use them. Socially inclined but without yearning for large display, the people are friendly and hospitable. Almost one person in every four owns an automobile. Home dwellers far outnumber apartment dwellers and about forty-five per cent of the families own their homes.

INDIANAPOLIS PAPERS COOPERATE

Entirely devoid of the hills or waterfront that provide a natural setting for so many cities, Indianapolis has gone a long distance in creating its own charm. Beautiful homes extend over large residential areas. The city is known for its Circle in the center of the city, where the massive Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument reaches toward the sky in tribute to the fighting men of the Civil War and the Spanish-American War. North of the Circle lies a mighty memorial to World War heroes, providing an open space half a mile in length in the heart of the business district. Ranged around the long memorial plaza are the Public Library, the Post Office building, the American Legion national headquarters, the Scottish Rite Cathedral and the Indiana National Guard Armory, all striking examples of beauty in architecture.

Theatre managers do their share in the civic activities of Indianapolis. In the Christmas season special shows are given for children of the orphanages. Space is granted readily for civic and philanthropic appeals. The Variety Club does much benevolent work, most of it without fanfare. Women's organizations in general are willing to cooperate with exhibitors and with distributors as well, and the civic groups have spoken many a kind word for the movie men.

Automobiles are the favorite way to get to the picture show. This brings a parking problem to many of the neighborhood houses, and probably keeps away some who live beyond walking distance. Downtown houses also face a parking problem, since finding a space for the family bus downtown before nine p. m. is something of a conjurer's trick. A brand-new police drive against parking violations now in progress raises the trick to the status of sawing a woman in half. Out of town showgoers usually surrender early and stable their vehicles in parking lots or garages, many of which are convenient to the downtown houses. The tougher local people, however, give the block a thorough circling before giving in.

Excellent Transportation System

Partially offsetting the automobile problem is the excellence of street-car and bus service. Under a reorganized management the street railway company has installed new equipment on virtually every line, advertised it effectively and cajoled many new strap-hangers. A lot of downtown matinee business comes to the theatres via the public transportation routes.

With its considerable collection of new theatres and gradual abandonment of older ones (one of the eldest was torn down last fall) Indianapolis is considered by its theatre managers as second to no other city of comparable size in comfort and cleanliness of houses. Sound equipment in most instances is improved as rapidly as possible and primitive sound facilities virtually have disappeared. Since the passing of the Golden Era squadrons of ushers looking like the vanguard of the Royal Army of Graustark and drilling in the lobbies with their chins up have vanished. Usher efficiency and courtesy remains, nevertheless. Feminine ushers continue to be the exception rather than the rule.

Another facet of the Indianapolis movie situation isn't dimmed by anything similar elsewhere, even in some of the larger towns. This is newspaper advertising and newspaper cooperation. In 1935 the theatres poured $203,000 into the columns of the three daily newspapers. Advertising men say that 1936 will bring at least $250,000.

First Runs Heavy Advertisers

The five first-run houses, Loew's, managed by L. Ward Farrar; the Apollo, managed by Kenneth Collins; the Lyric, guided by Charley Olsen and Ted Nicholas; the Indiana and Circle, take the bulk of the newspaper space, crashing with large ads on the days when shows change. Many of the neighborhood shows are represented steadily, although with smaller ads. The neighborhoods are great fellows for depositing calendars of their attractions for the month on everybody's doorstep and for advertising in the weekly neighborhood newspapers. It should be noted that the calendars and other circulars left on doorsteps invariably are well printed on good quality stock and are many leagues upward in attractiveness from the ante-bellum "dodgers."

The dailies give considerable space to the shows and each of the three large newspapers comes close to running a full page a day of theatre ads, news, reviews and features. The motion picture is the first concern of the dramatic critics, since stage and concert appearances are few. Some syndicated cartoons and feature material are used and all three newspapers favor the daily chatter from Hollywood sent by the Associated Press and the United Press. Visits in town of motion picture stars (and even directors) are good for interviews and pictures, even on days when the news is running strong and heavy.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

WRECKED BALLY. To sell "And Sudden Death" at the Rivoli Theatre, Philadelphia, I. J. Segall planted wrecked car in front of his house during entire run of attraction to build attention.

The one Sunday newspaper devotes a section to the movies, featuring both its own critics and New York and Hollywood special writers, and is generous in the use of film star pictures in the gravure section. On all three papers movie comment is friendly in tone and it is rare when a reviewer goes out of his way to make smart cracks against the shows. Occasionally a critic may say a picture "isn't strictly good for all the family," but public furore over the morals of the movies is scarce.

Walter Whitworth, drama, literary and art critic of the Indianapolis News, scans the cinemas for readers of his newspaper in a daily column, "Movies 'n' Everything." Members of the staff assist him frequently. The News usually fills out the page on which movie ads appear with Associated Press and United Press items and pictures about the stars and happenings on the lots.

Corbin Patrick, motion picture and music critic of the Star, also conducts a daily column, and he runs quite freely to personal mention of local movie personalities. Both Patrick and Robert G. Tucker, dean of Indianapolis dramatic critics, contribute reviews to the daily and Sunday Star. The Sunday Star uses Hubbard Keavy's stuff from the AP and Kelly Woolpert of the UP, while both daily and Sunday carry the cartoon feature by Feg Murray, "Seein' Stars."

In the Indianapolis Times John W. Thompson, youthful critic, does a daily piece, occasionally assisted by James Thrasher, music critic. The Times uses a good deal of pictures on movies and special articles from Paul Harrison and others of NEA; Ruth McTammany of Scripps-Howard and from the United Press.

Many Tie-Ups Made

Tieups in many directions are of steady occurrence. Spectacular ballyhoo is seldom attempted. In general, exploitation is kept within limits that make it secure from offending public taste. Window cards—seldom of the giant and blatant sort—are accepted by many merchants. The drug stores and even the groceries tie-up frequently and the Gloria Whoozis Sundae still is on sale in some pharmacies when Gloria plays Indianapolis. Classified advertising sections of the daily newspapers are a steady tie-up connection, with guessing contests and other features offering Annie Oakleys being used.

Broadway shows on tour make short and not-so-frequent visits to the Hoosier capital. Their following is loyal but not large and their presence means little to the movie men. Concert and lecture appearances are in the same category. Sports of the summer months cut in quite a little and the two amusement parks do their share in nibbling at the edges of summer grosses. Summertime sizzles in Indianapolis, however, and the lads and lassies who like to step into a refrigerated theatre off the pavements

"SWING TIME" SETPIECE IN BOSTON AND STREET BALLY ON "DODSWORTH" IN SYRACUSE

Hal Grady Sells "Suzy" With Cartoon Teaser Ads

The folks down in Lubbock, Texas, were a bit excited during the campaign put on by Hal Grady ahead of his "Suzy" date at the Palace what with his teaser ads were of the cartoon type as illustrated to left and right below run daily for five days in all and other teaser stunts.

Picture postcards were mailed from nearby Roswell, New Mexico to local housewives with a message from "Susy" saying that she would be in town shortly, dates included. Street stunts included tiein with Western Union messenger boys carrying "Suzy" teaser cards on bicycles and old-time Ford bally was worked the same way. Also featured was stunt wherein ushers carried giant letters which spelled out the title.

Molasses kisses were distributed attached to which were cards reading "Here's a real kiss from Jean Harlow—Suzy to you," local beauty school advertised for operators to learn how to design the "Suzy" coiffure and classified ad contest was planted in the Avalanche-Journal consisting of cross-word puzzle, center of which contained cut of Tone, Harlow and Grant, with guest tickets awarded winners and publicised by the paper.

For lobby display Hal used a large oil painting of Harlow, ten-foot compo board cutout title letters were planted atop marquee and waitresses from nearby restaurant all wore imprinted sashes.

Center of display was taken up by revolving panel, first showing stars in dance pose as in above and then revolving to copy on the Jerome Kern music. The setpiece made a smash display and attracted the throngs passing through the arcade of the theatre where the showing was arranged.

McWhorter's Street Bally

Jerry McWhorter, assistant manager, Capitol Theatre, Chicago, for "Sons o' Guns," dressed up an usher in raccoon coat, galoshes and comic glasses and had him parade streets with back banner reading: "If you think I'm nuts, wait till you," etc., etc. From American Legion, Jerry promoted machine gun, shells and other paraphernalia for lobby display and had ticket taker wear German uniform with peaked helmet and medals and picture copy on his back.

McBride Promotes Magicians For "Dodsworth" Bally

There was a convention held recently in Syracuse of the New York State Society of Magicians during which Ed McBride was playing "Dodsworth" at Loew's State. So to give the magic-eers a bit of a newspaper break and also to build up attention for the picture, Ed arranged the bally illustrated in photo above right.

Fire department was tied in with the loan of a ladder-truck with member of the society in a straightjacket hung by the feet from end of raised ladder and shaking himself loose. Jacket of course was lettered with the title and as the bally was put on in front of the house quite a lot of the folks who gathered around were directly contacted.

Bazooka Contest Used By Simmons for "Range"

A bazooka blowing contest was staged by Thomas J. Simmons, Dunlap Theatre, Clarksville, Ark., for "Rhythm on the Range" the Saturday night before picture opened, explanation of how this unique musical instrument is constructed together with picture plugs were made.

Various window displays were planted in leading stores, 24-sheet stand was placed in burned out store and for his lobby display Tom made up a display from stock one-sheet and personal letter from Bob Burns.

Basketball Games Cut Down Receipts

number a good many thousands.

The sharpest competition of all lasts but twenty-four or thirty hours. That's the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway each Memorial day. Tens of thousands of fans pour into town and they don't give a look at a theatre door. What might otherwise be a good holiday business is knocked for a row of cocked hats. Every year in March the state high school basketball tournament ("when a boy is born in Indiana the parents toss a coin to decide whether he'll be an author or a basketball player" runs an old saying) cuts into cinema receipts for about three week-ends.

In general, Indianapolis is a slightly above average show town. The expression "it's a poor show town," is sometimes heard, but the remark is based on comparisons with Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis, cities where the ingrained popular bent toward public amusements is far stronger than ordinary.

CLARENCE WILLIFORD

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies, Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

The Bluebook School

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 43

Bluebook School Question No. 43 was: (A) Assuming some reasonable proof of ability should be exacted before a projectionist is employed, set forth your views as to ten questions it would be proper for the prospective employer to ask. (B) Do or do you not believe membership in a union should stop employers examining men sent by a union to be employed as projectionist?

For obvious reasons names are not published this time. Here are some of the answers to Section A: "Perhaps the first question should be, where have you been employed, for how long in each place, and just why was the connection severed? The answers could of course be checked up on. Second, what do you think of our equipment as compared with other equipments with which you are familiar? (This would indicate whether or not the applicant possessed knowledge and understanding of equipments and those things in use in his profession.) Third, what are your views as to the treatment of film while in your possession? How would you treat new prints? What various steps would you take to prevent film damage? Fourth, what steps would you take tending to prevent fire, and should one occur, what steps would you take and in just what order? Fifth, there should be a practical test of both eyesight and hearing. Sixth, what would you do in case of loss of sound. (True the prospective employer probably could not follow through on some of the answers, but the readiness and clarity of the reply would nevertheless convey a definite idea as to how well the man understood his business.) Seventh, have the applicant project one reel, watching him thread up and handle the light and sound. Eighth, what character of screen surface does this theatre require, and why? Ninth, name the inspections of equipment you would make and how often would you make them. Tenth, what projection text books do you own, and what publications do you subscribe to? This being designed as an indication as to whether or not the applicant studies his business."

Another says, "(1) In case of a film break what would you do? (2) In case of fire what would you do? (3) In case of sound failure, what would you do? (4) Outline film inspection routine tending to prevent trouble during the show. (5) Outline care of projection machinery and equipments. (6) Outline necessary inspections and care for sound system. (7) Describe care you regard as necessary for lamphouse and lamp, motors and generators. (8) What is your idea as to changeover detail procedure? (9) Concerning past experience, what shut-downs have you had and what was their reasons? (10) What are your views as to liquor and as to smoking while on duty?"

Still another suggests: "(1) Do you realize it your duty as a projectionist to exert every possible effort to present the screen program in such manner that eye strain will be reduced to a minimum? (2) At what minimum rate of speed should the fire shutter rise and fall? 3) Explain briefly how you would proceed to trace down cause of complete loss of sound. (4) Are you capable of making emergency repairs and replacements of ordinary nature? (5) How would you trace out the cause of noisy sound? (6) Are your eyesight and hearing normal? (7) Why is minimum tension at the projector aperture of importance? (8) How often should mirrors and lenses be cleaned? Describe your method of cleaning them. (9) Name the reasons why shutter blades of precisely correct width be used. (10) What knowledge is necessary to the selection of proper screen surface for any theatre?"

One "student" commented: "This is what I would call a tough question. In other words, the field of projection covers such a wide scope that to ask a man just ten questions that would prove or show his ability would be quite an undertaking. I went through the Bluebook chapter by chapter, seeking in each one to find the most important questions, but hadn't gone far before I had a list well over the ten asked for. I then showed this question No. 43 to the manager of this theatre and asked how he would treat the same. His answer was that he would go mainly by past experience and what the man being questioned knew of sound. Then in the discourse popped up the question of how many managers could give an examination or knew enough about projection to conduct an intelligent examination, and in checking over a known list of quite a number we found very few. Of course, there are the general routine questions that might be asked, such as knowledge of the equipment being used, types of oils and greases for lubrication, understanding of generator or whatever power source is being used, projector, light, screens, sound and trouble shooting. Other than this I must confess I am stumped and will await with interest to see how the other members of the school reply to this question. Or have I misunderstood the question?

(B) I have selected an answer to this section which seems eminently reasonable and fair. I very thoroughly agree with it throughout. When the time has come, as come it must, that men can only obtain admission to unions when thoroughly competent, as in the case of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, then an examination would be superfluous. But, as must be admitted by all men who have competent knowledge of affairs, that point is not yet reached. Freely granted that very many theatre managers and exhibitors are incapable of conducting a competent examination, still, they are employing a man to have charge of thousands of dollars worth of valuable machinery, hence it is pure nonsense to say they may be stopped from a reasonable attempt to satisfy themselves as to the matter of competency. Here is the reply to Section B: "I do not believe that membership in a union should prevent employers from examining members sent to them for employment.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 48

Assume your feed circuit from main board to projection room switchboard to be of No. 4 rubber-covered commercial copper; length, 98 feet; load under normal conditions, 70 amperes; circuit in use nine years but never overloaded. Tell us what is its rated capacity and what is its voltage drop at full load. If current (a.c.) costs 4 cents per Kw. hour and the hours of operation are six per day, seven days per week, what is the loss due to voltage drop? Would you advise larger wires?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

"Although a fine theatre throughout is a decided advantage, nevertheless the presentation of the picture on the screen is the one most important factor which makes for the popularity of the theatre. Why, then, should a manager not have the right to try to make sure that projection in his theatre will be the best?

"If a union is all that it stands for, it certainly should not fear an examination of one of its members by the employer, as to his ability as a projectionist. If the members are all competent and worthy of the title Projectionist, why should they object to a bit of questioning? If any one of the members is lacking in ability, his membership in the union surely must be a mistake. Although I hold unions in high respect and esteem, I do believe that they should permit an employer to examine their members if he so desires."

TELEVISION, TODAY

AFTER last week's pretentious demonstration of television to date, by the Radio Corporation of America in New York, it is entirely safe to affirm that it is just where it has been these several years—"around the corner."

Television today can present in a range of about twenty-five miles of the costly broadcasting station, through the medium of a costly receiver, a picture of about the size and quality of a small photogelatine lobby display still on a state's rights picture that the producer didn't care for very much. If there is any way to make it better, it has not occurred to the research engineers yet. They would like a new basic principle and a device for amplifying light as they can sound. That appears to be quite a distance around the corner.

Last week's demonstration gave a deal of attention to various persons but none to Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin, credited with the devising of the iconoscope, the electrical scanning device on which present television now depends, most completely.

The world's greatest optimist on television to be heard from these days is Mr. David Sarnoff, who seems to think it may come along in the next ten years. There are a number of other matters probably considerably more important to the exhibitor for the interim.

SCREEN ADVERTISING

THE coming of advertising pictures to the screens of many theatres involves the art of exhibition most definitely in the business of publication, and with that step brings new problems and complexities. Immediate exemplification is afforded in a dispatch to Motion Picture Daily saying:

"SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 9.—The City Council has declined to rescind its action in passing an ordinance calling for an annual levy of $200 on each theatre for screen advertising.

"One member of the council, defending its action, asserted that 'theatre patrons have to pay to see these advertisements and they have to see them whether they want to or not, unless they leave the show. Inasmuch as newspapers are taxed on their income, and advertising provides their greatest source of income, theatres should also be taxed for advertising'."

The newspaper press tends ever to view with alarum all that may savour of competition. In the early days of the motion picture newsreel, when it was suspected that possibly it might be or become a medium of news, the papers gave hostile expression. There was another wave, of times recurrent, and yet to be heard from, of opposition to the radio, both as a purveyor of news and a competitor for advertising dollars. The newspapers are not sure yet what their attitude is going to be about television, for the same reason, or reasons. Another ripple of concern is now running through the press because of a yet inconspicuous project among theatres to present news bulletins from the stage nightly.

Probably as a result of all this, nothing much will occur to prevent the natural and well-near inevitable development of all of the media of communication and expression—including advertising.

Meanwhile it is certain to become obvious that the motion picture will always have to pay its way in the newspapers as elsewhere. The fact is that the motion picture always has, in one fashion or another.

It is not commonly pointed up conspicuously, but it is nonetheless true, that motion pictures and their personalities are made definitely a part, and a very considerable part, of the merchandise of that amusement institution which we call the daily press. That army of correspondents in Hollywood, not less than two hundred and fifty of them, is there not for the purpose of cooperation with motion pictures as consumers of advertising but as producers of personality copy which the newspapers can sell to their readers.

Our hectic contemporary Time says that "names make news." Now it happens that the motion picture, above all of the other arts and industries, makes names. That is why the newspapers cover Hollywood with quite as much diligence as they cover Washington. Screen made news is one thing—and screen made advertising space is quite another.

The questions raised pertain to the individual showman and his theatre, his screen. His course will ever be determined by his audience and its acceptances. He will, however, find that the conduct of an advertising medium is not exactly parallel with the operation of an amusement institution, even if the job is all done through one machine. Also the theatre will tend to stand in a different position not alone with the press but with governmental bodies and all manner of public institutions and manifestations when it departs from its basic function of purveying entertainment.

This Week

Self-Regulation

Self-regulation for the motion picture is at hand, major distributors commencing this week, starting with Universal, to accede to the MPTOA's ten-point program for establishing fair trade practices, to establish harmonious relations between exchanges and theatres.

This new milestone in motion picture progress is reported on page 13.

Musicians' Round

The first victory for musicians in their drive to restore stage shows and orchestras to motion picture theatres came this week in Pittsburgh where the Stanley theatre will resume stage presentations as soon as bookings can be made under an agreement reached with the musicians after six months of negotiation. Local 802 of American Federation of Musicians, leading group in the campaign, is conducting the drive in New York with unabated enthusiasm. Endorsements have been received from many unions in other fields and musicians' locals in other cities are reported to be considering similar drives.

Further news will be found on page 66.

Hearst Name Off Reel

The name of Hearst went off the screen this week with the changing of the main title of Hearst Metrotone News, distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to "News of the Day," effective with issue number 215. This action was taken after a year of various protests and demonstrations in theatres against William Randolph Hearst, publisher. These uprisings and expressions came from Communists and militant leftists, beginning most conspicuously with students at Williamstown, Mass. Other activities of protest centered about Loew theatres in New York, bringing home office attention.

Mr. Hearst's name has been on the screen only some four years, in connection with the sound newsreel, save for an early period beginning with the founding of the Hearst Selig Weekly in Chicago in February, 1914. For all the years between the Hearst newsreels through various releasing channels have carried the name "International," derived from his International News wire service. It was at the break from silent to sound technique and from Universal Pictures Corporation to MGM that Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of Hearst picture enterprises, decided on the change of name to detach the product from its silent past.

Under its new name the reel as "News of the Day" proceeds in production and all other aspects precisely as before. The development of the week will appear to many observers as of special interest in that Mr. Hearst's newsreel has in fact, and conspicuously, never been for him a medium of personal expression or concerned with purveying his editorial policies. His newsreel has been marked by its neutrality and general conformity to the conventions of newsreel production, differing from its contemporaries mainly in the acute attention of its editor, Michael Clofine, to what newspapers call "feature and human interest" material. The protests expressed in theatre demonstrations took their origin elsewhere.

Mr. Hearst is now in New York and the current change of title on his newsreel has obviously been made with his consent. That is not, however, necessarily to imply either approval or a final decision without sequels.

Easing Quota Burden

A quota ruling that may prove of great significance in England has been made by the magistrate of the Old Street Police Court in London. The jurist dismissed a summons against an exhibitor who in a test case had pleaded that there was not a sufficient number of pictures of entertainment value available to him. The jurist held that "it was not commercially practicable" for the theatreman to exhibit the full amount of British pictures required under the Act.

Details on page 85.

Impasse in Italy

American distributors have ceased exporting films to Italy and no pictures will be sent there until the deadlock over stringent regulations put into effect by the Italian Government is resolved. The Italian board controlling imports will not grant visas for American pictures unless the distributors agree to leave 75 per cent of the revenue from the showings in the country. This money cannot be spent without the permission of the Mussolini Government and permission will be granted only for its expenditure for motion picture purposes, including production. A protest has been lodged by United States Ambassador William Phillips.

The story is on page 57.

June Caprice Dead

June Elizabeth Millarde, actress, known on the silent screen as June Caprice, died this week in the Cedars of Lebanon hospital in Hollywood. She was born in 1899 in Arlington, Mass.

In 1916, when every producer was trying to find a "second Mary Pickford," William Fox announced he had succeeded and presented Miss Caprice to the public in "Caprice of the Mountains." Among the other pictures in which she appeared were "A Modern Cinderella," "The Ragged Princess," "A Child of the Wild," "Every Girl's Dream," "Miss U. S. A.," "Sunshine Maid," "In Walked Mary," "Rogues and Romance" and "The Sky Rangers." Miss Caprice was under contract to both the Fox and Pathe companies and made several pictures in the old Pathe studio in New York.

Courts to Decide

The perennial controversy between distributors, circuits and independent subsequent exhibitors stands ready for review by the United States courts, independents in the midwest taking their dispute over clearance in that territory to the highest tribunal.

The independents advance a 29-point claim, as explained on page 23.

Scalping the Scalpers

Amended regulations to prevent amusement tax evasion by ticket scalpers and others who deal in admission tickets in excess of the ordinary cost, were issued this week in Washington by the Internal Revenue Bureau. All persons or organizations required by law to pay taxes on charges in excess of established prices of admission to amusement places hereafter must keep an accurate record of their daily business available for periodical inspection by the Internal Revenue agents.

Exhibitors Elect

Activities of seven exhibitor groups last week included reelection of Fred Delodder as president of Allied Theatres of Michigan and of Roy R. Bair as president of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. The MPTO of Western Pennsylvania has launched a membership drive and the MPTO of Oklahoma has set December 14th and 15th for its annual gathering.

News of exhibitor organizations is on page 46.

Blue Laws and Taxes

Blue law and tax legislation contrary to exhibitor interest was agitated in several states, acted upon in some, favorable and unfavorable decisions approximately balancing.

A resume of the situation is published on page 57.

Star Broadcasts

The Harvard Club of New York was the scene late last week of a gathering of motion picture executives and representatives of both National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System to discuss the socalled "unfair competition" of screen stars' broadcasts. This informal gathering was the first tangible move to settle interrelated problems confronting both industries.

A report on the meeting and plans of the industry to settle the problem are found on page 18.

New Sales Methods

A survey, aimed directly at the problems facing the exhibitor in connection with not only pictures but also star values, exploitation, trailers and advertising, was completed this week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives. Out of this survey came a questionnaire, the answers to which will determine the future advertising and exploitation policy of the company.

The results of the survey are found in the story on page 44.

Television Tryout

What may be termed a press preview of television as an entertainment medium was given by National Broadcasting company November 6th when 200 journalists witnessed as guests of the organization a 40-minute program made up of addresses by executives, performances by radio personalities and motion picture subjects.

A detailed story appears on page 19.

William Fox in Contempt

William Fox stands in contempt of court, under a decision of the United States supreme court's ruling on the New York district court suit in which the Capital Company, of California, obtained a judgment for some $250,000 against Mr. Fox. Failure of Mr. Fox to appear in New York brought the contempt order, from which he appealed to the Supreme Court at Washington.

See page 57.

NBC Ten Years Old

The National Broadcasting Company and commercial radio broadcasting this week is celebrating its 10th anniversary. The celebration opened with a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria in New York, with 1,600 in attendance and with felicitations from President Roosevelt from Washington. David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, was toastmaster. Speakers included representatives from several European countries.

Details of the celebration, as well as highlights of these 10 years of the company, are found in the story on page 68.

Product Level

Upward turned the index of Hollywood production in a week that saw eleven pictures placed before the camera while only six were being taken to the cutting room.

For titles and personnel, see page 43.

Issues Go to New Highs

Motion picture issues are reacting with new highs to heavy increases in profits reported by the large companies, and Wall Street looks to further dividend payments as a result of the upward movement in income. This week, adding to other net increases already reported, Twentieth Century-Fox announced a $4,451,851 profit for 39 weeks; RCA reported a $1,083,604 for the third quarter, and Warner Brothers is expected to show a $3,000,000 net for the year when it makes its annual announcement of financial condition next week.

The state of the motion picture financially is reported on page 37.

Drop Nazi Films

Two short subjects, prepared by Pete Smith from pictures taken at the winter Olympics in Germany last year and sold to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by American-Tobis, have been withdrawn from exhibition in the United States after a protest lodged with Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM and Loew's, Inc., by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights.

The story of the League's first engagement with a major distributor and the details of the meeting are in the story on page 31.

MGM Expands Checking

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will install its own checking system in Detroit, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Albany, Colonel E. A. Schiller announced following a weekend meeting in Cleveland of managers of those exchanges with Jack Flynn, district manager, and Alan Cummings. The plan is already in effect in the company's offices at New York, Washington, New Haven and Boston.

Convicted of Coercion

The Argentine Association of Film Distributors in Buenos Aires, formed principally of American motion picture companies, has been found guilty of "coercive measures" in a suit charging extortion, illicit association and violation of the anti-trust laws, the United Press reported this week. The court suspended sentence.

The association is composed of United Artists Corporation, Universal Pictures Company, Inc., Warner Brothers-First National. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount Pictures, Columbia Pictures, RKO, Fox Film Corporation and two Argentine distributors.

The suit was instituted by Hector J. Bini, whose connection therewith was not revealed. Evidence was established that the importers and distributors composing the association fixed the rental price of films, the time and form under which they could be distributed, and admission prices to theatres. It also was charged that they refused to rent films to certain theatres.

WPA Radio Shows

Word in Washington that the New Deal's wholesale participation in theatricals may bring a Congressional investigation this winter is not deterring the WPA from proceeding with plans to launch a nationwide NBC vaudeville show in radio within two weeks.

The Government's position today in old and new theatrical ventures is explained on page 25.

This Week in Pictures

ROYAL ENTERTAINMENT. (Right). The Crown Prince of Sweden, Princess Sibylla and the Princes Gustaf Adolf and Karl Johan attended the opening of "Mary of Scotland," RKO-Radio production, at the Palladium theatre in Stockholm.

WELCOME HOME. Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Farmer, of Seattle, meet their daughter, Frances, on her arrival home for the world premiere of her United Artists picture, "Come and Get It."

BETWEEN PICTURES. (Left). Constance Cummings, following completion of her second GB production, "Strangers on a Honeymoon," returned to the United States for a visit between assignments.

SEEKING CAREER. M. Robert Guggenheim, Jr., 26, resigned from the mining company founded by his grandfather, Daniel Guggenheim, to seek a motion picture career. He begins, at 26, by checking production supplies at the Selznick International studio.

BETWEEN DRENCHES. Margot, starred in the stage and screen versions of "Winterset," wears this terry-cloth robe between scenes shot on the artificially rain-swept stages of RKO Radio.

NEW PERSONALITY. (Right) Dolly Haas, European star, came to America to be present at the premiere of "Broken Blossoms," the Imperial production introducing her to the United States.

TO LONDON. Douglas Fairbanks and Mrs. Fairbanks have returned to London where the veteran actor and producer will complete his script for "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which Samuel Goldwyn will produce, under a one-picture contract, for United Artists distribution.

REFRESHED. Back from a refreshing tour of Europe is Dudley Nichols, adaptor of "Mary of Scotland" and "The Plough and the Stars," and ready to commence upon "Robber Barons," his next for RKO-Radio.

PEACE CONFERENCE. Spanky McFarland as the general of the title, Ralph Morgan as the Union general and Alfalfa Switzer as first assistant general call to momentary halt the not so belligerent warfare which these three and others conduct in "General Spanky," the Hal Roach feature picture marking the producer's departure from a traditional policy of short subject production.

VACATION ENDS. Ricardo Cortez, Warner-First National player, and Mrs. Cortez return to America after a European vacation during which they visited British studios and renewed acquaintanceships.

ZUKOR JUBILEE VOLUNTEERS. Shirley Ross, Sir Guy Standing, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland and Eleanore Whitney are five of fourteen Paramount contract players who have volunteered to serve as honorary captains of the various sales districts during the company's Silver Jubilee in honor of Adolph Zukor's quarter century of prominence in the industry.

DISTRIBUTORS ACCEDING TO EXHIBITORS' PLAN OF SELF-REGULATION

The hour has finally arrived for establishment of voluntary self-regulation governing distribution and exhibition under an accepted law of fair trade practice, in order thereby to create a harmonious relationship between the buyer and seller of motion pictures.

Eight months of bargaining for a mutually satisfactory sales standard between sales heads and exhibitors are crystallizing this week into a workable instrument for eliminating most of the discord, and also much of the open court airing of trade disputes over product and terms, not only between distributors and theatre owners, but among exhibitors themselves.

Large distributors, with the new Universal Pictures of the Cowdin-Cochrane interests taking the lead, are now beginning to accede to the 10-point program of fair trade practices advanced last April in behalf of the country's exhibitors by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Exhibitor Unit at Philadelphia Threatens to Picket Exchanges

The picketing of Philadelphia exchanges and theatres of their customers is threatened by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware in its current bulletin as a means of combatting "unfair" sales policies by large distributors.

A special meeting of the organization has been called for Friday morning at Philadelphia's Hotel Broadwood at which high film rentals, "unfair" selling of product, national support in a fight "against MGM's policy," the advisability of date strikes on a national basis and the exchange of ideas for greater protection of the exhibitors' rights are all scheduled for discussion.

In the same bulletin it was announced that Grand National would revise its sales policy to permit Philadelphia exhibitors to buy the company's pictures on a flat rental basis. This change came as a result of a meeting held last week between Grand National executives and members of the exhibitor group.

Universal's formal and official notification of acceptance, the first, came abruptly last Saturday morning. Sidney R. Kent later declared Twentieth Century-Fox is ready, and Paramount is expected to make public a statement on Friday, with notices of at least partial acceptance of the program coming later from some of the remaining companies.

The beginning of adoption by the distributors of the MPTOA's program came almost within the same hour last weekend as reports from Washington that the sweeping approval of the New Deal on Election Day probably will bring renewed efforts by the Administration to reenact some form of NRA code legislation for operations of industries.

Indications that such effort will not be confined alone to an NRA "Blue Eagle" governing hours and wages of workers came later in the week when the National Council for Industrial Progress made an unexpected The Council said Wednesday that American industries everywhere will be invited to attend conferences at Washington early in December looking to voluntary codes of trade practice.

See Conference Call

The National Council is an official United States Government agency under the New Deal. While it has no formal powers, it was established at the time of the dissolution of the NRA to set out on a campaign to persuade industries to adopt fair trade practices voluntarily. John Gregg Paine was named chairman for the amusement business, which, like all other lines, ignored the original invitations of the Council a year ago to meet in their respective groups to discuss the possibilities of such voluntary regulation. Major George L. Berry again will act as administrator of the Council.

Persons in the motion picture industry who have been close observers of code matters, both during the NRA and subsequently, hold the opinion that the National Council now probably feels that the talk which has developed on the subject of a possibly revived NRA since President Roosevelt's reelection gives the Council the opportunity to attempt a pretentious Washington conference with American business, including the motion picture.

Others to Follow

The distributors' present agreement to undertake voluntary self-regulation is the most significant in the motion picture's long history of inter-trade disputes and countless efforts to arrive at some equitable basis for self-regulation. These were climaxed when the New Deal first foisted its "Blue Eagle" code on a mixed motion picture trade opinion.

Definite assurances that other large distributors will follow Universal's adoption of the program have been given to the MPTOA. Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox on Monday had declared that his company already had definitely decided on the concessions it will grant exhibitors under the plan. Warner Brothers, however, have said that they would not participate.

Word came Tuesday that Paramount is prepared to grant exhibitors an unconditional privilege to cancel 10 per cent of the company's complete picture schedule and will approve the establishment of local conciliation boards, as part of its concessions.

Indications are that the company will not agree to use of the Short Form Contract or to elimination of the score charge. It will take a stand against the forcing of shorts with features, against the granting of unfair clearance and against knowingly aiding an exhibitor in overbuying of product.

Three Points Accepted

Not all of the distributors are expected to agree on all of the 10 points. Universal, for instance, refuses to accede to a uniform contract.

Universal gave exhibitors its assurance of:

(1) Extending a 10 per cent cancellation privilege under liberalized conditions;

(2) Maintaining its policy of not endeavoring to collect a score charge; and

(3) Cooperating in establishment of local conciliation boards through which the exhibitors hope that most of the other trade practice reforms may be effectuated.

R. H. Cochrane, president of the new Universal, on Saturday made formal reply to the proposals put forth by the board of directors and the executive committee of the MPTOA, looking towards greater cooperation between distributors and exhibitors. The reply was in the form of a letter addressed by Mr. Cochrane to Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president. Mr. Cochrane's letter answers emphatically and in detail every point of the MPTOA program, as follows:

Dear Mr. Kuykendall:

Mr. Grainger and I have carefully considered the proposals put forth by the board of directors and the executive committee of the MPTOA as outlined in your general bulletin and are now prepared to state to you Universal's reaction to these proposals with the intention of giving you our utmost cooperation.

I shall deal with the proposals as numbered by you in the bulletin.

1. Universal is willing to continue its policy of allowing any exhibitor who has contracted for Universal's entire program the privilege of cancelling ten per cent of the pictures so contracted for, provided that the exhibitor has performed his exhibition contract up to the time that he desires to avail himself of the right to cancel. We are willing to waive the provision that cancellation is limited to pictures renting for less than $250.00 and we are also willing to modify the provision requiring notice of cancellation within fourteen days of release date. However, with respect to this feature you will appreciate that some time must be fixed within which our exchanges must be notified of cancellation and we would suggest that notice be given within ten days after notice of availability is mailed to the exhibitor. We will also have to work out a provision so that the exhibitor will not be permitted to exercise the right of cancellation as to too many pictures in the early part of his contract.

As to sub-division B of this proposal, we of course cannot increase the cancellation privilege to more than ten per cent as a general policy. Situations where an exhibitor cannot reasonably be asked to play more than ninety per cent of our product are now adequately dealt with through the medium of selective contracts.

2. We are in complete sympathy with your proposal to establish conciliation boards provided that satisfactory machinery shall be set up and in this connection we suggest that provision should be made limiting the matters which may be brought before such boards so that the members of the industry who are generous enough to give of their time and energy to the administration of such boards will not find themselves in the position of devoting more time to the hearing of petty disputes than they have available for the management of their own business.

3. With respect to clearance, Universal has never granted and never will grant to any exhibitor clearance which is known to us to be unreasonable. We note your suggestion that there should be established a uniform maximum clearance and we can see certain advantages in such a plan but we regretfully advise you that in our opinion the decisions of the federal courts in actions brought by exhibitors have made our adherence to any plan for uniform clearance improper.

4. With respect to your suggestions regarding over-buying of pictures, we feel that this is a matter which can be cured not by distributors but by exhibitors. This company never knows at the time it contracts with an exhibitor for our product whether or not the exhibitor is over-buying. We do not consult with our competitors as to how much, if any, product they may have sold any particular exhibitor. It is our policy to license our product in each situation to our customer upon terms which will result in the maximum benefit to him and to the company as a whole and we cannot subscribe to any plan which would affect this policy. We note that under this heading you have included an objection to double features. Everybody knows that Universal has taken a definite stand against restrictions on double features. We have no quarrel with distributors who desire to provide in their exhibition contracts that their pictures may not be double featured but Universal will not adopt any such restriction as a national policy.

TEN-POINT PROGRAM FOR SELF-REGULATION

On the afternoon of Thursday, April 16th, in the Rose Room of the Cinema Club adjoining the Hotel Algonquin, in New York, exhibitors of America, as represented by the MPTOA, presented to distributors a program for establishing self-regulation and creating harmonious relations between exchange and theatre through a set of fair trade practices. Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, made the presentation, together with a committee of exhibitor leaders composed of Charles W. Williams, Omaha; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; Jack Miller, Chicago, and Oscar C. Lam, Georgia.

Accepting the program for the distributors, for consideration, were: William F. Rodgers, MGM; Neil F. Agnew, Paramount; James R. Grainger, Universal; Paul N. Lazarus, United Artists; Jules Levy, RKO; John D. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Abe Montague, Columbia.

The program, which subsequently was the subject of many lengthy discussions and controversies provided for ten basic improvements, as follows:

1. Removal of all restrictions on cancellation privileges, and an increase in the present 10 per cent elimination to 20 per cent.

2. Establishment of local conciliation boards for adjusting trade disputes.

3. Creation of fair and reasonable uniform clearance and zoning.

4. Elimination of unfair overbuying that reduces the product supply of a competitive owner.

5. Abolition of unfair "cut-rate" competition in the form of premiums, giveaways, lotteries, two-for-one coupons, merchant and "advertising" tickets, pseudo-contests, double and triple featuring, unreasonably low admission prices, and such.

6. Control of unfair nontheatrical exhibitions.

7. Creation of a standard form of exhibition contract reduced to essentials in language and text.

8. Elimination of the score charge.

9. Discontinuance of arbitrarily designated play-dates.

10. Elimination of the practice of forcing short subjects with features.

5. This deals entirely with exhibitors. Needless to say, we are in complete sympathy with anything you can accomplish toward eliminating the practices referred to in this paragraph, but here again we suggest that this is a matter that must be handled by exhibitors rather than by distributors.

6. As to non-theatrical exhibitions of motion pictures produced by us for amusement purposes, this company never licenses a picture to a non-theatrical account where there is any real possibility of unfair competition with one of its customers.

7. With respect to your proposal in favor of a uniform exhibition contract, we can see advantages that might accrue to the industry from the use of such a form, but we believe that the decision of the United States Supreme Court and decisions of other courts have precluded us from becoming a party to the use of a uniform contract.

Some years ago I spent a few of the toughest weeks of my life as a member of a committee composed of exhibitors and distributors in an effort to work out a uniform contract. After a lot of argument we reached a unanimous verdict in the form of what we thought was a perfect uniform contract. In other words, a document which was completely satisfactory to exhibitors and distributors as well as to producers. Some time later the whole job was tossed out of the window by the court, and ever since then I have been gun-shy on the subject of uniform contracts.

In this connection we refer to your suggestion that a short form contract be used. We are in favor of doing everything that is possible to simplify and shorten our exhibition contract, but we consider it vitally necessary that any contract which an exhibitor signs shall contain the entire agreement between the parties and we are not in favor of deluding an exhibitor into the belief that he is getting a short and simple contract by handing him for his signature a short contract which incorporates by reference a contract which is much longer than the one which he is now signing.

8. Referring to your proposal for the elimination of the score charges, you are, of course, aware that Universal for years has not endeavored to collect a score charge and we assure you that we will not attempt to do so in the future.

9. With respect to your proposal relating to preferred playing time, we will welcome any feasible method of dealing with this subject which will be satisfactory to exhibitors and will at the same time assure Universal of its fair share of the exhibitors preferred playing time.

10. Regarding the forcing of shorts with features, Universal has never indulged in this practice and I have so stated many times in the past.

I believe this letter will show you our desire and intention to cooperate with you to the very limit, but if I have not made myself perfectly clear, let me know and I shall be glad to clarify any matter which you wish to discuss.

The MPTOA program does not petition a national distributor ban on double features. While not in favor of the practice, the exhibitor group favors its elimination only by agreement of a majority of exhibitors in individual local situations.

It is through the machinery of the local conciliation boards that the MPTOA hopes to eliminate such other practices as unreasonable clearance, overbuying, "cut-throat" competition, designation of preferred

17 FEATURES ALL IN COLOR FOR '36-37 OUT OF POSSIBLE 600 RELEASES

Hollywood Unconvinced as to Ultimate Relative Status of Pigmentation; Several Processes in Application

Technical Difficulties of Practical Use Remain To Be Overcome; Cost Factor Also Continues Important

The position of color in the 1936-37 feature motion picture program can now definitely be established as relatively unimportant, in comparison to the pre-seasonal promises of widespread use of color this year.

Production of features in color is still in the experimental stage, producers believe, and, although both Hollywood and the public have indicated that they are willing to be convinced of its possibilities, currently only four all-color pictures are ready for release and 13 features for which production plans have been made are tentatively listed for color treatment, out of a possible 600 feature release. This total, however, compares favorably with, if it does not exceed, previous seasons.

Technical difficulties, inherent in the medium, have not been overcome entirely in any of the many processes now in use. This and the additional fact that the use of color adds greatly to the cost of production, in some cases doubling the budget for a black-and-white film, chiefly because of the many retakes necessary, have deterred most producers from venturing into the field very enthusiastically.

A year ago, Walter Wanger, in the face of adverse public and professional opinion, started production of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" in Technicolor. The picture's commercial success made the industry and theatre patrons further color conscious to some degree. Several features, including "Dancing Pirate," "Ramona" and two by George Hirliman, "The Devil on Horseback" and "Captain Calamity" in Hirlicolor followed.

Currently Selznick International has "The Garden of Allah," Warner Brothers has "God's Country and the Woman" in Technicolor, and Burroughs-Tarzan has "The Phantom of Santa Fe" in Cinecolor awaiting release. Republic has just completed shooting of "The Beloved Rogue" in Magnacolor. Thirteen features on the 1936-37 programs have been listed for color treatment. Warner has one; Republic, four; Walter Wanger, one; Samuel Goldwyn, one, and Selznick International, one. Mr. Hirliman will produce four features for Grand National in his color process. Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Radio and Universal have not planned to make any features in color.

Hollywood Still Unconvinced

Despite the success of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and the favorable manner in which audiences are now receiving "Ramona," Hollywood is still unconvinced that color can be adopted generally. For this reason "Garden of Allah" and "God's Country and the Woman" are eagerly awaited. Backgrounds of these two pictures are decidedly in contrast. In the first, the Sahara Desert is the site; the north woods and the snow country is the locale of the second. Both are dramatic stories and in both effort has been made to apply color artistically and dramatically as an integral factor in the motivation.

BLACKTON'S FIRST ALL-COLOR FILM

This winter marks the 14th anniversary of the first feature color motion picture to be given serious attention in this market. In 1922, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton produced in England "The Glorious Adventure," starring Lady Diana Manners, made in all-color by the Prizma process—first of the color-in-the-film processes. Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation was first assigned distribution, but later United Artists took over its handling. It was the first all-color picture to be given countrywide exploitation attention, Terry Ramsaye promoted the production for Commodore Blackton. It was about a year ahead of Technicolor's first color film, "Toll of the Sea," for the Metro Pictures Company of the late Marcus Loew.

William Thomas Crespinel of Prizma was the cameraman of "The Glorious Adventure." Mr. Crespinel, English born, is now furthering the interests of his own Cinecolor, in Hollywood.

Directors who have worked with color say that this integration of the medium with the story is essential, and it is this factor which causes many of the difficulties encountered in production. Studio technicians say that there appear to be many unknown qualities of color in terms of photographic negative. Colors clash and fight among themselves. Strong colors trample over weak colors. Light absorption and reflections fluctuate with composition of pigment, texture of surface, intensity of light falling upon them and the angle from which it falls.

Protests Air of Mystery

The American Cinematographer in an article in its October issue took the "makers of some color processes" to task for surrounding the whole production of color pictures with an atmosphere of mystery. The article was based on the thesis that competent cameramen and studio technicians are in possession of the basic principles of color photography and could, if given a free hand, produce as good a color picture as could the specialists who, it is claimed, are trying to create "a mystic fraternity with a language unintelligible to the lowly uninitiated."

After describing the present limitations of the systems now in use the article declares:

"Generally speaking, opinion is expressed that if the color enthusiasts would turn over their processes intact to practical studio production men, they might be able to iron out the kinks from a practical angle and develop color's commercial application. It is pointed out that budding young scientists fresh from campus lecture halls may know their theory, but lack useful knowledge of picture business.

"Ardent colorists were in the saddle during 'Becky Sharp' and 'Dancing Pirate.' The results apparently satisfied their color theories, but not the theatre-going public. Walter Wanger figuratively tossed the anointed experts overboard and had his experienced studio executives produce a successful picture. These men, wise in picture making, subdued the color, deemphasized it; in other words, used it as sparingly as possible. Not a high tribute to color's professed dramatic content. It was distinctly a minor ingredient. . . .

"Practical camera and laboratory men have developed studio photography to its present high standard of commercial application. Practical studio men have done likewise with sound. Practical producing brains made the only commercially successful color film to date—the 'Pine' picture. These same practical studio-trained minds might perfect color processes to a point of general studio and theatre application if given opportunity. . . .

"Reports mainly have it that current color processes have all too definite limitations in reproductive capabilities under actual production conditions, that too little now is known about the play of light on colors, that cameras need design improvement and a wider range of performance, that processing is done behind barred doors, that costs are needlessly high, that the whole subject is smothered in uncalled-for pseudo theory and technicalities, and that young blades from science academies are not necessarily picture producers."

Other Color Plans

Despite these difficulties color is making a determined stand. Warner Brothers' Technicolor successor to "God's Country" will be "The Desert Song," a musical. No cast assignments have been made as yet. Following "The Beloved Rogue," a semi-historical drama of early California, Republic will produce four other features in Magnacolor. "Beloved Rogue" stars Robert Livingston and Heather Angel with Sig Rumann in the character lead. Wells Root, who wrote the original story and the screen play, makes his directorial debut in the picture.

During production of the film the natural colors of the out-of-doors by night were captured by the color camera for the first time, according to Jack Marta, cameraman in charge of the photography. Previously color pictures having outdoor scenes have been shot on a stage.

Mr. Wanger's next Technicolor film will be "Vogues of 1937," which is tentatively scheduled to go into production early in January. Mr. Goldwyn also will start "Goldwyn Follies" in color at approximately the same time.

David Selznick started production of "A Star Is Born" early this month. The story is a modern comedy of Hollywood and will feature Janet Gaynor, playing in her first color picture, Fredric March, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson and Andy Devine. William Wellman will direct and Lansing C. Holden, color expert on "The Garden of Allah," has been placed under contract as color designer.

Five Hirlicolor Films

George Hirliman will make a total of five Hirlicolor pictures for Grand National. One, "Grand Canyon," to be directed by Crane Wilbur, will start during the next two months and

RADIO AND SCREEN MEET OVER STAR BROADCASTS

Problem Is Discussed Informally by Executives at Session Called by Hays

The first tangible move toward a solution of the complaints of exhibitors over the constant appearances of motion picture stars on nationally broadcast radio programs—especially during those hours at which the highest theatre attendance is expected—was made late last week at a luncheon meeting at the Harvard Club of New York. The meeting was called by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and was attended by representatives of both the motion picture and radio industries.

The session was regarded by those in attendance as a preliminary move, to be followed by later meetings when definite recommendations will be made and agreements sought. It was indicated that exhibitor leaders would be called in for the subsequent sessions, inasmuch as it was said, following the gathering, that all interests would be consulted before any final solutions were to be attempted.

Attending the meeting, in addition to Merlin H. Aylesworth, chairman of the board of RKO; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc.; and Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, who were named by Mr. Hays last month as a committee to represent the industry in a study of the problem, were Donald Gilman, vice-president of National Broadcasting Company in charge of West Coast operations, and Donald Thornburgh, vice-president of Columbia Broadcasting System in charge of that company's West Coast activities.

Following the session at the Harvard Club, after which Mr. Hays sailed for a four weeks' trip to Italy, France and England, it was said that he had especially requested the gathering because he was desirous of hearing why the radio broadcasters claimed their problems concerning the motion picture stars were as great as those of the exhibitors.

Radio's Problems Advanced

Spokesmen for the radio industry pointed out that, among other things, an indifferent radio program featuring a motion picture personality or personalities could be as injurious to the entertainment prestige of the network as it could be to the star and the employing motion picture studio. They were emphatic, as well, in their statements that their efforts to cooperate with the motion picture industry in the past had not been recognized on many occasions. In spite of the frank exchanges of views, however, no unwillingness to work for a solution of the problems of either industry was evidenced on the part of either group. In fact, indications were that at last a genuine movement toward working out an understanding between the two groups has finally been initiated.

A score or more of proposals already have been submitted, representatives of the film industry said, but only a few of them are even regarded as having even slight value.

One of the important revelations of the meeting was that neither group was in favor of a complete banning of motion picture figures from the air, if it were possible to do so, but what regulatory measures may have been advanced were not made known. At a later date, it was said, specific suggestions will be asked and considered.

Survey Underway

In keeping with the general tenor of the meeting, no figures that might purport to show the effects on theatre business by the competition of radio were presented. It is known, however, that the MPPDA office has been making a survey for several weeks to determine just what effect the so-called "unfair competition" of star broadcasts has had on theatre receipts.

The committee of Messrs. Aylesworth, Schenck and Warner will meet from time to time, either alone or with exhibitors, pending Mr. Hays' return. It was also thought that representatives of radio's side of the problem will be called together with the committee to explain more fully just what their own difficulties are.

U. S. Permit Now Sought For Fiber Film Packing

Application has been made by major companies to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to ship film in fiber board boxes. The change is desired for reasons of efficiency and economy and would apply only to film not designed for reshipment which is shipped now in wooden boxes.

The lighter fiber board material is noncombustible and its use would effect a saving in shipping charges, the application says. Trial shipments using the new container were pronounced highly satisfactory in every respect and demonstrated that eight to 10 reels could be shipped as a unit of the 6,000 feet customarily packed in wooden boxes now.

The new packing material is intended only for use in film shipments from studio to exchanges. Reshipments from exchanges to the theatres would be made, as always, in metal containers.

MGM Will Reissue Five Old Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will re-issue five old features and the group will be sold aside from the 1936-37 program to all exhibitors with available playing time. Exhibitors can take as many as they desire.

The five are "Grand Hotel," "Rasputin and the Empress," "Trader Horn," "Dancing Lady" and "Billy the Kid." New advertising material is being made up for the releases.

Ed Morris, Warner Brothers music company head, has been reelected to the board of governors of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Canada Accepts ASCAP Seat Tax

The Canadian Government's Music Tax Committee Tuesday in Toronto prescribed the same rates for motion picture theatres as those agreed upon last week by representatives of Canadian theatre interests and the Canadian Performing Rights Society, which is partly owned by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. The action fully legalizes the rates agreed upon independently by the music controlling groups and, in addition, makes them applicable to all theatres in Canada.

Complaints against these rates may be made to the government commission during December and adjustments may be made if the complaints are found to be well grounded. The Government will make an official announcement of the rates about January 1.

It was erroneously stated previously that the maximum music tax allowed by the Government rate commission was 12 cents a seat as compared with the 15 cents a seat tax agreed upon by the music licensing and theatre representatives earlier. It is now learned, however, that the Government commission's rates are the same in all respects as the others.

Harold B. Franklin Leaves Columbia Post

Harold B. Franklin, who has been a member of the Columbia Pictures production staff in Hollywood for the past year, this week resigned, effective November 20th. He is now on his way to New York on a vacation following which he will return to Hollywood to re-enter production.

Mr. Franklin is a former president of Fox West Coast Theatres and later head of Hughes Franklin Theatres. He later became an executive in an advisory capacity at RKO, then president of the KAO and RKO circuit. He resigned in 1933 to form Frankwyn Productions with Edgar Selwyn to produce legitimate plays on Broadway, following which he joined Columbia in 1935.

Universal Is Equipping Studio with Mirrophonic

Universal has closed a deal with Electrical Research Products, Inc., for a complete re-equipping of the studio with new Western Electric Mirrophonic recording apparatus, Erpi announced this week. The new equipment will give the studio push-pull recording throughout.

The contract embraces the addition of a new Erpi "Q" portable channel, modernization of the present five truck channels, installation of three additional Mirrophonic recording machines, modernization of the three fixed scoring and dubbing channels and new sound reproduction equipment for all four of the studio's new projection rooms.

Heads Louisiana Film Council

Mrs. Joseph E. Friend this week was elected president of the Louisiana Council for Motion Pictures at a meeting of the organization at the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans. Mrs. Friend succeeds Mrs. A. S. Tucker, resigned.

RCA-NBC LET PRESS LOOK "AROUND CORNER" AT TELEVISION PROGRESS

Forty Minute Program Caught by 15 Receiving Sets at Company's Headquarters Studios in New York

by TERRY RAMSAYE

Periodically the fires of anticipation about television have to be fanned anew to keep alive the state of expectancy by the amusement trade and the public which is deemed desirable by the interests engaged in this still vastly experimental and tentative art.

The latest and most emphatic blowing on the coals occurred last week with a demonstration to the press by the joint efforts of the Radio Corporation and the National Broadcasting Company with cocktails and a buffet luncheon November 6th atop the RCA Building in what is variously called Radio City or Rockefeller Center, depending on whose publicity it is.

The demonstration consisted in permitting the 200 assembled guests, of the press, including everything from essayists to reporters for Wall Street, to see what the television engineers have been looking at for a year or so. That is to say a picture about two-thirds the size of a letter sheet, limned in black and green, the highlights being the pleasant color of green Chartreuse as viewed by candle light, and with the definition quality of a newspaper halftone etched under a 65-line screen.

The principal remarks were made by Mr. David Sarnoff, president of the Radio corporation, who impinged not at all on the possible impingements of television, if, when and as, upon other arts save to say it would "supplement" the existing sound radio.

The program presented subsequently was considerably dominated by excerpts from motion pictures, all the products of Pathe News, but motion picture relations to the occasion and the art were not discussed.

Mr. Sarnoff, often quoted about television being "around the corner," did not commit himself to dates, but intimated that it would be somewhere in the next ten years, or perhaps inside the next ten years. The tentative nature of his outlook was denoted by his announcement that "our program is threefold," with the following folds:

"First, we must develop suitable commercial equipment for television and reception.

"Second, we must develop a program service suitable for network syndication.

"Third, we must also develop a sound economic base to support a television service."

40 Minute Program

The program was 40 minutes in length and included, in addition to addresses by Mr. Sarnoff and President Lenox R. Lohr of NBC, quartet and solo numbers by radio personalities, a Robert Benchley short subject, a newsreel sequence showing President Roosevelt at home and, reminiscent of the pioneer cinema, a tour of a television studio. Interspersed with these were appearances of Betty Goodwin as mistress of ceremonies.

The program was produced on another floor of the RCA building, transmitted by coaxial cable to the broadcasting station atop the Empire State building, approximately two miles distant, and received in the NBC studio fitted out for the occasion as a sort of experimental theatre. The pictorial matter was broadcast on 49.75 megacycles, the sound on the 52 megacycle channel.

Four of the 15 receiving sets supplied for the demonstration were of the latest type developed. These reproduced an image measuring 7½ by 10 inches. Unlike the older sets, which reproduced images of lesser dimensions, these were not equipped with mirrors in which, by a method being discarded, the observer saw the televised subject as reflected from another surface. There was also noted a lesser degree of the greenish coloration which has been remarked in previous demonstrations, although there appeared to be a problem to be overcome in the matter of focus.

All the sets provided for the demonstration were comparable in general size and makeup with the console type of radio receiver. There were as many as fourteen dial adjustments on some of the models, however, functions of these including the regulation of pictorial focus, the elimination of audible and visible distortion and control of other factors inherent in the nature of the new medium.

Although the probable cost of such a receiving set if produced on a commercial scale was estimated as between $400 and $500, spokesmen made it plain that no sets would be made available to the general public until many obstacles to practical use of television have been overcome and a mechanical standard has been worked out which will obviate the necessity of successively exchanging outmoded equipment for new.

Sets Will Not Be Available Until Many Obstacles Are Overcome and Mechanical Standard Is Evolved

The Role of NBC

In his address the president of NBC said: "The role of the National Broadcasting Company in television will be operating transmitters, programming, and, when it becomes available for commercial use, securing sponsors. In order that we may be prepared to do our part, our engineers are daily putting apparatus on the air under practical service conditions. Our program department is learning an entirely new technique in continuity writing, make-up, staging, and a multitude of other details which this new art will demand. It is experimenting with commercial programs to determine the effectiveness of television to sell goods."

In his televised address to the press representatives Mr. Sarnoff said, in part:

"You will recall that our field tests in television began only on June 29 of this year. That date marked the beginning in this country of organized television experiments between a regular transmitting station and a number of homes. Since then we have advanced and are continuing to advance simultaneously along the three broad fronts of television development—research, which must point the road to effective transmission and reception; technical progress, which must translate into practical sets for the home the achievements of our laboratories; and field tests to determine the needs and possibilities of a public service that will ultimately enable us to see as well as to hear programs through the air. On all these fronts our work has made definite progress and has brought us nearer the desired goal.

Describes Field Tests

"First, and as of immediate interest, let me tell you the progress of our field tests. As you know, we have been transmitting from our television station on top of the Empire State Building in New York City which is controlled from the NBC television studios in the RCA Building. We have observed and measured these transmissions through a number of experimental receivers located in the metropolitan area and adjacent suburbs. The results thus far have been encouraging, and instructive. As we anticipated, many needs that must be met by a commercial service have been made clear by these tests.

"In our present field tests we are using 343 line definition. Radio Corporation of America and the radio industry have, through the Radio Manufacturers Association, recommended to the Federal Communications Commission the adoption of 441 line definition as a standard for commercial operation. Our New York transmitter will be rearranged to conform to the recommended standards. That also means building synchronized receivers to conform to the new standards of the transmitter."

CONCESSIONS STARTED

playing time and the forcing of shorts with features.

An expression of "complete satisfaction" with Universal's announcement was forthcoming immediately from the New York headquarters of the MPTOA, which said:

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are elated to learn that Universal has definitely and publicly accepted most of the proposals presented to them by the MPTOA Executive Committee to remove abuses and prevent injustices in the trade practices that have become established in this business. Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Grainger are to be highly commended for their fairness and initiative. We are confident from their sympathetic attitude towards our problems that the few remaining details to which they refer can and will be worked out to our mutual satisfaction.

The acceptance of these constructive proposals represents a notable triumph for the responsible exhibitors throughout the country, both members and non-members of MPTOA, who helped formulate this program by their advice and counsel and who freely gave their support through the long and patient negotiations.

Assured By Others

We have definite assurances that the other distributors will shortly announce on their own behalf similar modifications of sales policies and sales practices as a result of our efforts that will be of genuine and immediate benefit to all independent exhibitors, regardless of affiliations. With this as a beginning the motion picture industry should enter a new era of better trade relations that will remove the unnecessary friction and irritations that have plagued the business for years, that will greatly benefit everybody but the chiselers who want something for nothing and the professional agitators who can exist only on ill will and controversies.

A minimum unconditional cancellation is necessary in group buying so that the exhibitor can reject the occasional picture after it is bought and released but before it is actually booked. We have never had such a cancellation except for the big exhibitor who can bargain for a selective contract and the irresponsibles who jump their contracts regularly. This will be a great advantage to the reputable but small country town and neighborhood exhibitor and is really something new for them. It should not be abused but should be used with discretion and good faith.

The inexcusable separate score charge is on its way out. By reason of the MPTOA negotiations it is being gradually dropped this season by all companies. We want it abolished. There is no longer any justification whatever for it except to get a few extra dollars out of the exhibitor on each picture.

Local Conciliation Boards

We think the local boards of conciliation are the only possible solution at this time, and under present circumstances, for some of our most difficult problems. Only a fair trial will show just how far they can be developed to adjust local disputes and controversies on a wide variety of complaints and grievances. We think they deserve the honest cooperation of every distributor and every local exhibitor. There is certainly a great need for some intelligent method of adjusting disputes peculiar to our business, which we do not have at present. At least no one can be injured by such an effort.

A short, simple and understandable form of exhibition contract is badly needed. Surely we have brains enough in this business to develop such a contract form. It should be done without further delay.

The distributing companies who make a sincere effort to solve these trade practice problems and voluntarily sacrifice a possible commercial advantage for the good of the industry and for the benefit of the independent exhibitor are certainly entitled to every consideration from every independent exhibitor. Responsible exhibitors everywhere will recognize this and show their appreciation and encouragement in dealing with these companies and by not taking unfair or unreasonable advantage of the genuine benefits offered by these new policies that are being adopted in response to our program and persistent efforts on behalf of the independent exhibitors.

Inventors Testify In RCA Patent Suit

Trial in the patent infringement suit in which the Hazeltine Corporation charges RCA Manufacturing Company and RCA Victor Company, Inc., with infringement of automatic volume control patent for radio receiving sets opened before Judge John P. Nields in the United States district court at Wilmington, Del., Monday.

The original and reissue Wheeler patent is involved in the suit. The purpose of the patent is to control the volume of sound in a radio receiver within a narrow range instead of the wide range of variation of input signal.

Professor Allen Hazeltine, professor of physical mathematics at Stevens Institute of Technology, and Frank N. Waterman of Summit, N. J., consultant engineers, were the first witnesses on the stand for the Hazeltine company Tuesday. Prof. Hazeltine is the inventor of the neutrodyne radio receiver.

Rockefeller Claim Is Delaying RKO Moves

Failure of RKO reorganization principals to make definite progress on an agreement for the settlement or treatment of the Rockefeller Center claim of $9,100,000 against the motion picture company continues to stand as a bar to further significant progress toward the completion of a reorganization plan for RKO, it was reported Tuesday.

The efforts to arrive at an agreement with Rockefeller Center are continuing, but reorganization factors are unwilling to hazard a guess as to when they might be completed.

Heywood-Wakefield Plan Set

The stockholders of Heywood-Wakefield, Boston theatre supply company, at a special meeting Monday voted 70 per cent in favor of the company's plan of recapitalization. It is expected that the approval of the board of directors on the plan, which is necessary, will be forthcoming.

Astaire-Rogers Guild Winners

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers won first honors for their joint performance in "Swing Time" in the September vote of the Actors' Guild in Hollywood. Beulah Bondi was credited with the best performance in a supporting role for her work in "The Gorgeous Hussy."

Only 16 of 1,902 Films Rejected By N. Y. Censors

The motion picture division of the New York State Education Department reviewed and licensed 1,902 films during 1935-36, according to the annual report submitted by Irwin Esmond, director of the division, to Commissioner of Education Frank P. Graves. Of these 1,902 films, 19 were rejected entirely, of which three were later revised and approved, and eliminations were made in 180 upon statutory grounds.

The net revenue to the state for the year amounted to $204,202. Receipts for the year were $269,931 and expenditures were $65,728. Since the organization of the motion picture commission in 1921 the total net profit for the State over and above all expenditures has been $2,070,382.

The report points out that in addition to the 19 pictures which were ordered rejected in toto, 1,452 eliminations of scenes, subtitles or dialogue were made in pictures presented for review. The statutory reasons for the eliminations ordered are classified as follows: indecent, 522; immoral or tending to corrupt morals, 275; tending to incite to crime, 496; inhuman, 101; sacrilegious, 58.

A total of 9,366 reels were reviewed by the division during the year, or more than 9,000,000 feet of film. In connection with the review work, the dialogue is read, consultations are held and determinations are made.

During the year five appeals were taken to the Commissioner of Education from the action of the director. In each case the action of the director was sustained.

Mr. Esmond recommends that additional reviewers and inspectors be employed to supplement the present staff of four reviewers and five inspectors.

The report mentions that many foreign films were presented for review, nearly all of feature length, coming from various countries, including Germany, England, Spain, Russia, France, Hungary, China, Italy Czechoslovakia, Poland, Sweden, Greece, Austria, Mexico and Norway. The number of foreign-made films increased by more than 50 per cent over the previous year.

DeSylva Made Producer By Universal Pictures

Buddy DeSylva, who entered the motion picture industry through the music publishing company which he organized, DeSylva, Brown and Henderson, has been signed as a producer by Universal Pictures. The contract calls for production of four pictures a year. Mr. DeSylva will spend two weeks in New York consulting with R. H. Cochrane, president, and J. R. Grainger, general manager of distribution for Universal before reporting at the studios on December 1st.

CLEARANCE RIGHTS OF DISTRIBUTORS TO BE DETERMINED BY U. S. COURTS

Eight Independent Exhibitors at Kansas City Appeal from Decision Upholding Distributors' Right to Exclusive Selling

Final Decision Is Expected to Play Large Part in Solving Problem of Clearance and Zoning of Features

The United States court of appeal is to establish the rights of motion picture distributors in selling clearance-and-zoning privileges to circuit first-runs to the reputed disadvantage of independents playing subsequent runs.

The subject has long been one of great dispute. The climax to the current fight between the distributors and circuits on the one side, and the independents on the other, will, it is expected, have an important influence on the future of the clearance-and-zoning structure which now governs the time and place of features released to local theatres. The downtown runs claim priority by virtue of their stronger buying power.

Continuing what already represents the most outstanding clearance-and-zoning dispute of a decade, eight independent exhibitors who sued Fox Midwest Theatres and the large distributors early this year on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade, have now appealed the decision of Judge Merrill E. Otis of the federal district court, at Kansas City. Judge Otis, on August 5, had found for the defendants and gave the first court decision on the right of producers and distributors to sell copyrighted film on an exclusive or any other exhibition basis to anyone they wished.

Review in the Spring

The eighth district court of appeals, Kansas City, probably will review the case in the March or April terms, depending on when attorneys get the transcript of the trial record ready. Due to the voluminous record and the large number of exhibits, attorneys for the plaintiffs do not expect to have this prepared before January 1st.

Charging that Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., and Paramount, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox, M-G-M, Columbia, RKO, United Artists and Vitagraph-Warner conspired to restrain trade and eliminate independents from competition when they set up the zoning and clearance plan on 1935-36 product, the following independent Kansas City exhibitors on February 25th sought a temporary, and when that was denied, a permanent injunction restraining the Fox circuit and the major distributors from making the zoning and clearance plan effective: Emanuel Rolsky, of the National theatre; E. S. Young, Central and Roanoke; Frank T. Mountjoy; H. F. Pautz and H. C. Rohde; Abe and Rosa Baier, Saline Theatre Corporation, and the Ritz Amusement Corporation (H. H. Barrett).

Daniel S. Millman and William G. Boatright, attorneys for the plaintiffs, have now filed a $250 appeal bond and assignments of error. Judge Otis granted the motion for an appeal.

Bases of Protest

The plaintiffs' assignment of errors reveals the main points on which their attorneys believe Judge Otis erred in his opinion, as follows:

1. In not finding that the right to make and the making of contracts executed by exhibitors in Kansas City, Mo., but not binding until approved by the responsible home offices of the producer and distributor defendants in New York City, licensing for exhibition in Kansas City, Mo., prints of feature films contemplated to be thereafter produced in California and New York and transported to Missouri and delivered to such exhibitors in Kansas City, Mo., in time to fulfill obligations of such contracts and the performance of such contracts, is essentially interstate commerce.

TWO INNOVATIONS IN SELZNICK FILM

Ultra-violet sound recording and 2,000 foot reels, both new technical innovations, are both featured in the Selznick International picture "Garden of Allah" according to an announcement from the company. The ultra-violet ray system was developed by RCA and will replace the old use of a white beam of light to record the peaks and valleys made by voices and music in their transfer to the sound track. It is claimed that the system will end the distortions of voice quality attributed to present methods of recording.

Conspiracy Denied

2. In finding that there was no contract, conspiracy or agreement among any two or more of the defendants to set up a uniform plan of licensing prints of feature films for exhibition in subsequent run theatres in Kansas City, commencing with the 1935-36 season.

3. In finding that there was no contract, conspiracy or agreement whereby Fox theatres would be granted prior runs and clearance over plaintiffs' theatres.

4. In finding that the zoning and protection plan, established and effective in Kansas City, Mo., beginning with the 1935-36 season, whereby subsequent runs were placed in arbitrary zones, the order and time of exhibition of films in such subsequents established, priority of runs and clearance given Fox theatres over plaintiffs' theatres, the inclusion in the contracts of provisions to effectuate such zoning and protection plan, priorities and clearances, and the refusal of producer-exhibitor defendants to negotiate or make license contracts with plaintiff except subject to such zoning and protection plan given Fox theatres, was not the result of a contract, combination or conspiracy, or monopoly or attempt to monopolize a part of the trade or commerce among the several states.

Individual Negotiations Cited

5. In finding that the general, usual, and customary method of licensing prints in the United States as applied to subsequents in metropolitan areas comparable to Kansas City is for producers and distributors to contract to grant prior runs and clearance among subsequent run theatres.

6. In finding that contracts for Fox theatres, 1935-36 season, were the result of separate and individual negotiations between Fox Midwest and the distributor defendants without regard to the attitude, desire, action or intention of the other producer and distributor defendants.

7. In finding that contracts for the 1935-36 season for the Fox theatres are not identical.

8. In finding that the competitive zones requested by Fox theatres were substantially the same as those designated by it in the preceding year.

Run and Clearance Hold Denied

9. In finding that under contracts for Fox theatres for the 1935-36 season, Fox theatres do not as a whole enjoy a superiority of runs and clearance as compared with the contracts for the 1934-35 season.

10. In finding that no complaint is made of runs and clearances under 1935-36 contracts accorded the Fox Uptown, Isis, Apollo, Warwick, Lincoln and Benton.

11. In finding that plaintiffs and other unaffiliated theatres prior to the 1935-36 season refused to make contracts except on a day and date release basis.

12. In finding that restraints with reference to zoning, prior runs and clearances imposed by the Fox contracts were not an unreasonable restraint of trade and not an unreasonable restraint of the right of plaintiffs to negotiate and make contracts for supplying their theatres with film.

Availability to Subsequents

13. In not finding that prior to 1935-36 and since 1928 the established practice in licensing and releasing film was to make the same equally available to all subsequents on the basis of admission price without priority of run or clearance over any other theatre charging the same admission.

14. In not finding that the producer-distributor defendants for a number of years had been dissatisfied with and desirous of changing the established trade practice of licensing and releasing prints of feature films for exhibition, and each has believed that if a uniform plan was adopted establishing prior runs and clearance among equally priced admission houses it would enable each distributor to obtain a larger revenue from the rental of prints.

Loss of $500,000 Noted

15. In not finding that since Fox Midwest started operating the Fox theatres in Kansas City in January, 1931, it had lost at least $500,000. From 1931 to 1933, Fox theatres in Kansas City were, with possibly one exception, operating at admission prices higher than those of plaintiffs or other unaffiliated exhibitors; that in consequence of higher admissions by Fox and the then prevailing trade practice in Kansas City of releasing films according to admission price, Fox theatres obtained films ahead of theatres charging less; that about 1933 Fox Midwest, confronted with economic and competitive conditions, lowered admissions to the general level of those charged by defendants and other unaffiliated theatres; that by lowering admissions Fox theatres came into a situation where, under the existing trade practice of releasing features, plaintiffs and other unaffiliated theatres were receiving prints at the same time as Fox, and could and did play day and date; that Fox Midwest became dissatisfied with the existing practice of releasing and desired to change to eliminate competition.

16. In not finding each producer-exhibitor defendant knew the attitude of the others toward the matter of accomplishing the change in the prevailing method of licensing and releasing prints and toward the matter of licensing only on a basis of prior runs and clearance among subsequents of the same admission; that each knew what the other had done or was doing or intended to do; each expected and desired others would do the same thing, etc., creating a substantial monopoly.

17. In not finding that in written contracts each producer-distributor defendant agreed to do the same thing.

18. In not finding that competitive zones set up by the defendant were arbitrary and included only those theatres deemed by it to be competitive to Fox theatres, and had no reasonable relation to a normal solution of the problems connected with licensing or exhibition and none to theatres competitive to plaintiffs' theatres.

See Restraint

21. In not finding that the natural, inevitable and logical effect of each of the contracts entered into between the respective producer-distributor and Fox Midwest and the active intention, objective and purpose of this was in restraint of trade and to create a substantial monopoly in favor of Fox and to enable Fox theatres to be withdrawn from competition with plaintiffs' theatres.

22. In finding that Fox has the legal right, in making contracts, to require the producer-distributor defendants to contract that they will not negotiate with contract for or permit plaintiffs to license other prints of the same film for exhibition at the same time as Fox theatres, or until a specified period of time has elapsed after the picture has been exhibited at a Fox theatre. The effect of this is to create a monopoly and restrain competition.

24. In finding that none of the plaintffs had shown any damage or injury, or threatened damage or injury to their business or property as a result of the plan of prior runs and clearance.

Product Apportionment

26. In not finding that it is necessary for each plaintiff, in order to operate his theatre, to obtain film from producer-distributor defendants who produce about 75 per cent of all features produced and distributed in the United States; that independent product is inadequate to supply plaintiffs' needs and is inferior in quality.

27. In not finding Fox Midwest is an affiliated exhibitor.

28. In not finding that prior to 1935 each producer-distributor defendant was free to license and release pictures in a manner and at a time it might desire and might agree with the respective exhibitors.

29. In not finding that the motive and purpose of distributor defendants was to enable them to obtain a larger revenue from the licensing of film and that the motive and purpose of Fox Midwest was to enable it to play motion pictures free from competition of other exhibitors charging the same admission price.

Paramount Films Are Barred

The national government at Nanking, China, Tuesday, prohibited the importation of all Paramount pictures into China following the company's reply to the government's request to terminate worldwide distribution of "The General Died at Dawn" and "Klondike Annie." The Chinese government claimed the two pictures showed the Chinese people in an unfavorable light.

17 Color Features Set This Season

the four remaining features will be spaced over 1937 and into 1938.

Other plans in the color field include the scheduled filming of the coronation of King Edward VIII in London next May by Alexander Korda, using Technicolor, and eight "Happy Harmonies," one-reel musical cartoons in color, to be produced by the Harman-Ising Studio.

For several years various studios have experimented with different color processes. Paramount spent considerable time and money working with lenses in both camera and projector whereby color would be shot and projected from a single film. Tests were made of various scenes and objects but the process was abandoned as impractical only a short time ago. Universal, another company that is not at present contemplating color pictures, has been experimenting with a process known as Telco. Tests of it are still being made.

Hal Roach's Approach

An entirely different approach to the problem occupied Hal Roach for some time. In collaboration with scientists at the California Institute of Technology, he planned and is trying to develop a prismatic screen so chemically or electrically treated that it would reflect light rays thrown upon it from the projector in their natural colors as photographed by the recently developed color cameras.

The process being used by Republic, Magnacolor, is identical with the system used by Mr. Hirliman as developed by Consolidated Laboratories. Not as costly as Technicolor, it will be a feature of more than half of the films that have been announced as subjects for color treatment.

Fox Movietone News has been experimenting with the Chromo color process for use in newsreel shots, but it is believed that considerable improvement is necessary to project more perfect natural hues. It is understood that the cost of Chromo is more nearly on a par with black and white negative costs than other processes. An approach to the use of a single emulsion is claimed by Colorways of America which is marketing a process which uses regular black and white film. The system does not require any dye and the pictures are shot through a device in front of the camera. A small device on the projection machine is required for projection of the film.

As in the case of any new process, patent infringement suits have been filed in connection with color. Trial date of January 5th has been fixed in a case brought by Max D. Du Pont Vitacolor Corporation against Cinecolor, Inc., in the United States district court at Los Angeles. The suit involves four patents on natural colorfilm and the process of making it. Notice has been served on Warner Brothers, Columbia, Paramount, Celebrity Productions and Scientific Film Laboratories that they will be held responsible with Cinecolor for alleged infringement in connection with color shorts and cartoons manufactured for them by Cinecolor.

India Surveys Europe's Use of School Screen

by C. A. THAKUR
in Bombay

C. J. Pathak has returned from a six months tour as representative of the Motion Picture Society of India studying the use of the film as a medium of education and reported on his observations in England, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria and Italy.

In most of the countries governments were directly aiding the production of educational and cultural films, while in Italy, Germany and Russia special film departments were being maintained by the State for political and educational purposes.

The production of educational films is, Mr. Pathak observed throughout his European tour, carried out as a supplementary activity. It is, however, strongly hoped that educational films would be also a business proposition in the near future.

In Germany, Mr. Pathak witnessed the Dusseldorf Film and Photo-Exhibition. Interesting and instructive demonstrations were arranged in the exhibition to give an insight to the layman how the various processes are carried out in the production and exhibition of films.

Mr. Pathak was interested to learn how small countries like Denmark, Sweden and Norway equip their schools with standard projectors for showing educational films.

Mr. Pathak spent about a fortnight in Russia and was struck with the remarkable progress the film industry has made in recent years. He felt that the potentialities of the film had nowhere else been exploited to greater uses than in Russia. He paid a tribute to the V.O.K.S. the State Department to promote cultural relations with foreign countries, which gave him full co-operation in his endeavor to study the progress of the Russian film industry.

Whenever Mr. Pathak had an opportunity to talk to the educational authorities and the directors of studios in various countries he visited, enquiries were made about Indian films. He found that there is good market in Europe for films, especially documentary, travel and cultural films which depict the Indian life in all its aspects.

Charles Furthman, Writer, Is Dead From Pneumonia

Charles Furthman, screen writer, died last weekend in Hollywood of pneumonia at the age of 56. He was born in Chicago and attended Cornell and Notre Dame Universities.

Mr. Furthman, formerly scenario editor at Paramount and assistant general manager at Universal, wrote several originals as well as adaptations, including "The Goose Woman," "Blind Goddess," "The Way of All Flesh," "Underworld," "Broadway" and "Hard Rock Harrigan."

Funeral services were held in Hollywood Tuesday. Mr. Furthman is survived by his brothers, William and Jules, and a sister, Mrs. Mara Cole.

WPA STARTS RADIO SHOWS AS PROBE OF NEW DEAL THEATRICALS LOOMS

Weekly Broadcasts of Vaudeville by Unemployed Actors Will Go Out Over Coast-to-Coast NBC Network

Propaganda in Films Reported Planned as Part of Inquiry Being Made by Congressional Committee

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Nationwide extension of the Government's participation in theatricals, frequently as a direct competitor to the regular established forms of amusement for public consumption, is due next Wednesday with the beginning of a series of radio presentations of a new Federal Theatre Project vaudeville show of unemployed actors. The broadcasts will go out over the National Broadcasting Company's blue network every Wednesday night from nine to ten o'clock, EST, competing for listeners' attention with the Fred Allen program on NBC's red network and the Chesterfield and Palmolive-Peet hours on the Columbia Broadcasting System. The expectation is that within a year the Works Progress Administration, sponsoring this and other theatrical projects, will have 40 traveling vaudeville radio units touring on 40-week contracts, definitely appearing at motion picture houses and other theatres.

The Federal Government already has widely embraced the stage and screen in a number of projects for public consumption, the most recent being the WPA's wholesale production of Sinclair Lewis's "It Can't Happen Here," in 17 cities. The basic reason given for such sponsorship has been the intent to alleviate unemployment conditions in the legitimate field, but one of the results has been to give a certain impetus to the stage. Whether this will be the case with the new vaudeville "invasion" by the Government remains to be seen. Vaudeville is generally conceded to be dead.

Even as the Government in Washington was busying with details for the launching of the new vaudeville-radio project, Capitol Hill was hearing reports that the motion picture production and exhibition operations of a number of the New Deal's alphabet-agencies will be the subject of intensive Congressional investigation this winter, because of the alleged propaganda contents, used in the recent Presidential campaign.

The series of films which the WPA engaged Pathe News to produce and distribute, in Pathe's regular newsreel releases to theatres, has been the principal target of anti-New Dealers, who last summer promised an investigation in Congress this winter on the grounds that the New Deal was diverting public relief funds to the manufacture of "political propaganda." The recurrence of the reports this week in Washington came as a surprise in view of President Roosevelt's sweepingly decisive victory at the polls on November 3rd. Political observers in the Capital are wondering about the who, when and where of the sponsorship of any such "investigation," what with the New Deal's further strengthened position in Congress.

WPA EDUCATIONAL FILM PRESENTED

The first venture into motion picture production of the Works Progress Administration Adult Education Program was presented at the New Utrecht Evening High School, Brooklyn, this week. The picture, titled "Grown-ups at School," was produced under the direction of Adult Education Program workers and is a record of the work of those studying under the program. It depicts them at work studying the arts, business, trade and mechanics.

The WPA-NBC arrangements were completed this week after five months of negotiations, at a secret meeting in New York attended by John Royal, NBC vice-president; Leslie Roberts, in charge of the WPA radio division; Phil Carlin, NBC sustaining program manager, and Ruby Cowan, head of NBC's artists' service.

In its latest determined drive to get unemployed artists back to work the U. S. theatre project and NBC have worked out a plan whereby units will be formed, put on the air and then sent on tour. From 15 to 30 persons will be used in each unit, and it is hoped eventually to get many hundreds of actors back on the stage where they will be available for other commercial contracts.

WPA officials, answering the charge that they are sponsoring another "amateur hour," stress the fact that the units will be made up not of amateurs but of professionals. If any amateurs find their way into the units by registering as unemployed artists, they will have to be good to keep their place, for each company will be subjected to a strict pruning operation so that only acceptable talent may be offered the theatre. Casts will be changed completely each week.

Using NBC Orchestras

NBC is to provide the orchestras for the units and also the master of ceremonies, who will be known as the "Good Will Ambassador of the American Theatre." The "M.C." will be Fred Niblo. Mr. Niblo is a motion picture director in Hollywood.

The NBC artists' bureau will book the units from the air into theatres at the usual fee. Efforts are being made by NBC to sell the program to a commercial advertiser.

So long as the units appear on the air as an offering of the U. S. Theatre Project their members will be paid the "security wages" given by the Government. As soon as they go on tour, however, or should NBC find a sponsor for the program, the actors and actresses go off the Government payroll and on to that of the National Broadcasting Company at not less than $50 a week.

WPA officials explained this week that the plan was broached by the NBC Artists Bureau in New York, with the suggestion that among the unemployed actors taken under the wing of the WPA theatre project there should be considerable talent of the type required for the radio performances. The WPA already has hundreds of actors and actresses on its rolls for use in its stage shows. All players now on WPA rolls, or who are placed thereon later, will be eligible for auditions for the broadcasting project.

Held up by the demand for time by political orators during the campaign period, original plans to launch the first unit last week had to be postponed.

As worked out by government and NBC officials, it is planned to put a unit on the air and ask the listening audience to vote whether they would like to see it in a local theatre. A tieup has been arranged between NBC and newspapers throughout the country, and the vote, instead of going to the network or the local station, is to be filed with the newspapers, from which NBC will collect them.

NBC To Arrange Bookings

All bookings will be arranged by NBC and the units will go to the theatres having stage shows, the same as do the Major Bowes' amateur units. WPA will have nothing to do with this end of the project, but when NBC puts out a unit, its members will be under contract.

WPA theatre project officials believe that the proposed shows will give several hundred actors an opportunity to get back into harness, where they will be available for producers who may be on the lookout for talent.

Aids Educational Project

President Roosevelt last month allocated $113,000 of relief funds to the Office of Education of the Interior Department, to permit continued operation through next June of its educational radio project.

Five programs have been presented on coast-to-coast networks contributed by the National and Columbia systems over a period of three and one-half months, during which time more than 50,000 letters are said to have been received by the Commissioner of Eduction.

The office of education, it was explained, is seeking methods by which education can take to the air, as well as means of organizing and financing educational broadcasting which educational agencies can adopt. In addition to its network demonstrations, the radio project plans to create an educational script exchange service to aid local educational groups in delivering good programs at the request of local stations, and is cooperating with the radio workshop of New York University in training individuals in handling the writing and producing of educational radio programs.

And while the new project was developing, Washington was hearing that the propaganda activities of the various Federal agencies, particularly of New Deal organizations, are seen as the subject of intensive Congressional investigation this winter.

WPA TURNS TO RADIO

The motion picture operations of a number of these agencies, including the relationships with newsreel companies, have been the subject of much discussion for many months.

The picture situation will be studied as part of an inquiry which is being made by a select congressional committee into the reorganization of the Federal establishments.

Naturally, none of the officials concerned in the matter, either in the agencies which will be investigated or on the committee, is willing to talk about the matter, those in the agencies taking the attitude that their propaganda operations are not such as to be subject to criticism, the committeemen because they do not want to disclose in advance the line that will be taken when and if the matter comes up.

Institute Studies Operations

But there is so much rumor regarding the subject that it appears almost certain that propaganda will be the object of much discussion during the coming session of Congress, particularly in view of the fact that the Brookings Institute, which has conducted a number of studies of various phases of Government which have been reported in reputedly well-written, balanced documents, is inquiring into the Government's motion picture operations.

Motion pictures have been used by various branches of the Government for a number of years. The Department of Commerce has made some pictures showing how various imported commodities travel from producer to consumer; the Bureau of Mines has made some depicting various phases of its mine-safety work, and the Department of Agriculture has produced films dealing with subjects of interest to the farmer. These pictures never have been subjected to criticism; they have, for the most part, been highly enlightening, particularly those of the Bureau of Mines, and are considered a legitimate part of the Government's educational work.

But anti-New Dealers hold that such pictures were propaganda because they showed what the Administration was doing for the people, and that on that theory the New Deal undertook film activities of its own to show what the Deal was doing.

The Rush to Make Films

Under this interpretation there was a mad rush to produce. The Federal Housing Administration put out a series of "before and after" pictures, showing how properties could be modernized with Government-insured loans; the pictures were used widely in theatres throughout the country and the dam was broken. Agency after agency produced pictures and urged exhibitors to use them — the Resettlement Administration brought out "The Plow That Broke the Plains" and plans another picture on the Mississippi River; the Works Progress Administration produced a number of films showing how good it was and then entered into a contract with Pathe for the production of others; the Social Security Administration put out an "explanation" of its work, and still others were produced, all hopeful that the theatres would find space and time on their programs for their own particular specialty.

How much all this cost has never been computed; how much might properly be spent by the Government on educational films has never been figured. But there is a growing belief in some Washington quarters that the amount spent was too much.

Establishment of the National Archives has been used by these New Deal agencies as an argument why they should produce pictures. The films, they say, constitute a historical record for permanent deposit in the vaults of the Archives. If the pictures are shown to the public through theatres, that is only incidental to the basic purpose of making a permanent record and, of course, it is argued, the people have a right to know what their Government is doing for them. But the critics assert that beyond the record value of the pictures there was propaganda, sometimes implied but often outright. It is on this point that the congressional committee would center its attention when Congress re-convenes in January.

St. Louis Stockholders Approve F.&M. Control

The stockholders of the St. Louis Amusement Company at a special meeting approved an arrangement under which the management of the 22 theatres in the circuit will be handled by Fanchon & Marco. The stockholders ratified the action of the company's officers in issuing two promissory notes to Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., nominee of Fanchon & Marco Enterprises, Inc., and one to Nelson Cunliff, trustee of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., bankrupt. The meeting also approved the execution of a deed of trust to secure payment of the notes.

Imperial Opens Twelve National Exchanges

Imperial Pictures this week opened 12 exchanges to handle the 30 features on its 1936-37 production schedule. The offices are located at 630 Ninth Ave., New York; 12 Piedmont St., Boston; 134 Meadow St., New Haven; 440 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis; 1225 Vine St., Philadelphia; 831 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago; 3317 Olive St., St. Louis; 637 N. Seventh St., Milwaukee; 130 W. 18th St., Kansas City; Film Exchange Building, Cleveland; 2310 Cass St., Detroit, and 309 Vance Building, Seattle.

Phillip Selznick Forms New Production Company

Phillip Selznick, brother of the late Lewis J. Selznick and himself a former motion picture executive, is forming a new production company in Cleveland to be known as Phil Selznick Pictures Company. His financial associates are his two nephews, Max Young of Canton, Ohio, and Sol Metzer of Jersey City. Mr. Young operates theatres and a large brewery in Miami.

Church Campaign On in Argentina

by M. BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

A film campaign similar to that conducted in the United States by the Legion of Decency is getting started under the direction of the Argentine Catholic Action Bureau. Motion pictures are to be listed and the listings posted in churches and schools. Arrangements are being made for previewing pictures and it is understood that the work of the national censors will be ignored.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

Fannie Hurst told the Jewish Center in Kansas City the other evening that she holds little hope for the movies as an expression of American creative art.

Miss Hurst has been writing novels now for 22 years, always with a view to royalties from the sale of their motion picture rights, and frequently giving expression to her earlier studies of the shop girl and her environs. They say she won't sell a story for less than $100,000.

A committee immediately will be appointed to determine how much Miss Hurst has contributed to mould the movies in expressing anything.

Opening on Broadway the other evening at the "little art house" of the 55th Street Theatre, "The Mysteries of Notre Dame" disclosed a pictorial record of the architecture and art treasures of the famous Notre Dame Cathedral in France.

The management has been expecting some big, gruff, broad-shouldered football player to storm the cashier's window demanding his money back for selling under false pretenses, on the grounds that in "The Mysteries of Notre Dame" he had expected to learn why the Notre Dame football team in the midwest resembles a steam-shovel when it comes thundering down on its opponents on the gridiron.

Then, without even cracking a smile, Mr. Finney added that upon Mr. Petroff's return from his honeymoon he will undertake "Young Wings."

Edward Gross is in a pickle. He needs a cotton field for a scene in Sol Lesser's forthcoming "Rainbow on the River," a new Bobby Breen musical which is set particularly in and around New Orleans. Seven hundred Negroes are supposed to be pickin' cotton. The New Orleans planters refuse to have their crops damaged by inexperienced pickers, and will not allow their own hands to participate regardless of the handsome remuneration offered. At this date it looks as if Gross and Lesser will have to change both their story and locale toward the direction of the New Orleans city park where 7,000 negroes can be found at work daily busily leaning on long-handled shovels for the WPA.

When Twentieth Century-Fox decided to film "Ramona," in color, they sent a location scout into the surrounding hills to find a spot where the hand of nature had least been touched by the hand of man. Primitiveness was what they were after, and primitiveness was what the location scout found, some 4,000 feet about sea level, and 25 miles north of the studio. There lies the Mesa Grande Indian Reservation. So slow has been the march of time in that secluded spot that very few changes would be required to turn back the pages of 100 years, to the days of Ramona's beautiful Indian love for Alessandro.

After conveying the Fox company's wishes to those on the reservation, the location scout hurried back to the studio and elatedly related a description of his well-nigh perfectly primitive discovery.

Meanwhile, however, the Indians, thinking to facilitate the movements of the Fox company when they arrived, modernized the old trails leading to the village, making out of them something resembling the third-class motor roads of Kansas and Missouri. Mighty old trees were felled and the forests cleared of brushwood. Hollywood's technicians groaned when they saw the results. The mottled sun and shade no longer fell like lace on the mossy green of the forests; the giant cottonwoods were gone. With considerable effort, and no little expense, the Indians' labor of love had to be undone and the primitiveness at least partially restored, even to the elimination of the paved roads on which the Red Men had worked day and night in order that they might be ready for the palefaces from Hollywood.

There have been so many stories about the prodigal doings of Hollywood motion picture magnates that Whitney Bolton finds it a pleasure to pick up a yarn about a Broadway producer.

This one concerns Delos Chappell, who built a house for himself and his wife out in the west near Denver. The palace cost him a pretty penny, a la Hollywood, but when it was completed his wife was not satisfied. The place, she maintained, had not been built close enough to some neighboring hills.

So Mr. Chappell hired a battery of steam shovels . . . and moved the hills to the house.

When asked the usual question as to the nature of his client's credits, the manager countered with the defense, "Did Darryl Zanuck, or Louis Mayer have screen credits when they got their first job?" "Come, now," said the producer, "you're not trying to tell me your man is a Zanuck or a Mayer." "No, not exactly," said the agent, half stumped, "but," and his face lit with anticipatory enthusiasm, "he'll work much cheaper."

The winner of a chance game who is paid off in tokens would have to shovel out with a spade—500,000 tokens for a $500 award.

Motion picture theatre owners who suffer under the complexities of voluminous press books built by American press agents should sympathize with Dave Martin, at Warners' Mission Theatre, Santa Barbara, Cal., where, because of a policy of showing a Mexican-made production every Thursday night, Mr. Martin is expected to translate exploitation ideas from a pressbook apparently written in Mexico City by a native Mexican press agent with slight knowledge of the English language who is trying to imitate American press book writers.

Of the Mexican-made "Madre Querida" (Dear Mother), the Mexican press book author says: "The sweet sentimental development of the drama, the originality of de Story, makes the expectators see it over and over. UNION MERGER ENDS LABOR "WAR" IN N. Y.

IATSE, in Settlement with ITOA, Absorbs Allied on Threat of Mayor to Shut Brandt Houses

The "war" that has been waged for years in New York over "multiple unionism" among projectionists this week brought important decisions following the stench, tear-gas and other chemical bombings, two weeks ago, of nearly a score of theatres controlled and operated by the independent Harry Brandt circuit, and in which dozens were injured.

The commission of three impartial observers who were appointed by Mayor LaGuardia last Saturday to investigate conditions of projectionists in local theatres and the resultant disputes and violence, announced with dramatic suddenness Wednesday that after a conference which lasted all Tuesday afternoon, a settlement was arrived at between Local 306 of the IATSE and the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, headed by Harry Brandt. The Allied Union, which the ITOA frequently has been accused of controlling, is to be absorbed by Local 306, and the ITOA members, operating several hundreds of local independent theatres, are to grant an additional 25 per cent increase in projectionists' wages.

Sam A. Lewisohn, chairman of Mayor LaGuardia's commission—self-styled the Board of Survey of Industrial Relations in Moving Picture Theatres—announced the settlement as follows: "A sound basis has been laid for bringing better conditions of employment and the discontinuance of disputes between the two unions which have in the past caused considerable inconvenience to the public. The commission will continue its investigation and make all efforts to bring a small minority into a similar understanding and thus insure lasting peace. The settlement affects 537 out of a total of 587 motion picture theatres in Greater New York."

Thus, with one abrupt action Mayor LaGuardia was able to accomplish in a few hours what both independent exhibitors and the two unions have been striving for over a long period. But the accomplishment was not made without drastic action, developments in this connection standing out during the week as follows:

Police Commissioner Valentine increased police protection for the theatres involved to 225 uniformed and plainclothes men.

Local 306 of the IATSE filed suit for $500,000 damages against the New York Police Department for raiding its headquarters following the Brandt bombings.

The state supreme court ordered police to return the van-load of records seized in the raid on Local 306 headquarters.

Determined to put an end to the bombings, Mayor LaGuardia on Monday threatened to close the theatres involved unless the board of survey he appointed reached a final solution of the labor difficulties. The Mayor's statement was made to the board as it convened at City Hall for its first meeting. The commissioners were Samuel A. Lewisohn, banker, industrialist and industrial mediator, who served as chairman and the Mayor's representative; William Collins, New York representative of the American Federation of Labor, and Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy theatre, commissioner of the Port of New York Authority and president of Beekman Street hospital. At Mr. Lewisohn's suggestion the Mayor appointed Henry L. Lurie, executive secretary of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, and Ben Golden, executive secretary of Labor Relations Board, as advisers to the board.

THEATRE UNIONS ACTIVE ELSEWHERE

While the New York City administration, the police, exhibitors and unions were embroiled in a dispute over the recent stench and tear-gas bombings of nearly a score of independent theatres, the unions in St. Louis opened a battle over jurisdiction, and projectionists in Washington won their demands for wage increases.

Local 1 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers started picketing the St. Louis and Missouri theatres in St. Louis in a fight with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees over 22 jobs in the two houses. Circuit Judge John Joynt, however, issued a temporary restraining order, and on November 19th will hear arguments on a permanent injunction.

Under the wage scale agreement reached in Washington the theatres granted a five per cent wage increase effective November 1st and continuing until August 31, 1939. Employees then will receive a half per cent increase calculated on the basic salary as of Oct. 31, 1936 and finally on Aug. 31, 1940, they will receive a four and one-half per cent increase over the original basic salary.

Browne, Basson, Brandt Attend

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, and his brother, William, attended the meeting and others present were Joseph D. Basson, president of Motion Picture Machine Operators Local 306, and George E. Browne, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

Then, on Tuesday, representatives of Local 306, the Empire Union and the Allied Union met together for the first time in the office of Howard S. Cullman at the Roxy.

Present at the meeting were the three members of the Mayor's survey board, Messrs. Lewisohn, Collins and Cullman. For Local 306 was Joseph D. Basson, president; for Empire, Benjamin S. Greenstein, vice-president, and Frank Asch, business agent, and for Allied, Henry Glover, president; Sol B. Fine, business agent, and David Karpis, recording secretary.

"We are determined to put an end to this situation," the Mayor told the group. "It was going on when we took office and it breaks out from time to time. We have the responsibility of maintaining law and order in this city and caring for the interests of the city. In addition to these considerations these conditions are injurious to the motion picture industry.

"I want the difficulties existing between Mr. Brandt and the union straightened out, and to that end I have appointed a commission consisting of men whom the people know and have confidence in.

"There are only two alternatives—either the situation is going to be cleaned up, or else I will have to close the theatres. I have the responsibility, and I can do it if the situation gets beyond me."

During the negotiations the officials of Local 306 agreed to suspend picketing of the theatres. The Mayor communicated with officials of the Allied Operators and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Unions, which are not affiliated with the A. F. of L. and invited them to join the conferences.

Return of Records Ordered

The records of Local 306 that were seized by police in a raid on its office on October 30th in an effort to solve the bombings were ordered returned on Monday by Judge Isidor Wasservogel in state supreme court. The union, through its attorney, Matthew M. Levy, agreed to surrender the documents to the Queens district attorney for use in an investigation of the bombing of the Colony theatre in Jackson Heights. The judge said the raid should not have been conducted without a warrant, and added that he regarded it as illegal.

Mr. Levy, for the union, has filed suit in supreme court against Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine, Lieutenant Pike of the police bomb squad, and others who participated in the raid. The union is said to be suing for damages of $500,000, claiming that the seizure was illegal, that it paralyzed the activities of the association and that the police action amounted to defamation of character.

Commissioner Valentine has increased to 225 the detective force guarding theatres against further bombings. One bomb, which failed to explode and is in the hands of the police, had a percussion cap in the neck of a bottle of acid, with wires and batteries connected to an alarm clock.

ANTI-NAZIS PERSUADE MGM TO DROP FILMS WHICH THEY BRAND 'PRO-NAZI'

Short Subjects of Olympics Withdrawn After Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League Protests to Nicholas Schenck

Action Follows Meeting of Distributors and Exhibitors of Foreign Language Films; Second Victory for League

The anti-Nazis in New York have persuaded an American motion picture company to abandon distribution and exhibition of films which they pronounced pro-Nazi.

Threat of a boycott by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, of which Samuel Untermyer, lawyer, is president, has brought withdrawal from the domestic market of two Olympic short subjects, bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from American-Tobis and already shown in theatres of MGM's parent, Loew's, Inc.

A telegram addressed to Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's and MGM, by the executive board of the league last weekend, resulted in immediate withdrawal of one of the reels, "Olympic Ski Champions," from the Capitol theatre, New York, and subsequent announcement that neither of the films would be released nationally. The pictures were taken at the winter Olympics in Germany last year by the German branch of Tobis and a running narrative by Pete Smith was dubbed in after their purchase recently by MGM.

Withdrawal of the short subjects marks the first engagement of the League with a large distributor and is its second victory in two weeks in a campaign to block showings of pictures made in Nazi Germany or of pictures which return revenue to Germany. Last week the threat of boycott prevented the showing of "Amphitryon" at the Fifty-Fifth Street Playhouse, New York, after it was revealed that the picture, purporting to be French, in reality had been made in Germany by UFA.

Move Follows Mass Meeting

Although the League had been considering a boycott of the Olympic short product, the telegram to Mr. Schenck was a direct result of a meeting of distributors and exhibitors of foreign language pictures at the headquarters of the league last Friday. After long wrangling and personal recrimination some of those present charged the league with insincerity and refused to agree to any plan of cooperation until the "big fellows" were asked to join. Showing of MGM's Olympic pictures was cited as a specific example.

Immediately after the meeting the executive committee dispatched the following telegram to Mr. Schenck:

"We understand the Pete Smith shorts on the Olympic Games were produced by the Nazi German Government and sold to your organization for exclusive distribution in this country. As we boycott all German goods and services sold in this country we should be interested in a statement by you in this regard before we take definite action against your organization and theatres booking these shorts throughout the country."

FILMING PARLIAMENT OPPOSED BY BALDWIN

Prime Minister Baldwin, in his first utterance in the House of Commons since his illness, said:

"The answer is in the negative" to a suggestion from Harry Day, M. P., that "in view of the interest taken in British topical talking films, he will consider whether facilities should be granted by the Government for filming the proceedings of one of our debates."

When the sale of the Olympic pictures to MGM by American-Tobis was first announced the league deferred action on a possible boycott. The October issue of the Anti-Nazi Economic Bulletin carried a retraction of a previous charge that Tobis is a German company and a statement from W. E. Van Beverin, president of American-Tobis, that the parent company is wholly Dutch owned with headquarters in Amsterdam. The statement was made after it became known that the Joint Boycott Council of the American Jewish Congress and the Jewish Labor Committee was investigating the picture, "La Kermesse Heroique," "Carnival in Flanders," a Tobis production.

It was proved to the satisfaction of the Boycott Council that the picture was made by the French branch of Tobis and had no connection with Germany or the Nazis. Mr. Van Beverin was present at the meeting last Friday and again vigorously denied a charge that Tobis is a German company. He threatened a suit for libel against anyone who makes the charge in the future.

Arguments Fly

The Tobis official was one of the first to agree to a resolution, the only definite step taken at the meeting, that distributors will not release any film unless it bears a title showing the country of origin and, where possible, the producer.

The resolution was passed after another and much longer one had been howled down. This had provided in part that the distributors would agree to get the approval of the league before showing any film suspected of a Nazi taint. The resolution adopted, read:

"We, the undersigned producers, distributors and exhibitors . . . . . agree for ourselves and with each other that we will not exhibit or release any film unless the same bears upon its face a title descriptive of the country of production of the film and, where the information is available, the producer thereof."

The signers included Ben Radin, Cameo Pictures; A. T. Kaplan, Franco-American, Cinema de Paris and Cinema of Detroit; Archibald E. Levine, Filmarte theatre; Mr. Van Beverin for American-Tobis; a representative of the Fifty-Fifth Street Playhouse; David Brill, Globe Film Company; Kurt Laemmle; and Archie Mayers, Du World Pictures.

Blames Competitors

Discussion of a plan of cooperation proceded quietly until Mr. Brill, supported by a few of the others, contended that in some cases it is impossible to ascertain exactly the place of origin of a film and especially whether or not German capital is involved in any of the companies from which they might obtain films in countries other than Germany. Mr. Brill said that he wanted to be convinced of the sincerity of all those present before he agreed to take any action. He charged that two of his competitors were responsible for the boycott threat against "Amphitryon" which his company distributed.

His charges precipitated the violent argument in which the original purpose of the meeting was forgotten. Mr. Mayers of Du World announced, "I'll burn three German films in my office before any committee you want to name." This was greeted with a vigorous suggestion that he refrain from "heroics."

Demand "Big Fellows" Sign

Mr. Brill then injected the question of the Olympic short subjects into the discussion and asked why the League did not take action against MGM for exhibition of films obviously made in Nazi Germany. The point was taken up by Max A. and William Goldberg of European Film Corporation, among the most vociferous of the group, who refused to sign the resolution unless the "big fellows" were asked to sign. They declared that showing of the Olympic pictures by MGM was inconsistent in view of the recent anti-Nazi meeting in Hollywood, sponsored by Eddie Cantor, at which Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of MGM, was present. Dr. William S. Kalb, presiding at the meeting for the League, said that the matter would be taken up. Announcement of the telegram did not come until after the meeting was concluded.

The League includes in its list of officers, beside Mr. Untermyer, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, James W. Gerard and Arthur S. Tompkins, vice-presidents; Mrs. Mark Harris, acting chairman of the executive committee, and J. David Stern, treasurer.

A membership of more than 10,000 is claimed, with branch offices in Detroit, Chicago, Hollywood, New Orleans, Cleveland and Portland, Ore. The League's boycott operations against all German-made goods are carried on through affiliated organizations, including churches, synagogues, community centers and civic and fraternal groups said to have more than 2,000,000 members.

THEATRE CANNOT SUE CARRIER FOR MISS-OUT

U. S. Supreme Court Holds Carrier Not Liable for Exhibitor's Loss Caused by Delay

Resumption of activities Monday morning by the United States Supreme Court after its "summer" recess brought a decision of far-reaching importance to exhibitors, in the nature of relief granted to film carriers from suits for damages suffered by a theatre when the carrier fails to deliver a motion picture on schedule.

Failure of an express company to deliver a film shipment in time to permit a theatre to give an advertised exhibition does not make the express company liable for the exhibitor's loss of business, it was held by the court in reversing a decision of the South Carolina supreme court affirming damages in the amount of $1,500 awarded Pastime Amusement Company against Southeastern Express Company.

The express company accepted a film shipment from Jacksonville, Fla., to Charleston, S. C., on a declared valuation of $50 on which the rate was fixed. It failed to deliver the film in time to be exhibited as advertised. The theatre company filed suit to recover damages and was given a verdict of $1,500 as damages for the interruption of its business caused by the delay alleged to be due to negligence, the court holding that the limitation of liability did not apply.

"The federal statute controls," the United States supreme court declared. "The words of the statute 'are comprehensive enough to embrace all damages resulting from any failure to discharge a carrier's duty with respect to any part of the transportation to the agreed destination.' The statute thus applies to damages caused by delay in making delivery.

"The underlying principle is that the carrier is entitled to base rates upon value and that its compensation should bear a reasonable relation to the risk and responsibility assumed. The broad purpose of the federal act is to compel the establishment of reasonable rates and to provide for their uniform application. Special contracts are not permitted to give any advantage to a particular shipper. The liability in this instance is thus governed by the provisions of the applicable tariff and no recovery could be had in excess of the amount permitted by its terms."

Camera Standard Given Approval

The heads of all studio camera, laboratory and camera maintenance departments met this week in Hollywood to give their final approval to the standard automatic synchronizing system for cameras which has been worked out under the direction of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The system, which consists essentially of an argon vapor filled lamp with its associated standard sockets and connector plugs, will go into use in the studios immediately.

Members of the Academy Research Council Committee on industrial education also met for the first of a series of monthly meetings to check on the two courses in sound recording now being given at Hollywood High School to studio sound technicians under the auspices of the Council.

Chairmen of the five sections of the Technicians' Branch for the coming year are: art directors, Bernard Herzbrun; equipment, Peter Mole; film editors, Harold J. McCord; photographic, Ray June and sound, William Mueller.

Canadians Protest Club Chance Games

Chance game activities this week centered in the Dominion of Canada, where theatre interests in various sections were actively concerned over the growing popularity of Bingo, Keno, Housie-Housie and other games of chance under club auspices in halls and other quarters in opposition to theatres.

At Winnipeg, an issue developed between the theatres and club operators, and the battle was brought before the Board of Police Commissioners. The situation came to a head when the authorities banned games of chance at several Winnipeg suburban theatres, exhibitors claiming that club and dance hall proprietors were conducting similar features without hindrances.

At Windsor, Ont., the police raided a Bingo club which was being patronized by some 500 persons, arrested the manager and seized the equipment, a gaming charge being entered on the books for an early hearing. Action also is contemplated in other centers.

In Connecticut, Warner Bros. has reinstated Bank Night in the Commodore Hull theatre at Derby, and resumption in other theatres operated by the circuit is expected soon.

The Florida supreme court is to be asked to decide whether a theatre can be sued if a Bank Night prize is refused to a patron. The case will go before the court on a writ of error granted Gulf Theatres, Inc., operator of the Tampa theatre at Tampa, following a verdict for $1,583 granted to W. A. Rice in a lower court.

Survey Shows All Companies Use Long Reel

All major distributing companies have adopted the 2,000-foot reel, supplanting the formerly standard 1,000-foot reel, according to a survey just conducted among home offices in New York. Universal, last to put the new regulations into practical adoption, has been delayed only until required splicing equipment could be installed in the Universal exchange.

Paramount released "The Big Broadcast of 1937" on the 2,000-foot reel, the print running almost 10,000 feet. It was necessary, however, to wind a number of prints on the 1,000-foot spindles for the use of certain theatres which are not yet equipped to handle the larger size.

Distributors in Canada are following the lead of the United States as rapidly as the changeover can be effected.

Among the local situations interfering with general adoption of the new standard, only Boston continues in the unsettled column. In that city presentations made to the commissioner of public safety a month ago have not yet been acted upon due to his absence from the city on other duties. It is believed he will act favorably.

Fox West Coast Denies Charges

Attorneys for Fox West Coast have entered a straight denial of all charges in an answer filed in the circuit court of appeals in San Francisco to an appeal brief filed several weeks ago by William H. Neblett. Mr. Neblett's brief, on behalf of his clients, T. L. Tally and the Corbar Corporation, seeks to reopen the Fox West Coast receivership proceedings on the ground that the adjudication was obtained by fraud and conspiracy.

In Kansas City a creditors' hearing on the final report of Herbert V. Jones, trustee, concerning the receivership of Fox Midland Theatres and Fox Rocky Mountain Theatres, has been set for November 17th. Unless there is objection to the report and accounting by a creditor after that date, Judge Albert L. Reeves of the United States district court will discharge the trustee, and the litigation begun by voluntary bankruptcy petitions on March 8, 1933, will be ended.

Louis B. Mayer has expressed himself as favorable to the suggestion of William Woodfield, San Francisco business man and a director of the San Francisco Bay Bridges Exposition to be held in 1939, that he support a project having as its aim the production of an exhibit, for the Exposition, showing the progress of the motion picture industry from its inception.

LEGION OF DECENCY TELLS HOW TO "JUDGE MORALITY" OF FILMS

Manual Authorized by Episcopal Committee Is Issued for Circulation Among the Legion's Members and Other Groups

Reiterates Sources of Social Disapproval Now Met and Largely Solved by the Production Code Administration

THE Legion of Decency, in the course of its attentions to the screen, this week released the text of a manual for circulation among its members and adherents, under the title of "How to Judge the Morality of Motion Pictures." The document carries the official authorization of the Episcopal Committee of the Legion.

This treatise on standards of judgment, amplified with citations of examples of issues to be met, becomes of special interest to showmen in its presentation of what may be considered the demands of a large proportion of the consumers of screen entertainment.

Further, this manual becomes a significant reiteration of those sources of the social disapproval which has periodically given rise to various regulative pressures and movements addressed at external controls of the screen—a set of problems now met and largely solved internally by the industry through the functioning of the Production Code Administration.

—THE EDITOR

It is generally recognized that entertainment is either helpful or harmful. A clear distinction must, therefore, be made between

(a) entertainment which tends to elevate or to relax men and women physically or mentally tired with the duties and occupations of everyday life, and

(b) entertainment which tends to lower their ideals and moral standards of life.

The right kind of entertainment helps to maintain a normal outlook on life. It may go far in keeping a nation sound in mind and in heart. The wrong sort of entertainment, on the other hand, tends to lower moral ideals and to give a wholly false conception of life and its responsibilities.

Motion pictures must be judged not only as entertainment but also as an influence on morals. A screen drama influences morals because it presents ideals of human conduct. If these be true ideals, we have entertainment which ennobles; if they be false, we have entertainment which degrades.

Influence—Good or Bad

Film stories, as a rule, deal with men and women who are facing some problem in their lives and are trying to solve it. In every screen drama we see human beings in action or we see them reacting to certain influences. But human acts can never be considered apart from morality. The deliberate act of man is either good or bad. Man's purposes are good or bad. Man's passions—love, hatred, desire, abomination, joy, sadness, hope, despair, fear, temerity and anger—fall under the scope of the moral law. Screen characters may lie, steal, commit perjury; they may forgive, suffer, make sacrifices for the sake of right. And even though these characters live only on the screen, even though all they say and do be wholly imaginary, their actions, their desires and their ambitions must be measured by objective and unchanging moral standards.

The films not only show human beings in action, but give a moral color to their acts in such a way as to bring about a definite moral response from the audience. As one watches the unreeling of a story, his mind, feelings and will consciously or otherwise react. He approves or disapproves of what the characters do; he is moved to sympathy or to antagonism. When leading characters, either by what they say or do, express their attitude toward right and wrong, or when they accept or reject some standard of conduct, those in the audience are very likely to be influenced by them.

It is natural to adopt the ideals of a person who is greatly admired. If this is done one is likely to approve his conduct. And since an audience may conceive a strong liking for certain characters in a motion picture, it is easily led to sympathize with them and to share their moral convictions.

In brief, then, there are two reasons why a motion picture can powerfully influence personal morality: First, because in dealing with life and conduct it must inevitably present or imply a moral thesis; secondly, because it tends to persuade an audience to accept that thesis. If the thesis be true, the film is an agency for good. If the thesis be false, the film is an agency for good. If the thesis be false, the film is an evil influence. Obviously, obscure expressions, songs, gestures and actions which are part of otherwise unobjectionable motion pictures exert an evil influence.

Purpose of the Legion of Decency

The purpose of the Legion of Decency is to see that motion pictures conform to the accepted and traditional morality upon which the home and civilization are founded.

The Legion of Decency condemns obscenities of every kind in the moving picture. It condemns salaciousness—any appeal to the lower instincts of an audience, such as might be made by protracted and lustful intimacies between the sexes, by disrobing scenes or by other suggestive sequences. The Legion of Denency is governed by good sound common sense. It is not narrow-minded. While it agrees that the human body is beautiful it recognizes the serious moral danger to those seeing it exposed on the screen under attractive circumstances. It must condemn presentations introduced merely for suggestive display.

All these are highly important objectives. But the principal aim of the Legion is to discourage the production and patronizing of films which present false moral standards which, in turn, lower traditional morality.

By "traditional standards of morality" is meant such principles of conduct as the following: "Murder is wrong. Stealing is wrong. Perjury is wrong. Honor is due to father and mother." These standards, together with many relating to sex, follow from the code of right and wrong written into the consciences of men by God Himself. They have been generally known and accepted during all the centuries, not only by Christians, but by Jews, pagans, and by men of no religious affiliation. They are expressed in the Ten Commandments.

Examples

Many persons who readily admit the existence of these traditional laws find it difficult to obey them, owing to the weakness of human nature. If there were no evasion of the principles laid down by them, neither their validity nor their binding force upon the human conscience would be questioned. A film story making a powerful argument against accepted moral standards could easily persuade such persons to change their convictions about right and wrong.

The following may serve as examples:

PICTURE "A"

This is a deeply moving triangle story. It is entirely devoid of salacious details, but it proposes the doctrine that when a man's wife is selfish and unsympathetic he is entirely justified in turning to another woman for love and happiness. In short, the film condones and justifies adultery. It does this, not by ethical arguments but by emotional appeal. Deeply stirred by the picture, many of those witnessing it are apt to sympathize with the hero, approve his conduct, and thus change their former convictions. They may be led to believe that under certain circumstances adultery is excusable. Here is a false moral standard, wholly at variance with traditional beliefs.

PICTURE "B"

A story of young romance. Because of some circumstances—parental objections, let us say, of lack of money—the hero and heroine are forced to postpone marriage indefinitely. They are young; they are persuaded that they cannot live without each other; they refuse to await marriage. Here is a film which by its sympathetic treatment presents most speciously the doctrine that sex experience is but the innocent culmination of love. It preaches that true lovers would be fools to defer it until marriage, and that pre-marital relations in such cases are pardonable. Because the hero is attractive and the heroine beautiful, the audience is inclined to sympathize with them, and even approve what they do. It may be persuaded that deep and tender love excuses sin. Here, again, is a false moral standard, wholly at variance with traditional morality.

PICTURE "C"

An old-fashioned plot in which the heroine sacrifices her virtue as the price of success in some splendid attempt—to win the opportunity of becoming a great artist, to save her country as a spy, to forward a brother's professional career, etc., etc. The picture implies that the sacrifice is a noble one, and asks the approval of the audience, which is too often given! Thus the film preaches that a good end justifies evil means, and that sinful conduct can under certain circumstances be justified. This is a false moral doctrine, wholly at variance, not only with the will of God and the teaching of fundamental morality, but with the interests of society in general.

PICTURE "D"

A "kept-woman" drama which begins with the heroine debating whether or not she will accept an apartment from a married man. Her hesitation arises not from the fact that adultery is a sin against God's law—a factor which the film carefully refrains from noting—but that it is a violation of social standards and conventions. She makes her decision. Society, she assures herself, is contemptible; its conventions are stupid and outworn. She will defy the world. Thus the heroine is depicted as a courageous and attractive rebel. Many in the audience may applaud her independence and despise her critics. Meanwhile they may be learning to believe that in certain cases sin may not really be sin, but merely a justified revolt against social manners, forms or customs. Here is a false moral doctrine, wholly at variance with the fundamental teachings of morality.

TEXT OF LEGION OF DECENCY MANUAL

PICTURE "E"

A high-speed farce, revolving around the friendly rivalry between two hearty fellows in their attempts to seduce the heroine, who is shown as the worldly-wise, impertinent and "wise-cracking" type of young woman. The competition between the men—their schemes, their ludicrous pursuit of the heroine, their clumsy advances to her, together with her repeated refusals—is the occasion of much laughter. This film naturally contains many objectionable lines and scenes; but its chief danger lies in the fact that it portrays lust as amusing and seduction as a laughable incident. Obviously, such a film is destructive of true moral values in the minds of an audience.

PICTURE "F"

A gangster melodrama in which the leading character is presented as a clever and resourceful lawbreaker. He is successful financially. He is popular and lives luxuriously. The police, the guardians of the law, are made to appear inefficient and stupid. The "crook" easily outwits them, meanwhile displaying to the audience details of criminal procedure—the opening of safes, clever provisions for escape, the use of fire-arms, anesthetics, etc. Even though in the end the "crook" is brought to justice, such a film is potentially dangerous to public welfare, since it tends to glorify crime and the criminal and suggests ways of committing crime. It typifies the wrong kind of entertainment.

The case might be summed up as follows:

Traditional moral standards, based on the law of God, teach that certain acts are sinful and that certain acts are virtuous. Many films, however, by their insidious and attractive presentation of false standards, induce their patrons to change their lifelong convictions and to believe that, occasionally, at least, certain sins are virtues and certain virtues are sins. All this means moral disaster, for when convictions are perverted, conduct invariably undergoes a change for the worse.

The Production Code

The Production Code is a detailed and inclusive formula adopted by the principal producers of American motion pictures to regulate the morals of the movies. It is a voluntary system of self-regulation. Its character and purposes are commended by the Legion of Decency.

The following is an outline of its principal provisions:

1. No picture shall be produced in which evil is made to appear attractive and good unattractive.
2. No picture shall be produced in which sympathy of the audience is thrown on the side of wrongdoing, evil, sin, or against goodness, honor, innocence, purity or honesty.
3. Correct standards of life shall, as far as possible, be presented.
4. Law, human or divine, shall not be ridiculed, nor shall sympathy be created for its violation.
5. Treatment of crime must not make heroes of criminals nor seem to justify their actions.
6. Sympathy of the audience must not be thrown against marriage as an institution.

The Production Code is administered by the Production Code Administration, a board created by the Producers' Association. It is intended to interpret, to apply and to enforce the provisions of the Production Code. Its activities embrace the reading of scripts, consultation with writers and producers and examination of completed motion pictures.

LEGION REVIEWS 11 NEW PICTURES

Of 11 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, seven were approved for general patronage and four were classed as unobjectionable for adults. The new pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, "Unobjectionable for General Patronage": "Cavalry," "Country Gentlemen," "Der Mude Theodor," "Flying Hostess," "Make Way for a Lady," "Riding Avenger," "Under Your Spell." Class A-2, "Unobjectionable for Adults": "Come and Get It," "Glueckspilze," "Les Miserables," "The Smartest Girl in Town."

Responsibilities of Motion Pictures

The Legion of Decency holds that far more than any other form of popular entertainment, the motion pictures have the obligation of not subverting traditional morality by the presentation of films that are degrading. It urges that their immense influence be used rather for the education, recreation and general welfare of the people. The stage and books of fiction, with their helpful or harmful influence, reach many thousands each year. But their number is insignificant when compared with the millions who are influenced by the screen. The drama and books, moreover, appeal for the greater part to the mature and the educated—that is, to those whose moral convictions are, in a measure, fixed. But motion pictures set patterns of human conduct before all classes. Particularly do they reach the young, who naturally are eager for experience, either personal or vicarious, and whose moral standards may be easily raised or lowered.

In brief, because the motion pictures reach greater numbers and speak with extraordinary pursuasiveness to impressionable people, their producers have special moral obligations to the public. They should avoid confusing morals. They should present only correct standards of life.

The charge that the Legion of Decency wants writers to treat only of an unreal, Pollyanna-type world, and that artists are forbidden to touch upon the story of man's frailty, is one advanced, of course, only by persons ignorant of both history and literature. The truth is that sinful acts are acknowledged by Catholics to be legitimate material for book, stage or screen. But they insist—and with special emphasis as far as motion pictures are concerned—that such conduct be not condoned; that evil be presented as evil, and good as good, and that the evil, even if condemned, be not presented alluringly.

The Legion of Decency is concerned not so much about the materials selected for a story as about the moral treatment of those materials. It is not the theme of a picture that is of major concern but the thesis; not the plot—whether this deals with murder, greed or lust—but the ethical implications which the plot, the action or the dialogue may convey. Does the story preach an immoral doctrine? Does it propose a false estimate of human conduct? These are the all-important questions. The Legion of Decency, in short, does not object to human problems being dramatized on the screen; it does not deny that sin and crime may at times be necessary ingredients of a plot; but the Legion is deeply concerned with what elicits the sympathy of the audience and influences its judgment. The audience must not be led to accept false principles and to condone wrongdoing.

When moral evil is portrayed in a film, it should never be pictured as good, admirable, or justifiable. And, conversely, moral good should never be proposed as evil, foolish or despicable.

Pursuant to the Encyclical of Pope Pius XI on motion pictures July 2, a Legion of Decency pledge is to be presented to all Catholics in the churches of the United States on Sunday, December 13. This pledge will read thus:

"I condemn indecent and immoral motion pictures, and those which glorify crime or criminals.

"I promise to do all that I can to strengthen public opinion against the production of indecent and immoral films, and to unite with all who protest against them.

"I acknowledge my obligation to form a right conscience about pictures that are dangerous to my moral life. As a member of the Legion of Decency, I pledge myself to remain away from them. I promise, further, to stay away altogether from places of amusement which show them as a matter of policy."

This puts into circulation and effect a nationally uniform pledge, a sequel to the several pledge movements sectionally instituted at the birth of the Legion of Decency.

Briggs of Pathe Named To Board of DuPont

O. Henry Briggs, president of Pathe Film Corporation, has been elected to the board of directors of DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation in which Pathe holds a large stock interest. Mr. Briggs fills a vacancy created by the recent resignation of Robert W. Atkins, a Pathe director. Frank F. Kolbe, former president of Pathe and a director of that company, is also a member of the DuPont Film board.

HEAVY PROFIT INCREASES SEND UP STOCKS, BRING TALK OF DIVIDENDS

20th Century-Fox Announces $4,451,851 Net for Thirty-nine Weeks, RCA $1,083,604 for Its Third Quarter, 1936

Warner Net of $3,000,000 for Fiscal Year Indicated; Loew's Stock at High of 63½, Paramount First Preferred 139½

Impressive increases in profits reported by the large motion picture corporations for the last year are gaining the attention both of Wall Street and the investing public, and are sending the stocks to new highs with the additional reaction of suggesting further dividend payments to the many thousands of stockholders.

Complementing the highly profitable reports already made known by other large companies, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation this week announced a $4,451,851 net profit, after all charges, for only 39 weeks; the Radio Corporation of America, which has considerable holdings in radio, television and motion pictures, reported a third-quarter net profit of $1,083,604; Warner Brothers-First National Pictures were making ready their annual financial statement, for announcement on November 15th, when it is expected the corporation will disclose a $3,000,000 net for the fiscal year.

Loew's stock on the New York Stock Exchange reached a year's high of 63½, from a low price of 43 for the year; Paramount Pictures first preferred reached 139½, the year's low price having been 59; Paramount Pictures second preferred hit 18, from a low of 8⅛; Twentieth Century-Fox during the week rocketed to 37⅝, climbing from a 22½ low established earlier in the year, bringing with it the Fox preferred, to a new price of 46½ from a year's low of 31⅜; Warner Brothers Pictures went to 16⅝, from a low of 9¼, and Warner Brothers preferred established a year's high at 64½, some 20 points above the year's low of 44.

Lead Other Groups at Times

The performances of these "blue chip" stocks of the motion picture business brought headline attention in the financial press and frequently in the week led all other industrial groups in the movement upward that followed the sweeping victory of President Roosevelt. Many millions of dollars were added to the values of the film issues, with both public holders of the issues and the corporations themselves benefiting.

With Paramount during one New York Stock Exchange session gaining 13 points—a sensation in all trading for the day—attention immediately was turned to this first preferred issue (a six per cent cumulative convertible stock of $100 par) on which no dividends have been paid since the date of issue, January 1, 1935. Back dividends, therefore, will amount to $12 per share by the end of this year. The possibility of dividend action has been admitted by company officials, but no specific indication was given as to when this might be expected. Paramount's third quarter financial report is expected to be released in about one week.

The Wall Street Journal of the Dow, Jones financial news interests, which has been keeping a particularly close watch on motion picture earnings and stock performances of late, observed this week that, "Continued gains in profits of the motion picture companies in the final months of this year will impel a number of the leading companies to make substantial distributions of dividends before the year-end in order to avoid increased levies under the tax on undistributed profits." The report continued:

EXHIBITORS ELECTED TO STATE OFFICES

Roy Rowe of the Rowe Amusement Company, Burgaw, North Carolina, has been elected State Senator from the Ninth District, comprising four counties. Running on the Democratic ticket, he was elected in a landslide.

E. A. Briles, exhibitor at Stafford, Kansas, was reelected to the state House of Representatives and J. C. Phillips, exhibitor of Colby, was chosen a member of the same body.

"The most striking turn-around has been made by Paramount which is expected to report over $1,500,000 for its September quarter and considerabe more the final three months. It is possible that Paramount will earn more than $4,000,000 in the last six months of the year, making a substantial payment against arrears of preferred dividends probable. Paramount's $24,998,182 first preferred will have $12 in accruals by December 31. There is $6,441,408 6% $10 par second preferred and 1,610,458 shares of common.

20th Century-Fox Profit

"Twentieth Century-Fox has just reported a net profit of $4,451,851 for the first nine months period (39 weeks) equal after preferred dividends to $2.38 a share on 1,228,041 shares of common stock. Earnings in the final quarter will probably be at least $2,000,000. In addition, some substantial income will probably be received from National Theatres Corporation in which Twentieth Century has a 42 per cent stock interest. One dividend of $1 a share has already been declared on the Twentieth Century common stock and the management has indicated its intention of making another payment before the end of the year. This should be at least $1 and may be more. Earnings of National Theatres are estimated at around $3,000,000 for this year, of which Twentieth Century's share would be about $1,200.000. Including equity in these earnings, Twentieth Century probably will report in the neighborhood of $4.50 a share for its common stock for 1936.

"Substantial dividend distribution on the common stock has caused conversion of some part of the 1,357,833 shares of $1.50 preferred stock. The preferred is convertible into one and a quarter shares of common and if $2 or more is paid on the common this year, as now seems likely, preferred holders would obtain $2.50 a share income by exercising their conversion privilege. The $1 initial dividend on the common was paid on October 23. Further conversion may take place if the next payment on the common is in excess of $1.

Sees Warner 60 to 70 Cent Net

"Loew's, Inc., and Warner Brothers have an August 31 fiscal year, so that they do not come under the new tax law for 1936. Warner Brothers, which will probably show a net profit of 60 to 70 cents a share earned for the 1936 fiscal year is therefore unlikely to make any dividend distribution in the 1936 calendar year.

"Loew's is expected to report in the neighborhood of $6.50 a share for its August 31, 1936 fiscal year. Some write-offs may be necessary as a result of the death of Irving Thalberg, but if charges are made for this purpose they probably will come out of surplus. Loew's paid out $2.50 a share in its 1936 fiscal year, 50 cents quarterly plus an extra 50 cents last December. In the current fiscal year 50 cents plus 50 cents extra was paid September 30. A substantial extra probably will be declared at the board meeting this month and the policy of the management may be to continue quarterly extras throughout the 1937 fiscal year; paying out the bulk of earnings."

20th-Fox Net $3.27 on Preferred

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation on Thursday reported a consolidated net operating profit of $4,451,851 after all charges, including federal income taxes, except provision for surtax on undistributed profits, for the 39 weeks ending Sept. 26, 1936. This compares with a profit of $1,996,324 for the first 39 weeks of 1935. For the quarter ending Sept. 26, 1936, the consolidated profit from operations, after all charges including normal federal income taxes, was $1,682,661, compared with a profit of $640,543 for the third quarter of 1935. The first quarter of 1936 showed a profit of $1,239,760, and the second quarter a profit of $1,529,430.

Consolidated income of Twentieth Century-Fox for the 39 weeks ended September 26, 1936, compares as follows with the same 39 weeks in 1935:

	39 Weeks Ending Sept. 26, 1936	39 Weeks Ending Sept. 28, 1935
Income from film sales and rents	$36,378,432	$30,402,160
Dividends	......	121,649
Proportion of profit controlled subsidiaries, not consolidated	192,958	221,906
Other income	746,503	619,382
Total income	$37,317,893	$31,365,097
Operating expenses	8,735,771	7,810,309
Amortization of production costs	18,525,521	15,758,255
Participation in film rentals	4,429,512	4,897,364
Proportion of loss of controlled subsidiaries, not consolidated	87,975	130,604
Interest expense	147,200	214,608
Amortization of discount and expenses on funded debt	26,437	43,961
*Depreciation of fixed assets	198,626	209,671
Provision for normal federal income taxes	715,000	304,000
Net profit	$ 4,451,851	$ 1,996,325

Not including depreciation of studio buildings and equipment absorbed in production costs.*

On the basis of 1,357,831 shares of $1.50 dividend cumulative convertible preferred stock outstanding, the consolidated net operating profit for the first 39 weeks of 1936 amounts to $3.27 per share on the preferred stock. After allowing for the preferred dividend of $1.12½ per share for the 39 weeks, 37½ cents paid March 31, June 30, and September 30, respectively, there remained a profit equivalent to $2.38 a share on the 1,228,041½ shares of common stock outstanding.

RCA Net $1,083,604 for Quarter

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, released for publication Friday the statement of income and surplus of the Corporation and its service companies for the third quarter of 1936 and the first nine months of the year.

The statement shows a net income of $1,083,604 for the third quarter, ending September 30, representing an increase of $571,617 over the corresponding quarter of last year. The net income of $2,847,384 for the first nine months of 1936 is an increase of $46,261 over the corresponding period of 1935.

The report in the adjoining columns is RCA's consolidated statement of income and surplus for the nine months ended September 30, 1936, as compared with the same period of 1935.

Net operating profits of Pathe Exchange, Inc., for the 39 weeks ended September 26, after federal taxes, totaled $24,687.

Net profit from laboratory operations amounted to $92,950. Net income from film rentals, after distribution allowances and producers' participation, aggregated $46,898. The loss sustained from selling, administrative and general expense was $98,726. Non-operating profit consisted to $131,842, of which $105,000 was interest and discount earned from dividends by DuPont Film Manufacturing.

Sales from film developing and printing work amounted to $509,995. The profit before interest and other items was $33,115.

A. T. & T. Refinancing

The second step in the large-scale refinancing program of American Telephone and Telegraph Company—controlling Western Electric and its Erpi and Audio Motion Picture subsidiaries—was taken this week when the company filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington a registration statement for an issue of $160,000,000 of three and one quarter per cent 30-year debentures.

Subject to the sale of the new debentures, the A. T. and T. board approved the call and redemption at 110 on February 1, 1937, of the $150,000,000 of 5 per cent debentures of 1965.

It was announced that of the proposed new three and one quarter per cent debenture issue $20,000,000 will be withheld for sale to the pension trust funds of the Bell System companies and $140,000,000 sold to the public by a group of underwriters headed by Morgan Stanley and Co. At present $16,000,000 of the called 5 per cent debentures are held in the pension trust funds, which also have $4,000,000 of cash on hand.

The proposed financing will bring a total of $335,000,000 of three and one quarter per cent in refunding bonds issued by the company recently. An issue of $175,000,000 of three and one quarter per cent debentures was sold last month in what was the largest single piece of corporate financing in history, as well as since the S. E. C. was brought into being. Of the $175,000,000 issued $25,000,000 was withheld from public sale for the pension trust funds of the Bell System, the remaining $150,000,000 offered publicly on October 15 at 101 and accrued interest by a syndicate headed by Morgan Stanley and Co.

New Canadian Radio Control Body Starts

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Ottawa, newly organized governmental organization for the control of broadcasting and the licensing of studios in the Dominion, began operations this week with Murray Gladstone as director.

The corporation is answerable to Parliament through the Minister of Transport. The establishment, maintenance and operation of studios as well as the making of agreements with private broadcasting companies are authorized. The new organization's operations will be financed by licensing fees on receiving sets and by parliamentary appropriation.

Plans 16mm for Far East

Clem Samuels, who recently sold his Oriental Distributing Corporation in Batavia to United Artists, has arrived in New York with plans for entering the 16mm production and distribution business in the Dutch East Indies. He plans to sail for London October 20 and return to Batavia after a tour of the continent.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Product Level

Upward from recent low levels curved the line indicating productions before the camera in a Hollywood work week unslowed by the business of balloting. Eleven pictures were started. Six were taken to the cutting room.

Selnick International started "A Star Is Born." Fredric March and Janet Gaynor are starred. The support consists of Andy Devine, Guinn Williams, Arthur Hoyt, Adrian Rosely, Rex Evans and Franklin Pangborn. William A. Wellman is directing. Wanger Productions started "History Is Made At Night." With Frank Borzage directing, Jean Arthur, Charles Boyer, Ivan Debedeff, Leo Carillo, Colin Clive, George Meeker, Lucien Provao and Adele St. Mauer are featured. These films loom as the most attractive on the schedules.

Two films started at Universal. The first, a Buck Jones production titled "Sand Flow," features Mr. Jones with Lita Chevret, Bob Terry, Arthur Aylesworth, Robert Kortman, Joseph Swickhard, Tom Chatterton and Malcolm Graham. Les Selander is directing. The second feature, "Secret Agent X-9," a straight Universal number, will present Scott Kolk, Henry Hunter, Gene Rogers, Henry Brandon and Noah Beery, Jr. Ford Beebe and Cliff Smith are co-directing.

Republic also started a pair. In "Missing Men" Lloyd Hughes, Eddie Nugent, Kay Hughes, William Newell, Theodore von Eltz, Christine Maple, Smiley Burnette and Edwin Maxwell will be seen. John Auer is directing. The cast for "Riders Of The Whistling Skull" includes Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, Mary Russell, Fern Emmett, John Ward, Yakima Canutt and Roger Williams. Mack Wright is directing.

At MGM, a studio which has been working on a reduced schedule for some weeks but which will become exceedingly active during the present month, "Sinner Take All" started. Bruce Cabot, Margaret Lindsay, Eadie Adams, Raymond Hatton and Vivienne Osborne are the present principals. Errol Taggart is the director.

Paramount started "Trail Dust," a Harry Sherman production. William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and George Hayes again are featured in another "Hopalong Cassidy" story with Stephen Morris, Gwynne Shipman, Britt Wood, John Beach and Al St. John. Nate Watt is directing.

"I Promise to Pay" was started at Columbia. The cast is headed by Chester Morris, Leo Carillo, Helen Mack and Patsy O'Connor. D. Ross Lederman is directing.

Grand National started "Arizona Days," an Ed Finney production which Jack English is directing. It will present Tex Ritter, Eleanor Stewart, Ethelind Terry, William Faversham, Warner Richmond, Snub Pollard, William Desmond, Sidy Saylor, Forrest Taylor and Charles King.

QUESTION: TO BE OR NOT TO BE TYPED

To be or not to be typed, that is the question long pondered, seldom satisfactorily answered, by players.

Just now Paul Muni, distinguished for his Dr. Pasteur, is all for continuing in biographical portrayals, with Danton and Zola in prospect.

And just now Greta Garbo, after "Anna Karenina" and "Camille," wants a modern role to bring her down to date.

So goes Hollywood.

At Warners "Trial Horse" started. Barton MacLane, June Travis and Wayne Morris are the principals. B. Reeves Eason is directing.

Last of the starting group is "With Love And Kisses," Melody. Players who will be seen include Pinky Tomlin, Toby Wing, Kane Richmond, Russell Hopton, G. Pat Collins, Arthur Housman and Kenneth Thompson. Leslie Goodwins is directing.

The studios that started two pictures also completed two. Universal finished "Three Smart Girls" and Murder On The Mississippi." The first film features Binnie Barnes, Ray Milland, Alice Brady, Charles Winninger, Nan Grey, Dianna Durbin, Barbara Reed, Mischa Auer, Hobart Cavanaugh, Ernest Cossart, Lucille Watson, Nella Walker, Charles Coleman, Ed Gargan and Heinie Conklin. Henry Koster directed. In the second are James Dunn, Andy Devine, Hobart Cavanaugh, Russell Wade, Pat O'Malley, Jean Rogers, David Oliver, Michael Loring, Herbert Rawlinson, Claude Gillingwater, Joyce Compton, Richard Carle and J. Farrell MacDonald. Arthur Lubin directed.

The first of Republic's finished productions is "The Mandarin Mystery." The cast consists of Eddie Quillan, Charlotte Henry, Rita LaRoy, Wade Boteler, Franklyn Pangborn, George Irving, Kay Hughes, William Newell, George Walcott, Edwin Stanley, Edgar Allen, Anthony Merrill and Monte Vandegrift. Ralph Staub directed. In "Beware Of Ladies," which Irving Pichel directed, Donald Cook, Judith Allen, George Meeker, Russell Hopton, Phil Dunham, William Newell, Robert Strange, Robert Emmett Keane, Dwight Frye, Goodee Montgomery, William Crowell and Josephine Whittell will be seen.

"One Man's Bonus" moved off the stages at Paramount. It will present Edward Everett Horton, Charlotte Wynters, Margaret Seddon, Margaret McWade, Irving Bacon, Porter Hall, J. M. Kerrigan, Purnell Pratt, G. Pat Collins and Eddie Acuff. Ray McCarey directed.

Completing the list of finished pictures, Hal Roach checked in "Way Out West." Laurel and Hardy are featured with Sharon Lynne, Rosina Lawrence, James Finlayson, Tiny Sanford, James Norton and Flora Finch. James Horne directed.

The Briskin Plan

Scoffers, habitual second guessers and those others who saw no more than a successful publicity stunt in Samuel J. Briskin's offer to lend young contract players to Little and Community theatre groups are coming around swiftly to a realization that the Radio production chief meant precisely what he said when he declared that the motion picture industry must help theatres of this type if they are to survive as a continued help to the screen.

Into Mr. Briskin's office, in answer to his published announcement and direct communications to resident stage directors, came hunderds of requests for screen talent.

The Briskin plan reveals two aspects. One, the local theatre gains the players, thus bolstering its production with Hollywood names. Two, Radio especially, and Hollywood generally, gains good will, and the young players who are loaned gain experience in facing an audience under conditions they could garner in no other way.

Players on the Radio contract list who will be available to little theatres include Lucille Ball, Anita Colby, Alan Curtis, Owen Davis, Jr., Harry Jans, Ray Mayer, Judith Blake, William Corson, Diana Gibson, Betty Grable, Paul Guilfoyle, Jane Hamilton, Vinton Haworth, Philip Huston, Maxine Jennings, Gordon Jones, Louise Latimer, Thelma Leeds, Barbara Pepper, Edward Price and Patricia Wilder, in addition to others whom the studio may acquire. All who will be available have had screen experience and many also have appeared on the legitimate stage.

As requests flow in from stage directors asking information as to how, when and where they may obtain player loans, the Briskin office is busy telling them. The rules are that any actor on the list may be borrowed by any legitimate Little or Community Theatre for two weeks, providing the date requested does not conflict with any previously announced motion picture schedule. The studio will pay the player's salary, while the theatre will be asked only to meet traveling and living expenses.

In each case the theatre requesting a player will submit the play script to Radio. If the actor requested is considered suitable for the role specified, he or she will be first rehearsed in the part by Mrs. Lela Rogers, director of the Radio Studio Theatre and talent school. Later the player will report to the theatre group in time for a week's rehearsal with the local cast.

MGM ACTS TO SET NEW METHODS FOR MERCHANDISING ITS PRODUCT

Executives of Distribution, Advertising, Exploitation Make Flying Visits to Exhibitors to Discuss Their Mutual Problems

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has taken the initiative of sending its top-notch distribution, advertising and exploitation executives from the home office in Times Square into the field on flying visits to determine at first hand from exhibitors just what might be incorporated in new standards of merchandising and exploitation.

The company's executives met in Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Chicago with independent and affiliated circuit executives, managers and other members of the circuits' personnel and discussed at length the problems that confront exhibitors when preparing campaigns for their feature attractions.

Out of these meetings has evolved a questionnaire which is to be sent to every member of the large circuit staffs, the answers to which will serve as the basis for handling of MGM's advertising and exploitation material on all coming pictures.

Among the questions put to the theatre operators were those covering the following:

Effect of appearance of motion picture stars and feature players on nationally broadcast radio programs;

Box office rating of MGM players;

The value of billboard advertising;

The size of paper, the size of various individual advertisements;

The value of serials running in newspapers;

Double feature policies;

The length and nature of material to be used in trailers and the general content of pressbooks;

The value of a trademark;

Screen forecasts;

Production of electrical transcriptions for radio advertising.

Not quite one week ago, W. F. Rodgers, general sales manager; Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity; William F. Ferguson, director of exploitation; E. M. Saunders, western division sales manager, and Thomas J. Connors, southern division sales manager, left the MGM home office for Washington. There they gathered in the offices of John Payette, Warner divisional theatre chief, for the first of the sessions which later were described as having "cemented the friendship of the company with the important theatre circuits." Mr. Payette had called in his organization, which spreads into five surrounding states, and following a full day's discussion of the exhibitors' problems and the explanation on the part of the MGM contingent of what their company planned, the party entrained for Philadelphia.

At the Warner Brothers Earle Theatre Building headquarters, Ted Schlanger, who is in charge of that district, welcomed the visitors for his assembled workers, and the same ground gone over the day before was again covered. The third gathering, the next day, was in Pittsburgh, where Warners' Harry Kalmine presided.

Cleveland was the next stop. Here the visitors talked to the Warner staff under Nat Wolf and the meeting was addressed by Harry Warner and Joseph Bernhard, head of the Warner theatre interests.

The final gathering was in the Balaban and Katz headquarters in Chicago, where John Balaban presided. Besides the members of the staffs of the B & K theatres, representatives from all the houses of the Great States circuit were present.

Salesmen to Aid Theatres

After the meetings in each of the towns visited, the MGM executives were guests of honor at luncheons, at which, Mr. Ferguson said, the discussions continued in a most satisfactory manner because individual problems were more thoroughly discussed. It was from these meetings, he said, that he learned the exhibitors are no longer using just "press-book stuff," but are bringing to the front their own ingenuity and originality to build up pictures playing their theatres.

Another outcrop of the trip was an order sent out to all MGM salesmen to personally visit individual theatres, despite the fact that these theatres already are sold under circuit contracts, to discuss MGM pictures with the managers and offer them exploitation and advertising suggestions sent them by the home office after they have been tried and proved successful in other towns.

Following receipt of the questionnaires at the home office, MGM plans further excursions into the field for its executives. They will travel farther south and west on the next trip, taking in other large circuits and discussing their problems first hand. This however, probably will not be done until the spring.

'Chic' Sale Dies Of Pneumonia

Charles "Chic" Sale, comedian, died last weekend at his Hollywood home of lobar pneumonia. He was 51 years old. His wife and children, Charles, Jr., and Mary, were with him at the end.

Mr. Sale toured vaudeville for years but it was only after he published "The Specialist," which sold over 1,000,000 copies, that he reached Broadway. Following several legitimate productions, he went to Hollywood where he appeared in several features and many shorts, the most notable of which was "The Perfect Tribute," based on the life of Abraham Lincoln.

Funeral services were held Monday at Forest Lawn Memorial Park and were attended by some 250 members of the industry.

Interstate to Use Postal as Checker

With approximately 38 Postal Telegraph Company representatives acting as field agents, Interstate Checking Service this week announced its plans for checking theatre engagements in association with the telegraph company.

As far as could be learned, however, no distributor has as yet signed for the new service, although announcement brochures had been sent to the various home offices and New York exchanges. According to the plan, orders for checking theatres are addressed to local revenue accountants of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company. These men are authorized to check grosses on percentage runs, which are wired daily to the home offices of the distributors ordering the check.

Offices of the new company have been established in the Paramount Building in Times Square with Charles Schwerin, formerly an exchange man in Pittsburgh, in charge.

The list of representatives follows:

L. V. Enoch, Albany; B. W. Williams, Atlanta; J. F. Kennedy, Boston; R. K. Miller, Buffalo; R. H. Clendenning, Charlotte; F. J. Brolin, Chicago; W. H. St. John, Cincinnati; P. E. Lansell, Cleveland; G. O. Koesters, Columbus; C. T. Stewart, Dallas; Miss E. T. Haefliger, Denver; E. A. Newman, Des Moines; Mrs. H. Trombola, Detroit; Mrs. C. Jordan, Indianapolis; H. A. Carrell, Jacksonville; A. A. Higgins, Kansas City; L. Williams, Little Rock; J. G. Atkinson, Los Angeles; L. R. Humphries, Memphis; G. H. Dyer, Milwaukee; T. E. Moberg, Minneapolis; J. T. Gunthner, New Haven; E. J. Rice, New Orleans; C. E. Bevacco, New York; S. S. Furse, Jr., Oklahoma City; E. H. Fitzgerald, Omaha; R. E. McDonnell, Philadelphia; R. V. Baldino, Pittsburgh; F. W. Anderson, Portland, Me.; Miss R. Streiff, Portland, Ore.; M. McGrath, St. Louis; Earl Landy, Salt Lake City; A. W. Warner, San Antonio; H. A. Saroyan, San Francisco; A. H. Johnson, Seattle; W. E. Murphy, Sioux Falls; W. L. House, Tampa; J. A. Shugrue, Washington.

Erpi Shatters All Its Sales Records

All sales records in the history of sound equipment merchandising were shattered this week according to Electrical Research Products, Inc., the greatest previous sales peak having been reached during the week ending December 28, 1929. This week's sales bring the total number of theatres contracting for Mirrophonic to 315.

Approximately 1,950 theatres in England are now equipped with Erpi sound, Clifford W. Smith, who has been in charge of the British office for six years, revealed this week as he arrived in New York to assume new duties in the home office.

16 YEARS OF THE BROADWAY STAGE

A state of healthy complexion is claimed for the stage. At the same time its form is seen as changing to a much smaller theatre than it has been at any other time during modern stage history—fewer shows, far fewer are being presented on Broadway, but those shows that are produced are, in general, advanced as "better shows." They are picked more carefully, and the restricted audiences that still cling to the living drama appraise them more carefully and more knowingly.

Taking The Billboard's annual theatrical index of the status of the legitimate theatre as the source of this unexpected burst of optimism for the future of the drama, it is found that in the past season Broadway witnessed the production of 51 fewer plays than in previous season—a total of 138 productions having materialized in the past year, as against 189 in the year before. Of these, there were 34 "hits" last season and only 26 previously, while the number of productions closing within five weeks dropped from 87 in 1934-35 to 59 in 1935-36. The average length of runs increased from 60 performances in 1934-35 to 80 in 1935-36. Play failures dropped from 81 per cent of the total in 1934-35 to 68 per cent in 1935-36. "The legitimate season of 1935-36," they said, "was the most significant since the depression—the stage definitely assuming a smaller field but one in which quality transcends quantity."

Part of the loss in the reduced number of plays produced—from 189 to 138—was attributed to the almost complete abscence of repertory engagements and other special stage events.

There were 114 dramatic productions, a drop of 44 under the previous season's 158, and 24 musical productions, seven less than the previous season's 31. Only 22 shows fell into the stock, repertory, special engagement or return engagement class, as against 49 the season before.

One hundred performances are arbitrarily established by The Billboard as the lowest run for a hit show. On this basis 68 per cent of the past season's productions were failures, a percentage far lower than the previous season's 81 per cent.

The actual number of failures (or shows running less than 100 performances) was 73, as against 110 the previous season. Seventy-one of the failures were dramatic shows, the drama failures standing at 74 per cent, a low record for dramatic failures unequaled since 1925-'26 and far better than the 83 per cent of the previous season. Only two of the 11 commercial musical productions closing during the year ran under 100 performances, giving musicals a failure percentage of only 18, as against 69 per cent the previous season.

Billboard reviews the stage of Broadway over a 16-year period, statistically, as follows:

THREE STATE EXHIBITOR UNITS ELECT OFFICERS

Allied of Michigan Reelects Delodder; Brylawski and Bair Head Their Units

Exhibitor conventions this week brought reelection of Fred Delodder, as president of Allied Theatres of Michigan, reelection of R. R. Bair as president of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, and reelection of A. Julian Brylawski as president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia.

Elsewhere in organized exhibitor centers, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania launched a membership drive, Oklahoma's MPTOA set December 14th and 15th for its annual convention, the Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas City abandoned its headquarters, and the Pennsylvania tri-state group designated full committees for the year.

Adoption of a resolution to start immediate collection of Michigan's quota of $10,000 toward the national Allied fund to enforce the separation of production and distribution from exhibition marked the final business session of the 17th annual convention of Allied of Michigan in Detroit. The resolution calls for an assessment of 10 cents a seat on all members.

Another resolution passed at the convention called for a "vigorous campaign" to urge every theatre owner in the state to stop buying percentage pictures and giving preferred playing time. Abram F. Myers, W. A. Steffes, Aaron Saperstein, M. A. Rosenberg and others addressed the meeting on these subjects. All cited these two practices as the chief evils of the industry and predicted that they will force the small exhibitor out of business if they are not remedied.

An expected announcement by Mr. Myers concerning the national defense fund did not materialize, although it was announced that units throughout the country are making regular contributions.

Officers reelected with Mr. Delodder are F. A. Wetsman, vice-president, and William E. Schuttenhelm, treasurer. Edgar E. Kirchner was named secretary to succeed B. H. Kilbride.

Bair Elected in Indiana

New officers of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, named at a meeting of the board of directors in Indianapolis, are Roy R. Bair, president; Frank Sanders, treasurer, and Mrs. Helen B. Keeler, secretary, all of Indianapolis. Vice-presidents chosen for the various districts are: Mannie Marcus for Fort Wayne; William Connors, Marion; Maurice Rubin, Michigan City; Bruce Kixmiller, Terre Haute; H. P. Vonderschmitt, Bloomington, and Harry Markun for Indianapolis.

Exhibitors Join Merchants

In a move to combat what is characterized as the "chain influence," the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas decided at a meeting in Little Rock to join forces with the Arkansas Independent Retail Merchants' Association. The resolution for joint action was passed after an address at the ITO convention by C. W. Lithicum, secretary of the merchants' group. The committee appointed to work with the merchants includes W. E. Malin of Augusta and J. M. Ensor and Hy Sanders of Little Rock.

Tribute was paid at the meeting to the late H. D. Wharton, a former director, by Eli Whitney Collins. Sidney Wharton was elected to fill his father's post.

Cecil Cupp of Arkadelphia was unanimously elected vice-president to succeed L. F. Haven, who became president upon the resignation of Ray Morros of Malvern, now a Robb & Rowley partner.

Jack Holt, attorney general of the state, addressed the guests at a dinner dance which closed the convention at the Hotel Marion.

Brylawski Elected

A. Julian Brylawski was elected Tuesday to serve his tenth term as president of the MPTO of the District of Columbia. Other reelections were: Sydney B. Lust, vice-president and delegate to the national convention; Dr. William B. Herbst, treasurer, and Nat. B. Browne, secretary.

Nebraska, Connecticut Meetings

Charles Williams, president of the MPTO of Nebraska and Western Iowa, opened the annual session of the organization at Omaha on Tuesday with 25 exhibitors in attendance. More were expected to register for the closing session on Wednesday.

Allied Theatres of Connecticut, Inc., meeting at the Hotel Garde in New Haven on Tuesday named Dr. J. B. Fishman its representative on the Allied national board. Forty theatres were represented at the session.

Membership Drive Started

The MPTO of western Pennsylvania has opened a drive for new members among the independent exhibitors of the Pittsburgh area. Fred Herrington, secretary of the group, is in charge of the drive. In a statement addressed to members and prospective members he pointed out that the financial condition of the association is the best in its history.

Oklahoma Owners To Meet

M. Loewenstein, president of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, an affiliate of the MPTOA, announced that the association will hold its annual convention on December 14th and 15th in Oklahoma City. Elaborate plans have been made. Edward Kuykendall, national president of the MPTOA, is expected to attend and other speakers of national importance have been invited.

ITO Offices Moved

Offices of the Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas, which have been on Film Row in Kansas City, are being moved to the home of Emanuel Rolsky, president. The move will eliminate all but routine office expenditures for the association. The group opened the offices last fall to provide members with a place to hold business meetings. Social gatherings of exhibitors and film men were held for a time, but finally were abandoned.

Comedy-Romance with Music

The locale of this story and its time are Radio Center, New York, about 25 years in the future when all the fantastic dreams now existing only in the minds of inventors have become practical. In view of that, the production detail may be easily imagined. The story is about a very wealthy though slightly balmy girl who, following a tour through a future generation Russia and Germany, constitutes herself a self designated Joan of Arc, whose sole ambition in life is to revolutionize night club entertainment technique. Of course she doesn't, but what happens to her and all who come in contact with her during the time she is attempting her noble experiment seems to be of a type of colorful and amusing entertainment.

The story is an original by Lou Brock, who has had much experience in creation of colorful musical comedy screen plays. Brock, who also is producing, is working hand in hand with director Walter Lang to see that his brain child will emerge on film as he has it conceived in mind. Music and lyrics are credited to Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson. Sets and costumes, which will be fantastic to a high degree, are the work of John Harkrider. Dances are being directed by Gene Snyder.

Doris Nolan is featured as the balmy heiress with weird ideas. The man in the case, and naturally the objective of her romantic interest, is George Murphy, leader of a band which heretofore has played in a cellar but is elevated to the prime attraction in a roof garden, scores of stories higher than any of New York's present tall buildings. Comedy content of the story is seen in several of the principal cast assignments, Gregory Ratoff, Ella Logan, Hugh Herbert and Henry Armetta. The fun value is enhanced by the presence of Misca Auer, Gertrude Nieson, The Three Sailors, Jack Smart, Peggy Ryan and Ray Mayer.

Coast Patrol

(RKO Radio)

Topical Action Drama

The story used in this production is taken from an original by Frank Wead, author of many screen plays that have had naval, aviation and marine service settings. He collaborated on the screen play with John Twist, whose recent credits number "Wanted, Jane Turner" and "We Who Are About to Die." Direction is by Ben Stoloff, who specializes in dramatic action films.

Victor McLaglen and Preston Foster are starred in the personal conflict drama that is the story's motivating premise. Ida Lupino, currently in "The Gay Desperado" is the object of romantic interest on the part of Foster and Donald Woods, who eventually sacrifices his life to the ideals of the Coast Guard Service. Other principals are Helen Flint, Pierre Watkin, Alan Curtis and William Corson, whose talents are concentrated upon the fictionary and dramatic elements of the story. The Coast Guard Service lent liberal assistance in supplying the atmospheric production details. Its purpose in cooperating was to give the public an authentic and complete insight into the workings of the Coast Guard in protecting shipping and effecting rescues in maritime disasters.

Essentially, however, the story, plus the manner in which action-packed production features have been incorporated, promises to be powerful drama, abounding with colorful incidents concerning the life of Coast Guardsmen at sea and ashore as they go adventuring into the dually interesting fields of romance and danger. It looks like an ideal vehicle for McLaglen and Foster.

Crack-up

Drama

As production on this film moves forward, it presages a picture that will be crowded with pulsating dramatic incident. In all its substance it is drama on the ground, in the air, over the Atlantic Ocean, and on the surface of the sea. Colorful stuff always, and of the type that promises to create such audience and patron interest, it brings in foreign spies who are just as busy and as daring during times of peace as they are in war days to learn American commercial and military aviation secrets. Pursuing a desperate trend in all its phases, it is climaxed by a suspense packed episode in which four men, who have nothing to live for, participate in a desperate hand-to-hand battle, out of which one emerges to protect America's interest as the first commercial air flight between this continent and Europe ends in tragedy.

The yarn is based on a John Goodrich story that ran recently in American magazine. The screenplay is by Charles Kenyon and Sam Mitz. Direction is in the hands of Mal St. Clair, who has been inactive in directing for some years.

The cast selected to play the show reflects exceptionally intelligent choosing. It is headed by Peter Lorre, European actor, seen in "M," "Crime and Punishment" and "The Man Who Knew Too Much"; Brian Donlevy, who since his debut in "Barbary Coast" has gone on to success; Ralph Morgan and Thomas Beck. Additionally it includes Helen Wood, Kay Linaker, Lester Matthews, Theodore Von Eltz and J. Carroll Naish.

As an interesting exploitation feature, the plane which is used for the transatlantic flight, and which cracks up in midocean to sink with its human cargo, is a working duplicate of Amelia Earhart's famous "Flying Laboratory." All the equipment considered necessary for safety in commercial ocean hops has been reproduced.

Happy Go Lucky

(Republic)

Comedy-Romance

Though there is an element of mystery drama about this story, inasmuch as the lead player assumes a dual role, the story potentially is comedy romance. Localed in Shanghai, the yarn follows the mistaken identity-spy formula. A girl recognizes a man whom she believes to be the lost pilot of a missing plane. In his dual role, the man is endeavoring to deliver the plane to foreign enemies. With much that is interesting from a romantic, comedy and dramatic point of view, the supposed victim of amnesia flier incites American sailors to riot, and leads them to a house to deliver the girl, her father and the plane from the hands of his double.

The story is an original by Eric Taylor, Wellyn Totman and Endre Bohem, for which the screen play was prepared by Raymond Shrock and Olive Cooper. Music sung by Phil Regan was contributed by Ted Koehler, Ned Washington and Cliff Friend. The fact that Aubrey Scotto, director of "Ticket to Paradise" and "Hitch Hike to Heaven," is handling the story indicates that the producers consider the picture highly.

Phil Regan in the dual role and Evelyn Venable are featured. Both have appeared recently in popular pictures. The principal supporting cast, which consists of Jed Prouty, William Newell, Jonathan Hale and Claude King, is of above average quality. Other players to be seen include Harlan Briggs, Stanley Andrews, Carleton Young, Karl Hackett, Guy Kingsford, Howard Hickman and Willie Fung.

Stowaway

Comedy

This production has Shirley Temple in something entirely different. It also provides the little star with one of the strongest casts she ever has had. In the story, which is an original by Sam Engel, transposed to the screen by William Conselman, Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin, with music and lyrics by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, Shirley leaves America for the first time. A little American girl, she stows away on a world cruise. The fun she creates aboard the liner and in strange foreign ports promises to make the vehicle one of the most colorful and amusing she has had. Not the least of the many unique features is the fact that she talks and sings in Chinese and they say her vocabulary in that language consists of nearly four hundred words.

Though Miss Temple naturally is the most attractive element, the supporting cast cannot be overlooked. It features Alice Faye, who was with her in "Poor Little Rich Girl," and Robert Young, prominent in many MGM pictures, who share the grownup romantic interest. It also lists Eugene Pallette of the " My Man Godfrey" lineup, besides Helen Westley, Arthur Treacher, Allan Zane, J. Edward Bromberg, Astrid Allwyn, Robert Greig, Jayne Regan, Julius Tannen, Willie Fung, Philip Ahn, Helen Jerome Eddy, William Stack and Honorable Wu.

Shirley has five songs, one of which is shared by Alice Faye and another with Young. These as well as story content are all pointed for comedy. As they are being blended, with production values of the expected high order, the film at this stage looms like an entertainment and commercial attraction which may top the best the little star has had heretofore.

THEATRE BUILDING IN MEXICO LOOKING UP

Censorship on National Scale Applied by Board of Three Under Minister of Interior

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Cinema construction in Mexico City is now on a better and bigger basis. Gone is the day of the cubby hole picture show with pitch blackness except for the glimmering screen, with uncarpeted floors, groping customers, rock hard chairs, and other bustle era discomforts. Of course, not all old-time cinemas are being scrapped, but shrewd showmen have hearkened to the swing of these times and are giving patrons what they want—comforts and even luxuries, besides higher standard film fare.

The swanky Cine-Teatro Alameda, the $800,000 house that recently opened and established a precedent in film shop appointments, has set the pace for all cinemas that are being built in the Mexican capital. Inauguration of this screen cathedral opened the eyes of exhibitors. Those who had whispered that the Alameda would be a grand failure because so much money had been spent on it and that such a near-Broadway standard picture-pageant house was far too advanced for the Mexico City public taste, found that their opinion got a resounding gong. Not only did the residents flock to this cinema, and continue doing so, at pretty stiff admittances for these parts—40 cents to as high as $1.40, for special occasions—but it has been demonstrated beyond argument that the congregating is more than the lure of something new.

The Alameda proves that the public want, and are willing to pay for, better things in cinema appointments. This demonstration is significant, for the Alameda is patronized by nearly all classes of society here. Lower middle class and even laborers mingle with the upper 10 in the box office queues. Those who have the building of cinemas in mind have paid practical attention to that jutting fact. A company that nearly had finished a large neighborhood house, at the time the Alameda made its debut, immediately made such radical modifications in its cinema that more than half of the building had to be torn down and rebuilt.

The trend is also evident in even the new second run houses. The Cine Encanto, a neighborhood which will be the 66th local cinema and is to be inaugurated this fall, has all the patron comfort facilities of a similar house in a large American city, and, to boot, has added something brand new down here to please customers, elevators to the balcony and gallery. The public's gravitation toward the cinemas that feature coziness and luxury has prompted several exhibitors to plan renovations.

That the cinema is sharing in the decided mending of economic times in Mexico City is made evident by the fact that business at the cinema is about 30 per cent better than it was last autumn, even though film houses were hard hit by the strike against the eight major American distributors on this market in the fall of 1935, and by plans that are being advanced by various interests, Mexican and Spanish, to build more theatres. These constructions are to begin in the fall and winter.

There are reports in responsible circles that the Mexico City sector is being viewed with the prospect of building an entertainment center in the not far distant future, that will be similar to the Chinese theatre in Los Angeles.

National Censorship

Censorship on a national scale has been established for the first time in Mexico. The ministry of the interior has started a board of three to work. The chairman is a lawyer.

The ministry said the objects of the board are to coordinate official viewing of films and to make certain that productions which "harm public morals and attack the criterions of the masses" are kept off the screens. Establishment of this board is the outcome of activities that had been progressing for some time.

Until the board got into action, censoring was rather a piecemeal matter. Almost all pictures were viewed by the Mexico City censors, who charged 5.75 pesos (about $1.61) a reel. Pictures they passed usually went over without obstacle in other parts of Mexico. But ofttimes they didn't, because of various state and municipal boards. The national board promises to correct that situation.

The industry is generally pleased about establishment of the national board. The important Mexico City daily, El Universal, urged the drawing up of a code of censorship to guide the board so as to "prevent the review of films becoming a mere bureaucratic habit of a rubber stamp nature or leaving it to the judgment of persons who lack either culture or talent."

16 Film Unions

Mexico's powerful unionism has imposed 16 separate unions upon the film industry. Even assistant cameramen, makeup experts and curtain jerkers are organized. Union projectionists and staffs are necessary for the test viewing at studios. That service costs from $2 to $2.50 a showing. There is talk that there will be even more workers' unions.

New Foreign Director

A new foreign director has made his bow in Mexico. He is Robert Quigley, a young Nova Scotian who filled various writing assignments in Hollywood, his work there being with such companies as Columbia, MGM, Universal and RKO. He came to Mexico about two years ago and wrote and did continuity for native producers. His first direction is "Cielito Lindo" ("Lovely Little Heaven"), a romantic drama based upon a famous old Mexican song, produced by J. Luis Bueno. Quigley is the first foreign director to work in Mexico for a Mexican company since Antonio Moreno, who made this land's first talker in 1930.

Fire at New Theatre

The screen of the Cine-Teatro Alameda was destroyed and curtains and props were badly singed, with a loss estimated at 60,000 pesos (about $18,000) by a fire during a performance started by an overheated electric lamp off stage. The large audience demonstrated remarkable calm, although there was a slight disorder among stage performers. Special crews that worked all night enabled the house to maintain the tradition that the "show must go on" next day.

More Films for Tourists

More pictures is the policy of the government's tourist department. It has commissioned Robert A. Turnbull, veteran cameraman, who has had much Hollywood and newsreel experience, to make several thousand feet of scenics and folklore, and numerous stills, in the six most picturesque Mexican states.

The films, shorts with sound and music, are to be exhibited abroad with the aid of Mexican consuls, with special attention being given the United States. The stills will profusely illustrate literature which the department is preparing for its new tourist publicity campaign.

New Producing Company

Two Mexican directors, Fernando de Fuentes and Rafael Bustamante, have organized a producing company, Bustamante y de Funetes, A. en P., which has made its first picture, "Alla en el Rancho Grande" ("There on the Big Ranch"). The picture is a colorful and virile comedy drama of the Mexican cowboy. It is replete with the kind of music, dancing and action popular with Americans. Tito Guizar, famous Mexican tenor, is the star. The picture is scoring at the Cine-Teatro Alameda.

Inspectors Fix Taxes

Exhibitors in Mexico are now receiving ministry of finance inspectors who are seeking an average of daily admittances so as to fix tax quotas for cinemas in 1937. These inspectors are in addition to those on hand every day at Mexico City cinemas to keep check on the box office. The capital exhibitors have to pay the wages of the permanent inspectors, setbacks of from $1.75 to $2.75 daily, depending upon the size of the house.

William Fox Is Held in Contempt By Supreme Court

The United States supreme court on Monday placed William Fox, onetime motion picture mogul, in contempt of court.

Losing another round in his battle with the New York district court, Mr. Fox was held by the supreme court to have no grounds for appeal from a fine of $235,082 and costs of $10,000 imposed upon him for contempt in refusing to appear in the lower New York court in connection with proceedings against him by the Capital Company, of California, to collect on a judgment of $297,412.

The judgment was entered in the district court at New York by confession in July, 1935, and supplementary proceedings were initiated upon default in payment. A subpoena issued by the New York court was served on Mr. Fox on a railroad train in Pennsylvania, and was contended by him to have been served outside the court's jurisdiction. Failing to appear, the New York court held him in contempt, refusing to entertain his defense of no jurisdiction and, after an appeal to the circuit court by Mr. Fox had failed, fined him the amount of the unpaid balance of the judgment and assessed $10,000 for costs of the Capital Company's lawyers, ordering his arrest and imprisonment until the fine and fees had been paid or he submitted to examination.

Upon the filing of an appeal to the U. S. supreme court by Mr. Fox, the Capital Company contended the order of the lower court was not a final judgment and therefore not subject to appeal, to which the court agreed.

Mr. Fox gained some ground in his court troubles elsewhere. Vice Chancellor W. Frank Sooy agreed Tuesday in chancery court at Atlantic City, N. J., to modify a temporary injunction restraining Fox's All-Continent Corporation so as to permit the corporation to carry on business.

All-Continent has been the principal source of controversy between creditors and Mr. Fox in the Fox bankruptcy proceedings in New Jersey. Mr. Fox has testified during the hearings that he created the corporation in 1932 as a trust fund for his wife and daughters. But Hiram Steelman, trustee in bankruptcy, has contended that he created the company to defraud creditors.

Vice Chancellor Sooy, on October 14th, ordered the corporation not to dispose of any of its assets until December 8th, the date on which a petition for a receivership and permanent injunction will be heard.

Levine Schedules Eight Musicals for Republic

Republic Pictures will increase its list of musical features from two to six, Nat Levine, production head, said in New York this week at a luncheon for newspaper men at the Waldorf Astoria hotel.

The company's first color film, "The Beloved Rogue," on which the Magnacolor process was used, has already been completed, he said, and will shortly be shipped east when it is edited.

U.S. WITHDRAWS FROM DISTRIBUTING IN ITALY

American Distributors Await Modification of Demand That 75% of Revenue Stay There

No American pictures have been sent to Italy in more than a month and none will be, major distributors declare, until the present deadlock over new and stringent financial regulations put into effect by Premier Benito Mussolini is broken. Distributors, through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, have lodged a formal protest with the United States Department of Commerce which in turn has turned negotiations over to Ambassador William Phillips in Rome.

Under the Italian regulations American companies cannot send films into Italy unless they sign an agreement to keep 75 per cent of their revenue in that country. This demand is not unusual, a similar arrangement being in effect in other countries, notably Germany, but the most irksome regulation to American distributors is that which specifies that the money left in Italy will have to be expended for motion picture purposes, such as production, raw stock and synchronization work.

Will Hays, president of the MPPDA is en route to Europe and his plans include a visit to Rome. Officials of the organization in New York said they are unaware of what part—if any—he will take in adjusting the present controversy over financial regulations for American distributors.

Although Ambassador Phillips has lodged a formal protest with the Italian Government it is reported that action has been delayed by the absence of Count Luigi Ciano, appointed by Premier Mussolini to administer the motion picture regulations. Count Ciano has been in Berlin on a diplomatic mission.

The regulations, never published as a written law but only as a demand of the board which controls the importation of films, went into effect immediately after Carlo Roncoroni, member of the Italian National Committee of Corporations and head of the Cines studio project, ten-stage cinema city near Rome, returned from the United States after failing to gain the cooperation from American producers which he expected. Walter Wanger was the only producer to agree to utilize the new Italian studio.

At the time of Signor Roncoroni's visit it was reported that the results of his efforts to persuade American companies to cooperate with the Italians in production, talent and technical knowledge would have an effect on financial regulations which were then being contemplated by the Italian Government.

American distributors first learned of the new situation when their foreign managers reported that the Italian board would grant no visas unless the agreement was signed. The companies unanimously decided to stop the export of films to Italy and the protest was lodged through the MPPDA.

Blue Laws and Taxes Urged in Several Zones

Sunday closing and taxes were subjects of local legislation confronting the motion picture in several parts of the country during a week that saw action on such matters both favorable and unfavorable to screen interests.

Voters in Verona, St. Clair and Port Carbon, Pa., approved the Sunday operation of cinemas. Police Judge James R. Duncan of Alexandria, Va., fined Harry A. Wasserman and Edward Pinkerton, exhibitors, $5 and $10, respectively, for violating the State's Sunday closing law. A Howard County jury acquitted Jackson Wheat, Ellicott City exhibitor, accused of showing motion pictures on Sunday but convicted him of working himself and employees on the Sabbath. Rockwood, Tenn., cancelled a referendum on Sunday shows when Manager W. L. Howard of the local theatre decided to discontinue operating on that day in deference to church request.

The city council of Spartanburg, S. C., declined to rescind its action passing an ordinance levying a $200 tax annually on each theatre for screen advertising. Tampa, Fla., exhibitors protested to the Board of Aldermen against paying a tax of $1 on each $100 of receipts as a result of playing Bank Night and Screeno. The Texas legislature passed a bill to tax all theatre admissions over 50 cents. Deputy Comptroller Milton Solomon of New York ruled that New Jersey exhibitors serviced out of New York must pav the state's 2 per cent sales tax. Governor George H. Earle of Pennsylvania announced that he will attempt to bring about repeal of the so-called nuisance tax during the coming session of the legislature; it is paid by the theatregoer and represents a 10 per cent levy on all admissions.

The Redwood City, Cal., council was considering an ordinance to prohibit theatre sale of more tickets than there are seats available, while Mayor George J. Zimmerman of Buffalo vetoed a city council resolution for strict enforcement of an ordinance to the same effect.

Charity Fund's Aim Is $200,000 Quota

A quota of $200,000 for the amusement division in the annual drive for funds of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies was set this week by the division committee at the Metropolis Club in New York. The quota must be filled by December 1, it was said. The motion picture industry, the legitimate theatre and music publishers are included in the division,

David Bernstein of Loew's and Albert Warner of Warners were named co-chairmen of the division.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Mad Holiday

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy-Melodrama

A comedy melodrama, this film also is a hokum packed satire on all murder mystery pictures. Geared for mass consumption, particularly for those not too choosey, the show is nothing to get very excited about. Though it's funny, the entertainment caliber does not justify any extensive campaign. As for the story, audiences will know or can easily anticipate all that is going to happen after the first reel is out of the way.

The comedy swing is given full play from the beginning. Much to the discomfort of his studio, film star Trent, solver of countless screen mysteries, decides he's tired of his job. Embarking on an ocean liner, he is trailed by publicity director Morgan, and meets Elissa Landi. Though Trent doesn't wake up to the fact for a long time, the audience is aware that she is the writer of his screen stories, under the pen name Peter Dean. Though he hates Peter, he's attracted to the girl. Then follows the travesty in mystery pictures. Peter cooks up a fake jewel robbery, which entails plenty of killings. The sham gets mixed up with some real crime, to complicate things for star and writer, but though there's a lot of blood and thunder, comedy contrast supplied by Morgan, Mrs. Kinney, Donovan and Cokey Joe is emphasized. Of course, Trent solves all the mystery, long after the audience has, meanwhile falling in love with Peter.

By no stretch of the imagination could one hope that the picture might stand on its own.

Previewed in the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to an audience which got quite a few laughs at the action and seemed to have more fun in telling the players what to do.—GUS MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Flying Hostess

(Universal)

Comedy Drama

Three customary entertainment and potentially commercial qualities are included in this film. They are romance, comedy and melodramatic thrill action. A fourth and not so usual angle, yet one that serves to embellish the other three, is the picturization of how modern air lines select and train flying hostesses. In a less general way this quality follows the idea which was such an interesting part of "White Parade."

Thematically the story is romance which carries an air of light conflict and comedy. From a production viewpoint it is adventure in the air. Early episodes are devoted to the semi-educational picturization of selection methods. Helen Brooks, once rejected by Cunningham, makes an unauthorized jump from a plane to prove her nerve. Romance develops almost immediately between her and Edwards, spectacular flier. Comedy is provided by Williams and Edna, probationary hostess, and there are suggestions of rivalry between Cunningham and Edwards for Helen's affections. The girls are graduated and Edwards and Helen become engaged. He desires that she give up her ambitions, but the girl, determined on a career, is assigned to his plane.

Then the film turns to thrill action. Criminals disable Edwards and co-pilot Williams, but the girl outwits them. The plane is lost in a fog, the passengers are panic stricken. Picking up the radio, Helen communicates with Cunningham. Following his instructions, the sequence building up with tense suspense, she lands the plane. Her reward is a medal and Edwards for a husband.

Aimed to sate the popular appetite, the show's elements are well put together. Acting performances by leads and supports are consistently good and the spectacular production finale is sufficiently exciting to arouse anyone's enthusiasm.

Theodora Goes Wild

(Columbia)

Comedy

Farce comedy really goes wild in this picture. In providing intriguingly different comedy romance, it kept a preview audience giggling and occasionally giving way to good old fashioned belly laughs during its ninety minutes running time. It offers a well produced and presented story, moving to the pace of crisply clever dialogue and engaging situations in which surprise twists follow one another in rapid fire order. At the same time, it sparkles with fresh exploitation angles.

A neatly contrived kickoff opens the yarn. In Lynnfield, Conn., Editor Waterbury of the one horse town's paper announces serialization of "Sinned Against," a sexy best seller. The club women, led by Rebecca Perry, look to the straight-laced old maids Mary and Elsie for guidance on anything menacing the town's morals. Theodora lives in the rigidly moralistic Mary-Elsie household and is just as adamant against the serial's publication as anyone else.

Then the real fun begins. In New York, Theodora is revealed to the audience, but to no one else but the publisher, as the writer of the flaming tale. Into the picture butts the book's illustrator, Michael Grant, to suspect that something's wrong. The episode in which the shy New England miss metamorphoses into a red-hot moderne for an evening is packed with fun. Theodora catches up with herself just in time. Back in Lynnfield, fearful that her secret will become known to aunts and neighbors, Theodora is confronted by Michael, who makes life one round of hectic excitement for the whole town. Nevertheless, Theodora falls for him and decides that she'll go to New York, let the world know who she is, and hope for the best. Learning that her prince charming is married, Theodora quickens the pace wildly. Dressing and publicizing herself in the most flamboyant manner, she turns the tables on Michael, embarrassing him just as much as he did her. Her antics cause Michael's wife to sue for divorce. Once again Theodora returns to the town that now knows her whole story. But another surprise is in store for all, including the audience. She has a baby in her arms. Even Michael, who has followed along, is amazed. Rebecca is just ready to sink her teeth into a juicy morsel of gossip when Theodora hands her the infant, announcing that it's the child of Rebecca's own married daughter. Theodora, having lived as her characters live, settles down to prosaic marriage with a chastened Michael.

The humor of the piece is spontaneous. The surprise twists build expectations for something spicy; instead the story veers to farcical nonsense. Always it's bubbling amusement that backs up a clever story idea with performance in both acting and directing. Word of mouth advertising being a valuable adjunct to any publicity campaign, real efforts should be exerted to get large audiences for initial presentations.

Previewed in Warner Beverly Theatre on a Sunday night.—G. M.

Below is a typical ad from the campaign

NOTE! ALL NEW! ALL DIFFERENT! TWO YEARS TO MAKE! Never before on the screen! Thrills beyond your wildest dreams! You may never see anything like it again!

GIRLS! YOU'LL WANT TO ANSWER HIS JUNGLE LOVE CALL TOO!

Through the jungle echoes the call of Tarzan the Untamed—the glorious man-god of the wilderness—calling to his bride—the beautiful White Goddess who surrendered civilization's luxuries for untold bliss in his bronzed muscle-rippling arms! For her...he faced the dangers of the jungle...the fierce attacks of man-eating beasts and vicious savages! . . . For her he built a tree-top love nest any woman would envy!

See the cage in which Tarzan is held captive crash from the cliff into the yawning chasm below!

See the treacherous swamp that swallows human beings alive!

See their secret rendezvous where they spend many happy hours together!

"PLEASE BE PATIENT!"

The opening engagements of "TARZAN ESCAPES" have been so successful that showmen are asking us for reproductions of the promotion campaigns, to use in their own cities. These campaigns are just coming in from all parts of the country (they're swell!) and within a few days we will print them in the trade press. Meanwhile we urge our showmen friends to ballyhoo "TARZAN ESCAPES" like a circus. It's fun to exploit and the results are marvelous. "TARZAN ESCAPES" in its first engagements is beating M-G-M's previous Tarzan success! America loves this unique character—and there's only one Johnnie Weissmuller! So shoot the works! And watch the papers to see how other showmen are cleaning up with it!

Showmanship that can do anything resembling a respectable job in salvaging this contribution to the year's entertainment melange should never fear anything else. So graphic and preponderant is the evidence that many things went tragically wrong in the transition of what looked to be a good idea to the mechanics of the screen, that any possibilities for an inspired business building effort are absolutely nil. The unwavering Jane Withers fans may find occasional cause to become enthusiastic, but it is extremely unlikely that any others will.

Outside a couple of fairly worthy specialty song numbers and two well produced chorus spectacle features, the film offers comparatively little to recommend it to general attention. As far as the story is concerned, in a meandering way it has to do with the little girl partner of a traveling medicine peddler who gets on a radio amateur hour, and her troupe are such a howling success that other paid performances get them enough money to pay off the mortgage on the home of a testy, fire-eating old southerner.

Previewed in the Ritz theatre, Los Angeles. Rather than getting any enjoyment out of the film, the audience seemed to have more fun indulging in the practice currently sweeping Los Angeles of giving the film "the bird."—G. M.

Go West, Young Man

(Paramount-Emmanuel Cohen)

Farce Comedy

This Mae West picture is notable in the fact that it touches a new low mark in entertainment for the series. The established Mae West characterization is there and is surrounded with the usual assortment of blue gags and double-meaning lines. It is a case of motion picture entertainment gone Minsky.

Based on a hilarious Broadway success, the play has been operated on, adapted and switched about until it bears only faint resemblance to the original. In place of many of the absurdly farcical lines and situations of the stage play, appear a collection of coarseness and vulgarity which promise nothing whatsoever in the way of favorable public reaction.

Miss West is as usual a kind of a female Captain Flagg on the make, a marked distinction, however, being that such pursuits when ministered to with the feminine touch incline toward disgust rather than hilarity. She displays elephantine subtlety in the pursuit of her victim in a manner that would probably be very entertaining to a burlesque theatre audience. The release of this picture will cause many people to wonder whether Miss West, her characterization and her wisecracks enjoy an immunity from the operations of the Production Code.

She sings, rather pitifully, two songs and virtually throughout the picture undulates and weaves, giving visual as well as verbal point to the tiresome series of suggestive lines. Incidentally the fight against obesity seems to be getting her down.

Marvis Arden, glamorous picture star, whose contract contains an anti-marriage clause, embarks on an appearance tour under the guidance of Morgan. His job is to prevent the star from wreaking havoc on the nation's male hearts. Her ambition is to nullify the "no marriage" clause. Morgan terminates a menacing affair between Marvis and a politician, Harrigan.

The travelers move into a hick town, taking residence in a little hotel inhabited by quite a few interesting folks. One look at Bud, garage mechanic, and Marvis is convinced that he's the man for her, despite the clause in the contract and the fact that Bud already is beloved by Joyce, home towner. The action and situations are as what would be anticipated under such circumstances. Frantic, Morgan has to fake a kidnaping and call upon the police force to prevent the unwilling but nevertheless dazzled Bud from falling victim to Marvis' lure. Then Morgan finally marries her himself.

Hideaway Girl

(Paramount-Botsford)

Comedy, Romance, Drama

Only of ordinary average caliber in all phases save the comedy contributions made by Martha Raye, this is a youthful farce-comedy-romance-drama aimed almost exclusively at youthful consumption. Whatever sound entertainment value that may have depends upon Miss Raye's burlesque comedy clowning and singing, plus a couple of sentimental numbers sung by Shirley Ross.

In the yarn, Shirley Ross, fleeing from the police for some unrevealed reason, is picked up by Robert Cummings. She refuses to identify herself. Cummings' gay friends, headed by Miss Raye, decide she is Cummings' secret bride. The whole party moves aboard a yacht where, as Miss Ross continues her deception, romance blossoms for her and her host. Complications arise when Cummings' fiancee, Elizabeth Russell, gets jealous, and just when things look romantically rosy for him and Miss Ross, something happens about some stolen jewels. Cummings, thinking that Miss Ross is a thief, radios the police, but the message is picked up by Monroe Owsley's mob. They figure to grab the loot before the police arrive, but the cops, beating them to the punch, set a trap that reveals Miss Russell as being in cahoots with the crooks. Then, although Miss Ross admits she is married to Owsley, things are fixed up so that it looks as if there will be a divorce for the hideaway girl to be followed by her marriage to Cummings.

As the story meanders all over the locale, Miss Raye jumps in now and then to focus attention on herself and to provide plenty of laughs. From the amusement standpoint, she is the picture's saving grace.

Previewed in the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles. The audience was neither impressed nor interested in much other than Miss Raye's work. —G. M.

Nightingale

(Amkino)

Russian Drama

This is described as the first feature length film in color produced in the Soviet and possesses a certain trade interest as such. The process employed is called Kromocolor and appears to be of the two-component variety. Results obtained compare favorably with those achieved by processes in kind.

In common with producers in the United States and elsewhere, the Russians have elected to emphasize story material particularly susceptible to color treatment and to dwell overlong, now and again, on shots of marked optical impressiveness. For example, the leading character, having worn a blue scarf throughout the picture and arranged to signal her associates with it from a tower, is wounded in the arm, stanches the flow of blood with the scarf until it is dyed a rich crimson, then brandishes it from the tower in long and repeated closeup while her fellow workers attack the soldiers of the Tsar. Other incidents of less gruesome but equally effective color application include a factory fire, a Christmas tree celebration, an orgy in the home of an aristocrat and the attack of hundreds of working women upon the constabulary.

Unlike the majority of Russian films reaching this country, "Nightingale" is not a purposeful glorification of life in the Soviet save in that it depicts oppression of the working class by their employers under the old regime. The time is 1910-12 and the story has to do with the absentee owner of a china factory who orders it burned to the ground, at the expense of entrapped workers' lives, to obtain insurance money with which to build a new plant. He, his manager and foreman typify the oppression. Grunia, daughter of the dead watchman, typifies the oppressed. The conclusion of the film depicts the triumphant rebellion of the workers, although the rebellion is local and the triumph relates to the ultimate overthrow of the monarchical system in Russia only as the waving of the blood-stained scarf relates to the ultimate general adoption of a similar symbol.

The acting is of regulation Russian variety but the players, perhaps because of color considerations, are somewhat more personable than commonly, especially as to dental equipment. The film is rather more logically organized and the plot more smoothly developed than most from this source. For American purposes the picture has been equipped with subtitles, instead of the usual superimposed captions, and the effect is as good or better. There is a number of musical interludes, each adequately justified by plot requirement. As to suitability for American use, save for Russian or sympathetic audiences, there is to be mentioned one of those bedroom episodes, common in early American films, with the villain chasing the heroine all over the place while rescuers rush to the scene through countless cutbacks and arrive in what's called the nick of time.

A matinee audience at the Cameo, New York, many members of which indicated understanding of the Russian dialogue, appeared to enjoy the film thoroughly and heartily applauded the ending.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

The Loves of Toni

(Metropolis)

French Drama

The French version of the title is "Les Amours De Toni" and the production is so billed for its New York premiere. English titles are superimposed upon the film. These interpret the high points of the story adequately, but do not translate bits of dialogue that a French-speaking audience appeared to consider amusing. The photography is dark beyond the point of socalled artistry and the continuity is unorthodox to like extent. Advertising matter makes capital of the fact that the picture was made on the scene of the story and without benefit of studio, which is manifest. Assertion is also made that the picture is based on a factual incident, an explanation possibly satisfying to a certain type of audience. Independently of these explanations, the film is a crude presentation of a sordid tragedy involving individuals not otherwise interesting. It does not conform to the American concept of entertainment under Production Code standards.

The scene is southern France and Toni is a laborer who arrives in search of work, forms an illicit alliance with one Marie, prefers one Josepha, who is seduced by and subsequently weds one Albert, ultimately murdering him after receiving a beating at his hands for stealing his money, at which point Toni attempts first to dispose of the body, second to take blame for the murder, and is killed by police while Josepha confesses her guilt. Incidentally, Marie attempts suicide but doesn't quite make it.

A midweek matinee audience at the 56th Street Playhouse, New York, embarking upon a season of importations, appeared to find amusement in the uninterpreted portions of the dialogue, but manifested no other reaction.—W. R. W.

Produced in Provence by Marcel Pagnol. Distributed in the United States by French Motion Picture Corporation and Metropolis Pictures Corporation. Directed by Jean Renoir. Screen play by Jean Renoir and Carl Enstein. No. P. C. A. certificate. Release date, November 4. Running time, about 70 minutes. Adult (French) audience classification.

King of Hockey

(Warner)

Romantic Drama

Where ice hockey is popular this picture might mean something. Where the game is unknown, its presentation in this film only makes for thrill action.

The story accompanying the action is formula, a romantic drama with the sport contaminated by gamblers. The romance is between Dick Purcell as a swell-headed player and Anne Nagel. Believing that Purcell is having underhanded dealings with gambler George E. Stone, Wayne Morris socks his teammate so hard on the chin that Purcell's optic nerves are injured. Under a cloud and useless because a poor sighted hockey player has no business on the ice, Purcell is fired from the team. He slides rapidly towards the gutter while all the time Miss Nagel, who knows he is honest at heart, and her hero worshipping little sister, Ann Gilles, are searching for him. Finding him, they arrange for a curative operation on his eyes, meanwhile pulling all angles to get the suspicioned player reinstated. Their efforts succeed and Purcell is brought back as the scintillating star of a hockey game.

The only features of the film in which exhibitors might find any opportunity for exploitation are connected with the four or five hockey game sequences presented. Something perhaps could be done in that connection with tieups with schools or clubs that boast ice hockey teams and might be inclined to cooperate for a little educational advertising.

Previewed in the Warner Forum theatre, Los Angeles. The audience was far from impressed.—G. M.

Under Your Spell

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy, Romance

What would have been a very ordinary and uninspired production has been saved from obscurity by Lawrence Tibbett, who is far and away superior to the story that has been constructed around his magnetic singing voice. Not only does Tibbett sing well, which is to be expected, but he handles most capably the scenes that call for comedy or romance or both. Thus the result is a pleasing combination.

Tibbett's range of music in the picture appears to be one selected for as wide an audience appeal as possible. From Gounod's "Faust" to the popular tunes and lyrics of Arthur Schwartz and Howard Dietz is a large gap to bridge musically, but it is to Tibbett's credit that he does span it without losing sight of his perspective. The title song is especially tuneful.

Supporting Tibbett in romance is Wendy Barrie, a spoiled society girl; in comedy, Arthur Treacher, who is excellent as the valet, and Gregory Ratoff, who likewise is excellent in the role of Tibbett's manager.

In the story, Tibbett's life as an overworked tenor is one of radio, testimonials, concerts, opera, in unending succession. Ratoff, the dynamic manager, sees to it that his singer reaps the financial reward, but Tibbett tires of being constantly on parade, of being told what to do and what not to do. With his valet he escapes to the family hacienda in New Mexico.

Tibbett's disappearance causes Ratoff much dismay for the manager. Miss Barrie, for example, has paid Ratoff a large sum of money to insure Tibbett's presence at her birthday party and on the strength of that has promised to marry a suitor if Tibbett fails to appear. Miss Barrie sets out after Tibbett, finds him and the two fall in love.

Song of the Gringo

(Grand National)

Western Melodrama

The Gringo of the title is played by Tex Ritter. The song is not one but a half dozen or more, of the saddle variety, which he sings during the course of the picture. The picture is of the kind in which the hero joins the bandit gang in order to obtain evidence against them and ultimately effects their capture, successfully engineering a personal romance the while. The setting is somewhat vaguely defined as the Southwest and the players portray Mexican or Spanish as well as American characters.

Major episodes are a thunderstorm during which the hero manages to get himself inducted into the gang, a mine raid in which he pretends to murder two miners, a birthday fiesta for the lady of his romantic interest and a courtroom scene in which the bandits are exposed and captured or shot or both. The ending is of the clinch type.

Love Letters of a Star

(Universal)

Murder Mystery

Formal murder mystery is the entertainment and commercial quality of this picture. As far as the title is concerned, and its publicity significance in relation to a recent widely publicized Hollywood incident, exploitation value is absolutely in the hands of those who play the film. Actually, the letters, falling into unscrupulous hands, are used as a means to start the show's drama, mystery and romance.

When Jenny, married to John Aldrich, is confronted with a series of letters written her by a former stage lover, she first submits to blackmail demands, but when the menace of scandal becomes too intense she commits suicide. Her husband, parents and sister try to cover up the death, but instead of having things pass off smoothly the group finds itself the center of a police investigation. When the chief blackmailer, Repellen, shows up, he is mysteriously killed and more hush-up activities on the part of the family involve it in a complicated situation. To get away from it all, the group flees aboard a yacht, only to be trailed and located there by the blackmail "brain," Blodgett. From then on, with police, potential victims and the family scrambling all over the boat, the film is hard-to-take mystery drama, which finally is resolved when Cavanaugh, after killing Landers, is trapped.

Providing nothing that is new and very little that is unusual, showmen have their work cut out for them in attempting to create audience enthusiasm for the picture.

The Lonely Trail

(Republic)

Reconstruction Drama

Largely unfamiliar to screen audiences, save as dimly remembered from history books, is the reconstruction period following the Civil War, a topic lightly touched by fiction camera in silent or talkative days. This is the subject of "The Lonely Trail," the place is Texas and the struggle one between carpetbaggers and impoverished residents of the plains area. It is refreshing material and supplies John Wayne and other dependables of the riding and shooting division with new reason for and justification of forthright heroics.

The action is swift and motivation is logical. The settings, mostly exteriors, are well chosen and photographed. Unique, extraordinary, unusual and allied words denoting departure from pattern are exploitation adjectives warranted by the character of the film.

Popeye the Sailor Meets Sinbad the Sailor

(Paramount)

Tops

By far the best Popeye to date, this latest edition of the adventures of our nautical friend rates the special classification given to it. The running time has been extended to the length of two reels. Added merit is some splendid coloring which makes more real and appetizing that particular diet of spinach favored by Popeye. Action and humor have not been neglected, but if possible for this series have been even increased and bettered. The exhibitor may be assured that any extra exploitation he may give this subject will amply repay him in returns of enthusiastic audience response. The bully Bluto, lord and master over an island kingdom peopled by monsters of prehistoric and mythological size, spies the boat of Popeye with the lovely Olive Oyl and the faithful Wimpy. The sight of the fair Olive enkindles romantic sparks in the brute breast of Bluto. He accordingly arranges to have Popeye's bark wrecked. Of course, the trusty and ever present can of spinach wins for Popeye. Running time, 17 minutes.

Hold 'Em, Cowboy

Interesting

An interesting number of the "News World of Sports" series, this is a pictorial account of a cowboy's day. The round-up of buffalo herds and the leading of wild horses to the corral to be broken for saddle constitute part of the work. For recreation the cowboys and the cowgirls perform in a rodeo. Narrative by Jack Kofoed. Described by Ford Bond. Running time, 10 minutes.

Birds In Love

(Columbia)

Color Cartoon

Fairly amusing is this color cartoon. Two lovebirds, blissfully married, find their conjugal happiness threatened by an obnoxious bird salesman, bent on winning the wife as well as making a sale. Hubby departs for business after a tasty breakfast. Arrives the wily villain to harass the distracted bride. Hubby returns in the proverbial nick of time. Exit the salesman much the worse after a good trouncing. A happy ending fadeout has the doting pair billing and cooing to their hearts' content. Running time, eight minutes.

Going Places No. 29

(Universal)

Interesting

An interesting number of the Going Places series, this is a pictorial study of Mount Olympus in Washington and Celilo Falls, in Oregon. The camera follows a party climbing the Mount and records the scenic beauty as well as the treacherous ascent. At the Falls are shown Indians, under their treaty rights, fishing for salmon. Narration by Lowell Thomas. Running time, 9 minutes.

Skiing Is Believing

(Columbia)

Good

Appropriately timed for the coming winter season, this short subject presents some interesting moments of ski jumping. In a series of diverting shots, the art of the sport is followed from the beginnings of a school of instruction wherein the novices must go through rudimentary exercises up to an exhibition of finished examples of ski technique. Altogether the result is an entertaining as well as exciting subject. Running time, 10 minutes.

Very Good

Pluto steals the limelight from Donald Duck in this subject. Donald is a plumber while Pluto is just hanging around, not looking for trouble but as usual causing it. Pluto is eating when a magnet draws upon the metal plate from which he is eating, and in trying to recover the bone he swallows the magnet. The magnet attracts all metal objects within sight, much to Pluto's regret, as knives, pans and a clock add to his misery. Then Donald and Pluto are drawn together by the magnet for some more good fun. Running time, 9 minutes.

Mickey's Elephant

(United Artists)

Clever

Mickey Mouse receives a present of a baby elephant, Bobo, a playful little fellow, who doesn't know his own strength. Mickey builds a home for Bobo. Pluto becomes jealous, for the elephant's house is much more imposing than his own. Goaded by an imp, that resembles him, Pluto makes a half-hearted attempt to engage the elephant in conflict and finally causes Bobo to sneeze by putting pepper under the elephant's trunk. And Pluto's home, as well as the elephant's, is gone with the wind. Running time, 9 minutes.

Whoops, I'm An Indian

Funny

Those funsters, the seemingly indestructible Moe, Larry and Curly, popularly known as the Three Stooges, continue their mad antics. In a frontier setting the three run a bunco game in a saloon. Caught cheating they take to the woods with the sheriff after them. In tune with their usual style they engage in several comic situations, finally ending up with Curly, posing as a squaw, marrying a trader. When that is exposed the three take refuge in the jail. Running time, 20 minutes.

Screen Snapshots, No. 1

Stars At Play

This first of a new series continues in the same interesting vein as the previous ones. At Ken Maynard's barbecue some of the Hollywood stars and feature players gather to partake of the food and entertainment. At his home, Frank McHugh, plays with his two children. At the West Side Tennis Club, in Hollywood, a doubles match is watched by an interested gallery. More than 40 stars and feature players appear on the screen. Running time, 10 minutes.

Wonder Spots of America

Of Interest

Three of America's natural wonders are here studied by the camera in color, the Natural Bridge of Virginia, carved out of solid limestone by a branch of the James River by natural erosion; the caverns in the Shenandoah Valley, and Niagara Falls. Running time, 10 minutes.

Worthwhile

Worthwhile from the standpoint of public enlightenment, this series of "Crime Does Not Pay" is also worthwhile entertainment. This subject has to do with milk racketeering and how ultimately the consumer is required to support the racketeer.

MUSICIANS CLAIM FIRST VICTORY AS DRIVE FOR "LIVE MUSIC" IS EXTENDED

Stanley Theatre in Pittsburgh Agrees to Restore Stage Shows and Increase Salaries of the Orchestra Members

The drive begun in New York by Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians seeking restoration of orchestras and stage shows to those theatres equipped for them, has been taken up in varying degrees of intensity in other cities and has received the endorsement of several unions in other fields. The campaign in New York, confined so far to publicity and picketing of large theatres in the downtown area, will be enlivened by a parade of members of the local through the Times Square district this Saturday. The Pittsburgh muisicians won a victory this week when the Stanley theatre agreed to resume stage shows with a salary increase for the orchestra members.

The November issue of the official organ of Local 802, devoted almost entirely to news of the drive, lists the cities in which musicians' locals have initiated similar movements and unions which have voted to endorse the drive, and quotes letters from public figures expressing sympathy with the aims of the campaign.

Philadelphia Local 77 which voted recently to imitate the New York campaign, has established picket lines at the Earl, Stanton and Fox theatres and is planning to extend them to a number of neighborhood houses. An attempt at negotiations with theatre owners is reported to have failed.

Petition Campaign Launched

In Kingston, N. Y., Local 215 has embarked on a petition campaign asking theatre owners to restore music and vaudeville to the local houses. Many signatures are said to have been obtained from the general public.' Officials of the local are making provision for an active picketing campaign in case the petitions fail to produce results. In San Francisco Local 6 is engaged in a similar appeal to the general public for support. City ordinances prohibit picketing except during a strike. The executive board of the Los Angeles local have asked the New York drive headquarters for detailed information on the conduct of the campaign.

A. F. of M. affiliates in New England, Baltimore and Albany have requested similar information as well as buttons and literature to distribute to their members. Canton-Massillon Local 111 in Ohio has instructed its members to stay out of theatres which do not employ musicians and actors and in Jacksonville, Fla., a drive has been started calling on members of all labor unions to exert a similar boycott.

In New York City, locals of the American Federation of Labor which endorsed the drive by actual resolution include the Cooks and Kitchen Workers' Union, Local 89; the Printing Pressmen's Union, Local 51; the International Association of Machinists, Lodge 1548; Novelty Mirror Workers' Union, Painters Local 905; the Millwright and Machinery Erectors' Union, Local 740; the American Radio Telegraphists' Association; the joint board of the Cloak, Suit, Skirt and Reefer Makers' Union; the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, and Local 89 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Screen Guild Endorses Drive

The Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood has expressed wholehearted support of the drive. In a telegram endorsing the drive, addressed to Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, which is allied with Local 802 in the New York campaign, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, said:

"Board of directors of Screen Actors' Guild instructs me to communicate to you its great interest and wholehearted accord with your campaign to return orchestras and stage entertainments to motion picture houses. The board sends best wishes for overwhelming success to which I add my personal regards and good wishes."

Theatre managers and musicians in Pittsburgh reached an agreement this week after more than two months of negotiations. Under the terms stage shows will be resumed at the Stanley theatre as soon as bookings can be made. The contract is for two years and calls for an immediate salary increase for musicians and another increase in the second year. Although not included in the pact there are prospects that the Harris Alwin will return to an occasion stage show policy.

New York Parade Saturday

In addition to the endorsements received from unions and groups not affiliated with show business, executives of the drive quote letters expressing sympathy with the movement from many public figures. These include Deems Taylor, Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York, Leopold Stokowski, Dr. John Haynes Holmes, Harry Elmer Barnes, Elinore M. Herrick, Congressmen James L. Quinn and Henry Ellenbogen, Senator Joseph F. Guffey and Theodore L. Moritz.

Plans for the New York parade on Saturday include a marching roster of more than 1,000 members of Local 802 and their sympathizers. Floats and banners illustrating and explaining the aims of the campaign are being prepared. The line of march will be down Broadway and through the Times Square district.

Radio Union Certified As RCA Bargainers

The National Labor Relations Board has certified the United Electrical and Radio Workers Union as the representative for collective bargaining purposes of certain classes of employees of the Camden plant of the RCA Manufacturing Company over the objections of a rival group, the Employees Committee Union and the company. The UERW was selected by a majority of the employees voting in a recent referendum although a majority of the employees eligible to vote did not participate in the election

Briton's Loew Stock Deal an Investment

Acquisition late last week of 35,000 shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock by an undisclosed British party from the estate of the late Irving Thalberg, was described Tuesday by Wall Street brokerage and Loew's officials as being without other than investment significance.

Paul Cohen, a partner in Hirsch and Lilienthal and Company, which represented the purchasers, said: "Because I was only the broker I do not feel at liberty to disclose the principal's name, but if you knew it I am sure you would not be interested in the transaction. However, you are not the only one who has asked about it."

David Bernstein, vice-president of Loew's said: "The sale is without significance and, certainly, can have no effect on control. It is only a drop in the bucket. The purchase was made for investment only."

At current market prices, the transaction involved approximately $2,200,000.

Consolidated Files Its Reply in Stock Action

Consolidated Films Industries, Inc., has filed an answer to the bill of complaint in the chancery court of Wilmington, Del., on which Norman Johnson of New York, a preferred stockholder, last week obtained an order restraining the corporation from filing an amendment to its certificate of incorporation, pending a hearing November 13.

The corporation denied that the vote of preferred stockholders in favor of the proposed amendment was obtained by "fraud and deceit," claiming a letter and notice sent to stockholders prior to the meeting in regard to the plan was fair and honest, and claimed that the facts alleged to have been omitted could easily have been ascertained by arithmetical computation.

Consolidated denied that the accumulated dividends of $1,600,000 are wiped out under the proposed plan, but that accumulated dividends on the present preferred stock would be paid and liquidated by the exchange of each share of outstanding preferred stock for one and one-quarter shares of the new preference stock and one-quarter share of the new common stock having all dividends and voting and other rights given to the present preferred stock.

Reports English Are Building 150 Theatres

English interests are constructing on the average of 150 new theatres a year and there is no sign of this figure waning, Percy Phillipson, president of General Register, said this week in commenting on the outlook in the British Isles. He arrived in New York Monday on the Queen Mary to spend six weeks in Manhattan on his usual business trip.

NBC OBSERVES TENTH YEAR OF NETWORKS

Roosevelt Greeting Cites Radio's Value as Open Forum; Television in 10 Years, Sarnoff

Radio, as it is represented by National Broadcasting Company, largest system of networks in America, this week is celebrating its tenth anniversary as a commercial medium for mass entertainment and expression, 25 years younger than the commercial motion picture theatre.

An anniversary dinner on Monday evening signaled the opening of the celebration, brought congratulations from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who spoke of the freedom of the air, and was the occasion for a prediction from David Sarnoff that television will be ready within ten years, and for a general examination of the advances by radio in the decade.

International broadcasting executives mingled with 1,600 guests in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel on Park Avenue as the celebrations opened.

"It is prophetic of future development that so much could be achieved within so brief a time," said the President's greeting.

"Although radio has made a general contribution to the cultural life of our people, it is the maintenance of the open forum for friendly and open debate and discussion that gives the American system of broadcasting preeminence.

"Radio broadcasting is an essential service to the American home in the molding of public opinion. It must be maintained for the American people, free of bias, or prejudice, or sinister control. Every controversial question was argued and responsible representatives of political parties or groups were permitted an opportunity to present to views over the radio in the recent general elections. That is as it should be."

Mr. Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, and toastmaster of the dinner, said that "we now begin the second decade of this new art by dedicating it to the achievement of television, the broadcasting of sight."

Cites Increased Service

Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said he could not overlook the fact that during the last four years under President Roosevelt radio broadcasting had made greater strides in public service, goodwill and financial stability than during any other period in its brief but meteoric history.

Merlin H. Aylesworth, former president of NBC and now chairman of the board of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, praised the Federal Communications Commission because it had "wisely refrained from interference with the freedom of the air in the programs and policies laid down by the broadcasters and their advisers."

Maurice Rambert, president of the International Broadcasting Union, who is credited with having built the first amateur radio receiver on the Continent, told of his work in forming the union and the progress that has been made in international cooperation between the radio organizations of all countries.

The guests of honor included Postmaster General James A. Farley, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace; Robert Jardillier, French Minister of Communications; former Vice-President Charles G. Dawes; C. D. Howe, Minister of Transportation for Canada; Mr. Rambert, who is also president of the Swiss Broadcasting Company; Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of General Electric Company; A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of Westinghouse; Paul D. Cravath, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Opera; Walter Damrosch and Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Also Colby M. Chester, chairman of the board of General Foods Corporation; General James B. Allison, U. S. A.; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, and Felix M. Warburg, financier.

Also among the guests were 25 radio executives of 13 foreign countries who are visiting America as the guests of NBC. The countries represented were England, France, Canada, Italy, Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Holland, Poland, Sweden, Switzerland and Yugoslavia.

In the afternoon preceding the dinner, the guests were entertained by one of the most elaborate of radio programs when NBC tuned in a nationwide audience to conversations ranging from a submarine under the sea to the top of Pike's Peak, and separated by more than 8,000 miles; from a plane flying over San Diego, Cal., to a speeding train in Germany.

Ten years ago National Broadcasting Company was formed as a unit of 19 stations. Today, the NBC is a connecting link between 102 stations in all parts of the United States, Canada and Hawaii. In celebrating the 10 years of its history, NBC is actually celebrating the history of commercial radio in this country.

Rates To Be Increased

Coincidental with the opening of the anniversary week celebrations, it was learned that a rate increase of 10 per cent for sponsored time on both the Red and Blue networks of NBC will be instituted shortly. First to be affected, on December 15, will be the 21 basic stations comprising the Red group. Two weeks later, on January 5, the advance will be enforced on the Blue, also numbering 21 basic stations.

With the additional 10 per cent. new prices for the Red Network will be as follows: One hour, $8,000; half-hour, $4,800; quarter-hour, $3,200. Similarly, the Blue Network prices will be one hour, $7,200; half-hour, $4,320; quarter-hour, $2,880.

However, advertisers who have contracts with the broadcasting company as of December 15 may continue on the present basis for any period up to and including December 14, 1937, but providing they continue existing broadcasts without interruption. Additions to such facilities may be made on the old rate basis, but the adjusted rates are applicable to all new broadcast series contracted for on and after December 15, 1937.

Cites Increased Coverage

NBC pointed out that its company's coverage has greatly increased since the current rates were established and that the cost of radio advertising, per listener, is still relatively lower than that established by any previous rate scheduled in the history of the company. The last NBC increase was established in February, 1935, and was 16.6 per cent.

Using figures compiled by the Joint Committee on Radio Research, an organization representing advertisers, agencies and broadcasters, NBC, as of January 1, 1936, estimates 22,869,000 radio families in the United States, an increase of 4,920,838 radio families over the 17,948,162 of 1934, on which the current NBC rates were computed. The comparison is between a 10 per cent rate increase and a 27 per cent radio family increase.

GB Accounts Up 1,000, to 3,000

"Establishing a new high mark for the exhibition of British motion pictures in America, Gaumont British will play its 1936-37 product into approximately 3,000 theatres in the United States," said George W. Weeks, general sales manager, this week in New York. The company is releasing 24 features in America this year.

Mr. Weeks says he has closed film deals with about 40 large circuits, affiliated and independent, throughout the country. Deals include arrangements with Warner Brothers, RKO, Skouras, Fox West Coast and Comerford. The indicated total of 3,000 theatres compares with a total of 2,000 last year, added Mr. Weeks.

"No longer do American exhibitors skeptically view British pictures," he said. "Gaumont British has convinced them that the product coming out of its studios is comparable to the best produced by Hollywood."

Johnston Incorporates Sterling Pictures

W. Ray Johnston has announced the incorporation in Delaware of his new producing organization, Sterling Pictures Corporation, as a holding company which will control the stock in the distributing company; in Sterling Productions, Inc., the California producing unit; and in Sterling International Corporation, the foreign subsidiary. Financing for the working capital of the new Sterling organization has been completed. The public will not be invited to participate at present, the initial financing being handled by a private syndicate. According to present plans a general meeting will be held in Chicago early in January to discuss and organize sales policies and distribution arrangements.

Regal Will Release 16 English Pictures

Setting a policy of selecting features from various British companies which are considered particularly appropriate for Canada, Henry L. Nathanson, general manager of Regal Films, Ltd., in Toronto, has announced a group of pictures which will be released in the Dominion during the new season.

The list of 16 includes: "Dreaming Lips," "Song of Freedom," "Fall of an Empire," "The Juggernaut," "She Shall Have Music," "Two's Company," "Land Without Music," "When Knights Were Bold," "Man in the Mirror," "Limelight," "The Poison Belt," "Livingstone in Africa," "Broken Blossoms," "Music Hall," "The Three Maxims" and an untitled Ann Harding picture.

British International Plans Eight Features

British International Pictures in London are preparing eight pictures for production this season and plans are completed for the immediate shooting of "Sensation" and "The Dominant Sex." Shortly after, Robertson Hare will start work on the current London theatrical hit, "Aren't Men Beasts?"

Eagerly awaited!

Warner Brothers Take to the Air To Merchandise Their "Gold Diggers"

A covey of Busby Berkeley beauties are being sent into the air by Warners on a nationwide tour, for the edification of city editors and the readers of their newspapers, but more particularly to attract attention to the box offices of theatres playing the next Warner musical, "The Gold Diggers of 1937."

Beginning Saturday, from Hollywood, "the first tour of its kind," according to Warners, will take form in the nature of a flying troupe of principals and chorus girls who are to visit 26 cities in 29 days. In each city there will be staged, at the leading Warner "Gold Diggers" theatre account, a special performance to exploit the production.

Aboard the American Airlines plane will be the principals, Jeanne Madden, Rosalind Marquis and Fred Lawrence, and 12 hand-picked Busby Berkeley chorus girls.

Warner's home office press agents say they already have received numerous wires from governors, mayors and chambers of commerce evidencing "great interest in such a junket of beauty," to say nothing of "a few gentlemen who wired on a personal and freelance basis."

The "Gold Diggers" will be given the keys to the 26 cities visited, at least, and one state has even promised an aerial escort of National Guard planes for the ship's entry into its capital. S. Charles Einfeld's home office and field exploiteers, of course, will see to it that the proper amount of press attention and headlines accrue along the route.

To prove that "Hollywood is ever watchful for the newest idea to titillate the public interest," Warner's publicity announcement said, "The girls are now in training for the trip. They have to be rested and at the right weight when they fly through the air. If they gain weight they will have to skip it because the plane arrangements have set them down for certain weight. If they lose weight they will have to put in a couple more pounds of luggage"—no easy task for any blonde beauty.

Cities on the itinerary include (starting November 14th): Los Angeles, El Paso, Fort Worth, Dallas, Memphis, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston, Providence, New York, Albany, Syracuse, Buffalo, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco, returning to Los Angeles on December 12th.

Dominion Sound Head

Lloyd C. Pearson has been named general sales manager of Dominion Sound Equipments, Ltd., Montreal, to succeed B. C. Lewis, who was killed in an automobile accident several weeks ago. Mr. Pearson was formerly with the research and sales departments of Northern Electric Company.

New Mississippi Theatre

The Saenger Theatres Corporation will construct a new $250,000 theatre at Jackson, Miss., for lease by the Kennington-Saenger Theatres, Inc., operators of four additional Jackson houses. The Saenger interests are also planning the construction of a new house at Baton Rouge, La.

Old Film and New To be Contrasted In Zukor Jubilee

Special programs in which old films will be contrasted with new are being planned for theatres throughout the country in celebration of Paramount's Silver Jubilee commemorating the anniversary of Adolph Zukor's entry into the industry. Prominent among the pictures used for this purpose will be "Queen Elizabeth," released in 1912.

J. J. Unger and Milt Kusell, actively engaged in promotion of plans for the celebration, have returned to New York from an 11-day tour of the country in which they visited Washington, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Chicago and Cleveland. After a visit to Boston Mr. Kusell was to start upon a three-week tour of the middle west.

Harry L. Royster, special theatre representative in connection with the jubilee drive, has completed a fortnight's tour of key cities in the east and contemplates a month's coverage of the south and west.

Mr. Kusell and Myke Lewis, district managers, have been named by Neil F. Agnew, in charge of sales, as captains of the east and west sales divisions of the drive.

"Captain Kidds" Are Aim of Law—Patman

"The recently enacted Robinson-Patman law is aimed at the 'Captain Kidds' in business who have been detouring the golden rule," Representative Wright Patman said this week in an address at the annual convention of the Central Supply Association in Chicago.

He declared that act "makes effective the original intention of the Clayman Act, the prevention of direct or indirect price discrimination by the seller among his customers."

But, in New Haven, former United States Attorney Felix H. Levy, speaking before the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, said the Robinson-Patman Act will impose no onerous restrictions on business.

Ideal Studios Reopened To Make Negro Films

The Ideal Sound Studios in North Bergen, N. J., have been reopened for production under direction of Oscar Micheaux, Negro author and producer. It is planned to make four pictures for distribution among theatres with Negro clientele. A company of 20 actors, including Oscar Folk, who played the role of the Angel Gabriel in "The Green Pastures," are now employed.

Federation Dinner Scheduled

The annual radio dinner of the radio, music, refrigeration and allied industries division of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York on November 22. Screen, radio and stage stars are expected to contribute their services.

The following have been selected for publication answering section (A).

G. E. Doe says: "The various things affecting the reflective power of a screen are: (a) The power of its material from which its surface is made. (b) Its lack of color, since any color indicates the absorption of other colors. (c) Its freedom from deposit of materials, dust for example, or carbon from smoke, having less reflection power than was possessed by the original, clean surface. (d) Oxidization by air action which usually tends to darken and thus lower its reflection power. (e) Atmospheric moisture, which tends to increased oxidization and added deposit of material from the air. (f) The character of the surface, which alters reflection powers by differences in diffusive powers.

"I believe it may be said that all pure white surfaces have the same power of reflection, but not all white surfaces have, for the reason that it is plain our "Dad" had screen surfaces in mind when the question was asked, and a surface may be a solid one or it may be quite porous, and naturally the latter would permit much light to enter the body of the screen, as a cloth one, for instance, and thus be lost.

(B) J. R. Prater says: "Wrong distance of light source from mirror entails loss of light, loss of light quality, or both, regardless of type of lamp. However, the most critical lamp in this respect is the high intensity, including the Suprex type.

"All high intensity light sources emit three distinct light tones or colors. The carbon shell produces a slightly yellowish tint. The gas ball immediately in front of the crater floor emits a very brilliant, white light, in front of which is the negative flame, which has a bluish tint but is much less brilliant than either of the other lights.

"Naturally, since each of these originates at a different point along the optical axis, only one of them can be focused at the projector film plane at a time. However, there is so very little difference in distance from each of them to the mirror that very careful work is necessary to focus the white (gas ball) light at the aperture without intermixture with one of the others. The difference is in fact so slight that either may be focused at the aperture (and screen too, of course) without noticeable change in spot diameter.

"And so, to correctly locate the spherical mirror (I assume the question includes spherical, parabolic and elliptical, the curvature of the three types varying but slightly, and not at all in central zone) the following instructions will serve.

"First, obtain the lamp manufacturer's exact recommendation as to distance from light source to mirror and mirror to film plane of projector. Next, cut a piece of stiff wire the exact length of the distance specified for aperture to mirror. With no carbons in lamp, insert this wire in the opening (carbon jaw) of lamp, with one end exactly at the film plane. Now locate the mirror with its surface (edge of hole in center) exactly at the other end of the wire and that part of the job is done.

"Next install carbons, trim and burn them until a perfectly normal crater is formed. Pull the switch without disturbing the carbons. When cool, cut a wire (about No. 10 will serve very well) the exact length of recommended for distance from light source to mirror. Swing the negative carbon holder slightly to one side and remove it, the negative carbon, to provide space in which to work. Now move the entire lamp carriage forward or back until the wire you have cut will just reach from crater floor to surface of mirror at a point about 2.5 inches from the mirror center. Check the distance all the way around the mirror, so adjusting its controls that the wire just reaches. (In this it must be assumed that the core has not burned lower than the rest of the crater floor, or else the wire point in contact with the carbon must be moved around the crater floor as it is moved around the mirror surface, else an error will occur, or so I think.—F. H. R.) Now, without having disturbed the positive carbon or mirror, readjust the negative to its normal operating position. If properly done, this will provide very nearly the correct setting and distances, but as a final check the light must be carefully observed at the screen.

"Strike an arc and permit it to settle down to normal operation. With projector not running and fire and rotating shutter at open position, project white light to screen, and, while observing very carefully, move the lamp carriage forward or back until the screen is brightest and the light at maximum whiteness. Then, by moving each mirror adjustment, secure maximum evenness of light distribution and recheck the carbon carriage adjustment to see if any further improvement can be made.

"As a final item, lock all adjustments that need not be moved, and in some suitable manner mark the position of all others, to the end that perfect adjustments may thereafter be maintained. Repeat this checkup of adjustments at regular intervals, or whenever the screen illumination seems to suffer in any respect."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 49

(A) Give us your views as to lubrication of motors and generators. Don't overlook anything. (B) In event you took charge of a projection room, would or would you not deem it your duty to check up and report to the management whether the various projection circuits, particularly the one feeding the projection room, were or were not operating? Tell us just how you would figure out the voltage drop. Remember that a relatively small unnecessary percentage of loss may mount up to a surprising figure in a year.

"SERVICE AS KEYNOTE" BRINGS PROFIT INCREASE

97 Fox Midwest Houses Find That Selling the Theatre Brings the Gross

by KENNETH FORCE

in Kansas City

A three-months' test in the 97 Fox Midwest theatres to establish the value of "service as a keynote" to patrons and to sell the idea over and above the old style ballyhoos for the show alone has proven without the shadow of a doubt that the promotion of service as a keynote is profitable, bringing favorable public reaction everywhere.

While services are not being used by the 97 Fox theatres in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois exclusively to attract patronage — normal theatre promotion continuing — the objective of Fox houses was, and is, to distinguish themselves in the public's minds as a little more friendly, more comfortable and more convenient than other theatres they attend to see good shows.

"The shows we sell," said Lon Cox, district manager then, now film buyer for the circuit, "are no more entertaining in our theatres than in any other, unless people like our theatres better." The objective of the services is to make "your audiences your friends."

Originality in service is not claimed by the circuit. The services are not new. But the Fox experience at the 97 houses in emphasizing and standardizing them is interesting and significant.

Stamp and Mail Service

The "stamps and mail" service has proved a box office boon. The cashier accepts any mail that persons have when they come to the show, and posts it for them, in a mail box located in the lobby or nearby. The cashier carries a supply of stamps for customer convenience. One company in Illinois wrote Fox Midwest thanking the circuit for taking care of its late night mail; many persons have commented, and patrons as a whole are making constant use of the service. A card at the box office, where it easily can be seen, calls attention to the service, and with this as with the other services, trailers and other advertising are used.

There have been some calls from prospective patrons who wanted the names of reliable nursemaids with whom to leave their children so they might be free to go to a theatre. The theatre manager carefully makes up a list of these and keeps it handy.

Uniform Call Slips

Theatre call slips have been used a great deal by first-runs. Fox Midwest simply made application of the idea circuit wide. The theatres all use a uniform call slip. Formerly its use was haphazard, by each theatre in a different, or indifferent, way.

On lost items the circuit has adopted a standardized system. Immediately after the show a check is made of lost articles. These are recorded on a typewritten list. One copy is kept in the box office so the cashier can answer queries intelligently. The other copy is in the manager's office for his information when the cashier is not on duty. Every article, no matter how small or inexpensive it appears, is treated in this way.

The Fox theatre managers make it a practice to welcome newcomers to their towns by sending a letter of welcome in which they enclose a pass. Names are obtained from a public utility (water, gas, or electric company), from the Chamber of Commerce, of from business men's clubs. This has proved very successful.

Umbrellas for Patrons

Each Fox theatre has on hand a few inexpensive umbrellas to be loaned to patrons to get in their cars or to their homes in case of unexpected bad weather. The theatre expects to lose a few of these in the course of a year, but this loss is very slight compared with the benefit of good will accruing to it.

The circuit's one piece of special promotion, the "Screen Forecast," has proved so successful it will be continued as a regular quarterly feature.

This is a small booklet giving the name, cast, a thumbnail review and an illustration of each of perhaps two dozen important pictures for release in the succeeding three months. On the back page is a list of the pictures. The patron checks the ones he wants to see and drops it in a box at the theatre or mails it to the theatre. The theatre then notifies him, or her, by card or telephone a week or so in advance of the showing. The piece thus is used as general advertising and as a service to the patron on particular pictures. The "Forecast" has proved especially worthy in building patronage for class pictures.

The whole program is serving the purpose of bringing theatres into closer, more friendly contact with patrons.

Educational's Production Activities at New High

Educational Pictures' short subject production activities this week hit the highest peak since the concentration of its production in New York. For the first time, two separate units were working at the studios in Astoria, L. I.

Al Christie is supervising one unit and William Watson is occupying another stage with his company, and, on the completion of these two comedies, work will start on a musical starring Niela Goodelle under Mr. Christie's direction and Mr. Watson will put Sylvia Froos and Jimmie Brierly to work in another.

Carol Stone Cancels Trip

Carol Stone, daughter of Fred Stone who is now in Hollywood, and who is appearing in White Horse Inn in New York, has postponed her engagement with the Comedie Francaise in Paris until next spring. Until then she will remain with the legitimate production.

Information Publication Urged on New Theatres

Plans are being urged in England to provide that licensing authorities which pass on new theatre building adopt a method by which exhibitors may know when a theatre is planned as one means of combatting the problem of overbuilding, according to a report to the United States Department of Commerce from Henry E. Stebbins, assistant trade commissioner in London. It is proposed that the licensing authorities acquaint the secretary of the local branch of the CEA in advance when plans are to be submitted.

Legion Men Forming Variety Club Posts

The Variety Club of the American Legion, recently formed for members of the amusement industry who served in the World War, will hold its first meeting at the Variety Club, Hotel Statler, Cleveland, to elect officers.

Organizers of the Variety Post are Howard Roth, head of the Paramount booking department in Cleveland, and David Lederman, local attorney who produces stage plays on the side. The idea developed during the recent American Legion convention in Cleveland last month.

MGM Sues Frederick Lonsdale

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, through its attorneys, Loeb, Walker and Loeb, has filed suit in the supreme courts in Los Angeles to recover $50,000 advanced to Frederick Lonsdale on a contract signed in 1930. The complaint charges that Mr. Lonsdale refused to deliver, to the producers' satisfaction, two originals and a sequel to "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" after having received an advance of $25,000 on each original.

"Ecstasy" Run Cancelled

The scheduled indefinite run of "Ecstasy" at the Winter Garden theatre in Seattle was abruptly cancelled this week. John Danz, operator of the house, reported that the film was pulled because of complaints from the City Council. Council members said that many complaints had been received from individuals and clubs and their intervention was a result of a decision by the Censor Board.

Short Joins National Screen

Paul G. Short has resigned as manager of the Interstate Majestic theatre at Dallas to become division manager of National Screen Service for Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas. He succeeds Wallace Walthall, who, in turn, has been promoted to division director. Ed Sullivan, assistant manager at the Paramount theatre on Broadway in New York, will take over Mr. Short's duties at the Majestic.

Fidelity Executives Arrive

Frank Dormand and Stanley Allen of Fidelity Distributors of London will arrive in New York this week to purchase pictures for distribution in the United Kingdom and to arrange for distribution of their product in America.

Albert J. Cohen has been signed as story editor for the Irving Briskin unit at Columbia. The post has been newly created.

Five Picture Plan

The Denham studio of London Film Productions, a five-million-dollar plant according to popular estimate, already has produced negative footage valued by its producers at considerably above half that amount. More than £500,000, in fact, has been spent on the five films already completed at Denham:

"Rembrandt," Alexander Korda personally directing Charles Laughton.

"Fire Over England," Eric Pommer production directed by Wiliam K. Howard, with Flora Robson as Queen Elizabeth.

"Men Are Not Gods," the Miriam Hopkins vehicle originally called "Triangle."

"Dark Journey," the first of Victor Saville's productions for London.

"Elephant Boy," the Flaherty version of Kipling's "Kim," for which exteriors were made in India.

Registering a big speed-up in London Films production over any previous season, the subjects just listed are only half the story of the activities of the Korda unit in its still new super-studio. Less than a year after its opening, Denham will be well towards completion of this second Big Five:

"I Claudius," for which Merle Oberon is due from Hollywood to play opposite Charles Laughton. William Cameron Menzies is director of the Robert Graves book.

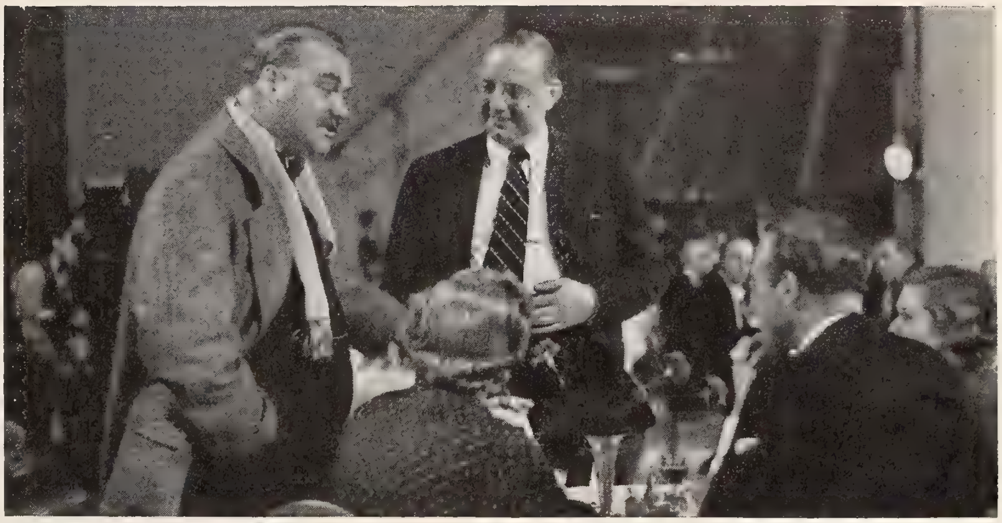
"Knight without Armour," the Jacques Feyder direction of Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat, now in full production.

"Storm in a Teacup," second Victor Saville production, will occupy space on completion of current exteriors in Scotland.

"South Riding," third from Saville, is also on location, in Yorkshire, and will go on the floor shortly.

"Troopship" will be the second Pommer-London feature. A camera unit is with a British military transport ship in the Near East.

Concurrent with London's own production, the Denham studio has been used by various independent units, and the call on its space, and on that of the neighboring Pinewood studio, already is justifying the optimism of the British industry in more than doubling the available modern floor capacity of the country, with a further large increase of facilities still to be provided in the mammoth Soskin-Bell Amalgamated Studio at Elstree.



Bruce Nigel visits the London Films set where Victor Saville is directing "Dark Journey" and tells friends all about it while Mr. Saville enjoys the conversation. Nigel is working with Edward G. Robinson in Atlantic Films' "Thunder in the City."

Elbow Room

Emphasizing that British producers are now for the most part working for the first time with sufficient elbow room at their disposal is the current floor situation at Pinewood. British & Dominions, for "A Man with Your Voice," built a complete suite of six rooms and still had half the capacity of one of the big floors free for roof-top setting for the same film. The continuity of production thus made possible, a commonplace in Hollywood, has been a difficulty in London except in a few plants like the admirably planned ATP studio at Ealing and the BIP Elstree building, which, old as it is, has big floor space.

Sally Eilers and Ricardo Cortez have completed their parts in "A Man with Your Voice" and sailed on the Queen Mary. A Jack Raymond production, the film is directed by Carol Reed.

Hagen Making Three

At the J. H. (old Whitehall) studio at Elstree, Albert de Courville has started direction of "She Got What She Wanted," for Twickenham release, with Curt Courant handling the camera. A leading actor has still to be signed for the role opposite Tucker McGuire. The first scenes have used the star with Constance Collier and Alistair Sim.

In the Hammersmith studios of the Hagen organization, the bi-lingual "Widow's Island" is well towards completion, the most recent sets staging a banquet in a Belgian town and an episode in a French laundry, in which the leading players were Olga Lindo and Paul Cavanagh for the English version and Line Noro and Aime Clariond for the French.

The star role in Hagen's Sherlock Holmes racing mystery story, "Silver Blaze," has been allotted to Nagina, British racehorse with an unbeaten record as a two-year-old.

G-B Unit for Africa

Geoffrey Barkas and Tom Conachie, with Cyril Knowles as cameraman and Mrs. Barkas in charge of continuity, are on their way to South Africa as the advance party of a location unit for "King Solomon's Mines," the Rider Haggard novel of the veldt which Robert Stevenson is directing. Barkas did similar location work for "Rhodes of Africa," "Soldiers Three" and "The Great Barrier," other G-B films with an "Empire" setting. Conachie, who was with Barkas on his Indian and African trips, later was part of the G-B liaison on "The Flying Doctor," produced with Australian National Productions at Sydney.

Erection of a kraal for 4,000 natives and their families during the shooting of scenes at the Valley of a Thousand Hills in Natal is one of the main tasks of the Barkas party.

Navy "Stunts"

The Admiralty, august ruling body of British sea affairs, having accepted the idea that our naval might should be publicized through the screen, is placing no apparent limits to its cooperation on Herbert Wilcox's "The Navy Eternal."

It was necessary for a scene in which HMS Royal Oak, posing for the rebel El Mirante, was to be sunk, that the ship should list under gun-fire and the crew simulate panic. Complacently, officers gave orders for under-water compartments to be flooded until the vessel, valued at many millions of pounds, offered a near perpendicular deck for the Wilcox cameramen operating from the ship itself, from tenders alongside, and from the air. The crew competed for the honor of "abandoning ship" by spectacular dives into the sea. The shots were made at Weymouth.

Another H. W. feature, "Splinters in the Air," is giving a little incidental publicity to that other service department, the Royal Air Force. Sydney Howard, starring, has been featured in a sequence devoted to the lighter side of Depot life.

REVIEWS OF NEW BOOKS

THE NEW TECHNIQUE OF SCREEN WRITING, by Tamar Lane. A Practical Guide to the Writing and Marketing of Photoplays. Published by Whittlesey House, McGraw-Hill Book Company, Oct. 15. ($3).

At intervals down the years Author Lane has addressed himself to the reading and more or less writing public on the subject of the photoplay, how to write it and what to do with it thereafter. Titles of past published discourses are "Hollywood and the Movies," "Professional Movie Tricks" and, of course, "What's Wrong With the Movies." His qualifications have been, in each case, those inherent in the fact of his personal participation in the affairs of the motion picture on the writing side, as scenarist, as editor and as executive in the story departments of various producing companies.

The present volume is Mr. Lane's first published utterance on the subject since the introduction of sound and one of, if not in fact the first, in identical kind from any source. In common with those which have preceded it, this work deals with the screen story primarily as a piece of commercial merchandise, to be fabricated for sale and production, to possess, within prescribed limits, such artistic qualities as may be consistent with prevailing market conditions, but to serve, first and finally, the plain purpose of practical picturization. It is in this regard that Mr. Lane's books contrast most sharply with a majority of the works on the subject and surpass them in practical value.

Naturally, a substantial portion of the 342-page text is devoted to a discussion of changes in writing technique due to the introduction of sound and dialogue. This discussion is copiously accompanied by references to completed pictures. Equally definite are statements made later on concerning the current status of the photoplay market, the prevailing system of story selection, the variability of studio demand and the average prices paid for stories in divers forms and from divers sources. A categorical indictment of the system is made without indication of petulance, likewise without hope for change.

Also included in the book are an original screen play, a treatment or adaptation and a detailed shooting continuity, each representative of what may be called a mean average in point of quality as measured by box office records of the pictures concerned. Names and addresses of agents, studios and producing companies are supplied and, in short, the individual who buys the book for the purpose of learning how to go about the business of writing a screen story and offering it for sale will find in Mr. Lane's volume the answers to just about all the questions likely to arise. What with the producers manifesting at this time a general swing toward the utilization of original screen stories, the book may be said to have a certain timeliness.—William R. Weaver.

THEATRE COLLECTIONS IN LIBRARIES AND MUSEUMS; an International Hand Book, by Rosamond Gilder and George Freedley. Published under the auspices of the New York Public Library and the National Theatre Conference with the cooperation of the American Library Association, by Theatre Arts, Inc., New York. $1.50.

A comprehensive index, listing in detail all the important theatre collections of the world and thus giving to producers of both the legitimate stage and motion pictures a key to the source and location of such material, would save time and labor. This compact volume is a scientific beginning of such an index.

Although the book is the result of long study, Miss Gilder, in her introduction, points out that "the handbook is published but not finished." Even so, the great theatre collections of Europe, Asia and America, their relation to the living theatre and their methods of procedure, are described. Twenty-two countries are represented in the list with the content of theatre collections in libraries and museums, both private and public, described briefly but accurately.

The survey on which the book is based was begun by Theatre Arts Monthly and carried forward by the Library Committee of the National Theatre Conference of which Miss Gilder is a member. Compilation of the European section was conducted by Mr. Freedley, director of the Theatre Section of the New York Public Library, under a traveling scholarship granted by the Carnegie Foundation.

In addition to the records of theatre collections, there is a brief introduction pointing out the importance of collecting the theatre lore of the past as an aid to productions of the present and future; a chapter of interest to librarians on the care and preservation of fugitive material, a bibliography and a cross index.

The authors express acknowledgment to the Federal Theatre Project of the Works Progress Administration and to Kenneth White, senior research worker in the Play Bureau of the Federal Project, and note that Mr. White's material, on the American section, will be enlarged and published as a WPA project.—James D. Ivers.

Paul Morvay Quits Post As Head of Hungarian Group

by ENDRE HEVESI
in Budapest

Paul Morvay, managing vice-president of the Hungarian Exhibitors' Union, whose election last year was hailed as a great triumph for the case of the small, independent exhibitors, has resigned. Mr. Morvay, owner of a third-run house, at the time of his election was considered the spearhead of the neighborhood theatre fight against the domination of the Gero circuit, largest in the country.

The board of the Union had sympathized with Mr. Gero prior to the election of Morvay, and when he assumed office it was anticipated by the independents that he would act in their interests entirely.

A few months ago the small exhibitors determined to form a cooperative booking society in order to obtain product at a lower price. The plan, however, was dropped because of lack of funds to finance it. Then Mr. Gero announced he would be willing to supply the necessary money, but on the condition that he decide, with the assistance of a committee, which films the members of such a cooperative group could book.

Morvay supported the proposal, but the mapority of the exhibitors protested vigorously, declaring such an arrangement would give Gero even greater power than he now has. The result was a bitter attack against Mr. Morvay. Offended, Mr. Morvay resigned, and the cooperative buying plan was finally dropped.

At the Box Office

A Hungarian film, "200 Pengoes Salary," was the outstanding picture of September at the box office. It ran simultaneously in three first run houses, grossed very well and started its second week equally well. Among the American films, "Prisoner of Shark Island," at the Radius did average business; "The Last of the Pagans" was weak; "A Night at the Opera" did exceptionally good business, with six weeks first run at the Metro and six more as a second run; "Wife vs. Secretary" went over average in four weeks at the Forum; "Whom the Gods Destroy" and "Tale of Two Cities" were fair, and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was weak.

French Producer Active

Henry St. Blancat, French producer, has started production work at the Filmiroda studio on "En Derive" in French and Hungarian versions. It will be the first French film made here in four years, and the trade is hopeful of attracting other French production capital.

No Cuts By Censors

Unitas Distributing Company, owned by Gero and handling UA product, has made much in its comparatively sparse advertising on Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times" of the fact that it will be shown without any cuts by the censor board. Rumors had been current that the censor activity would ruin virtually the entertainment value of the film, which happened in Vienna, causing the picture to slip at the box office.

T. Guaitella has been appointed manager of Universal's Marseilles office in France and G. Louveau has been placed in charge of the Lyons office.

When their lips meet...

....in the silence
you'll hear.... a box-office record
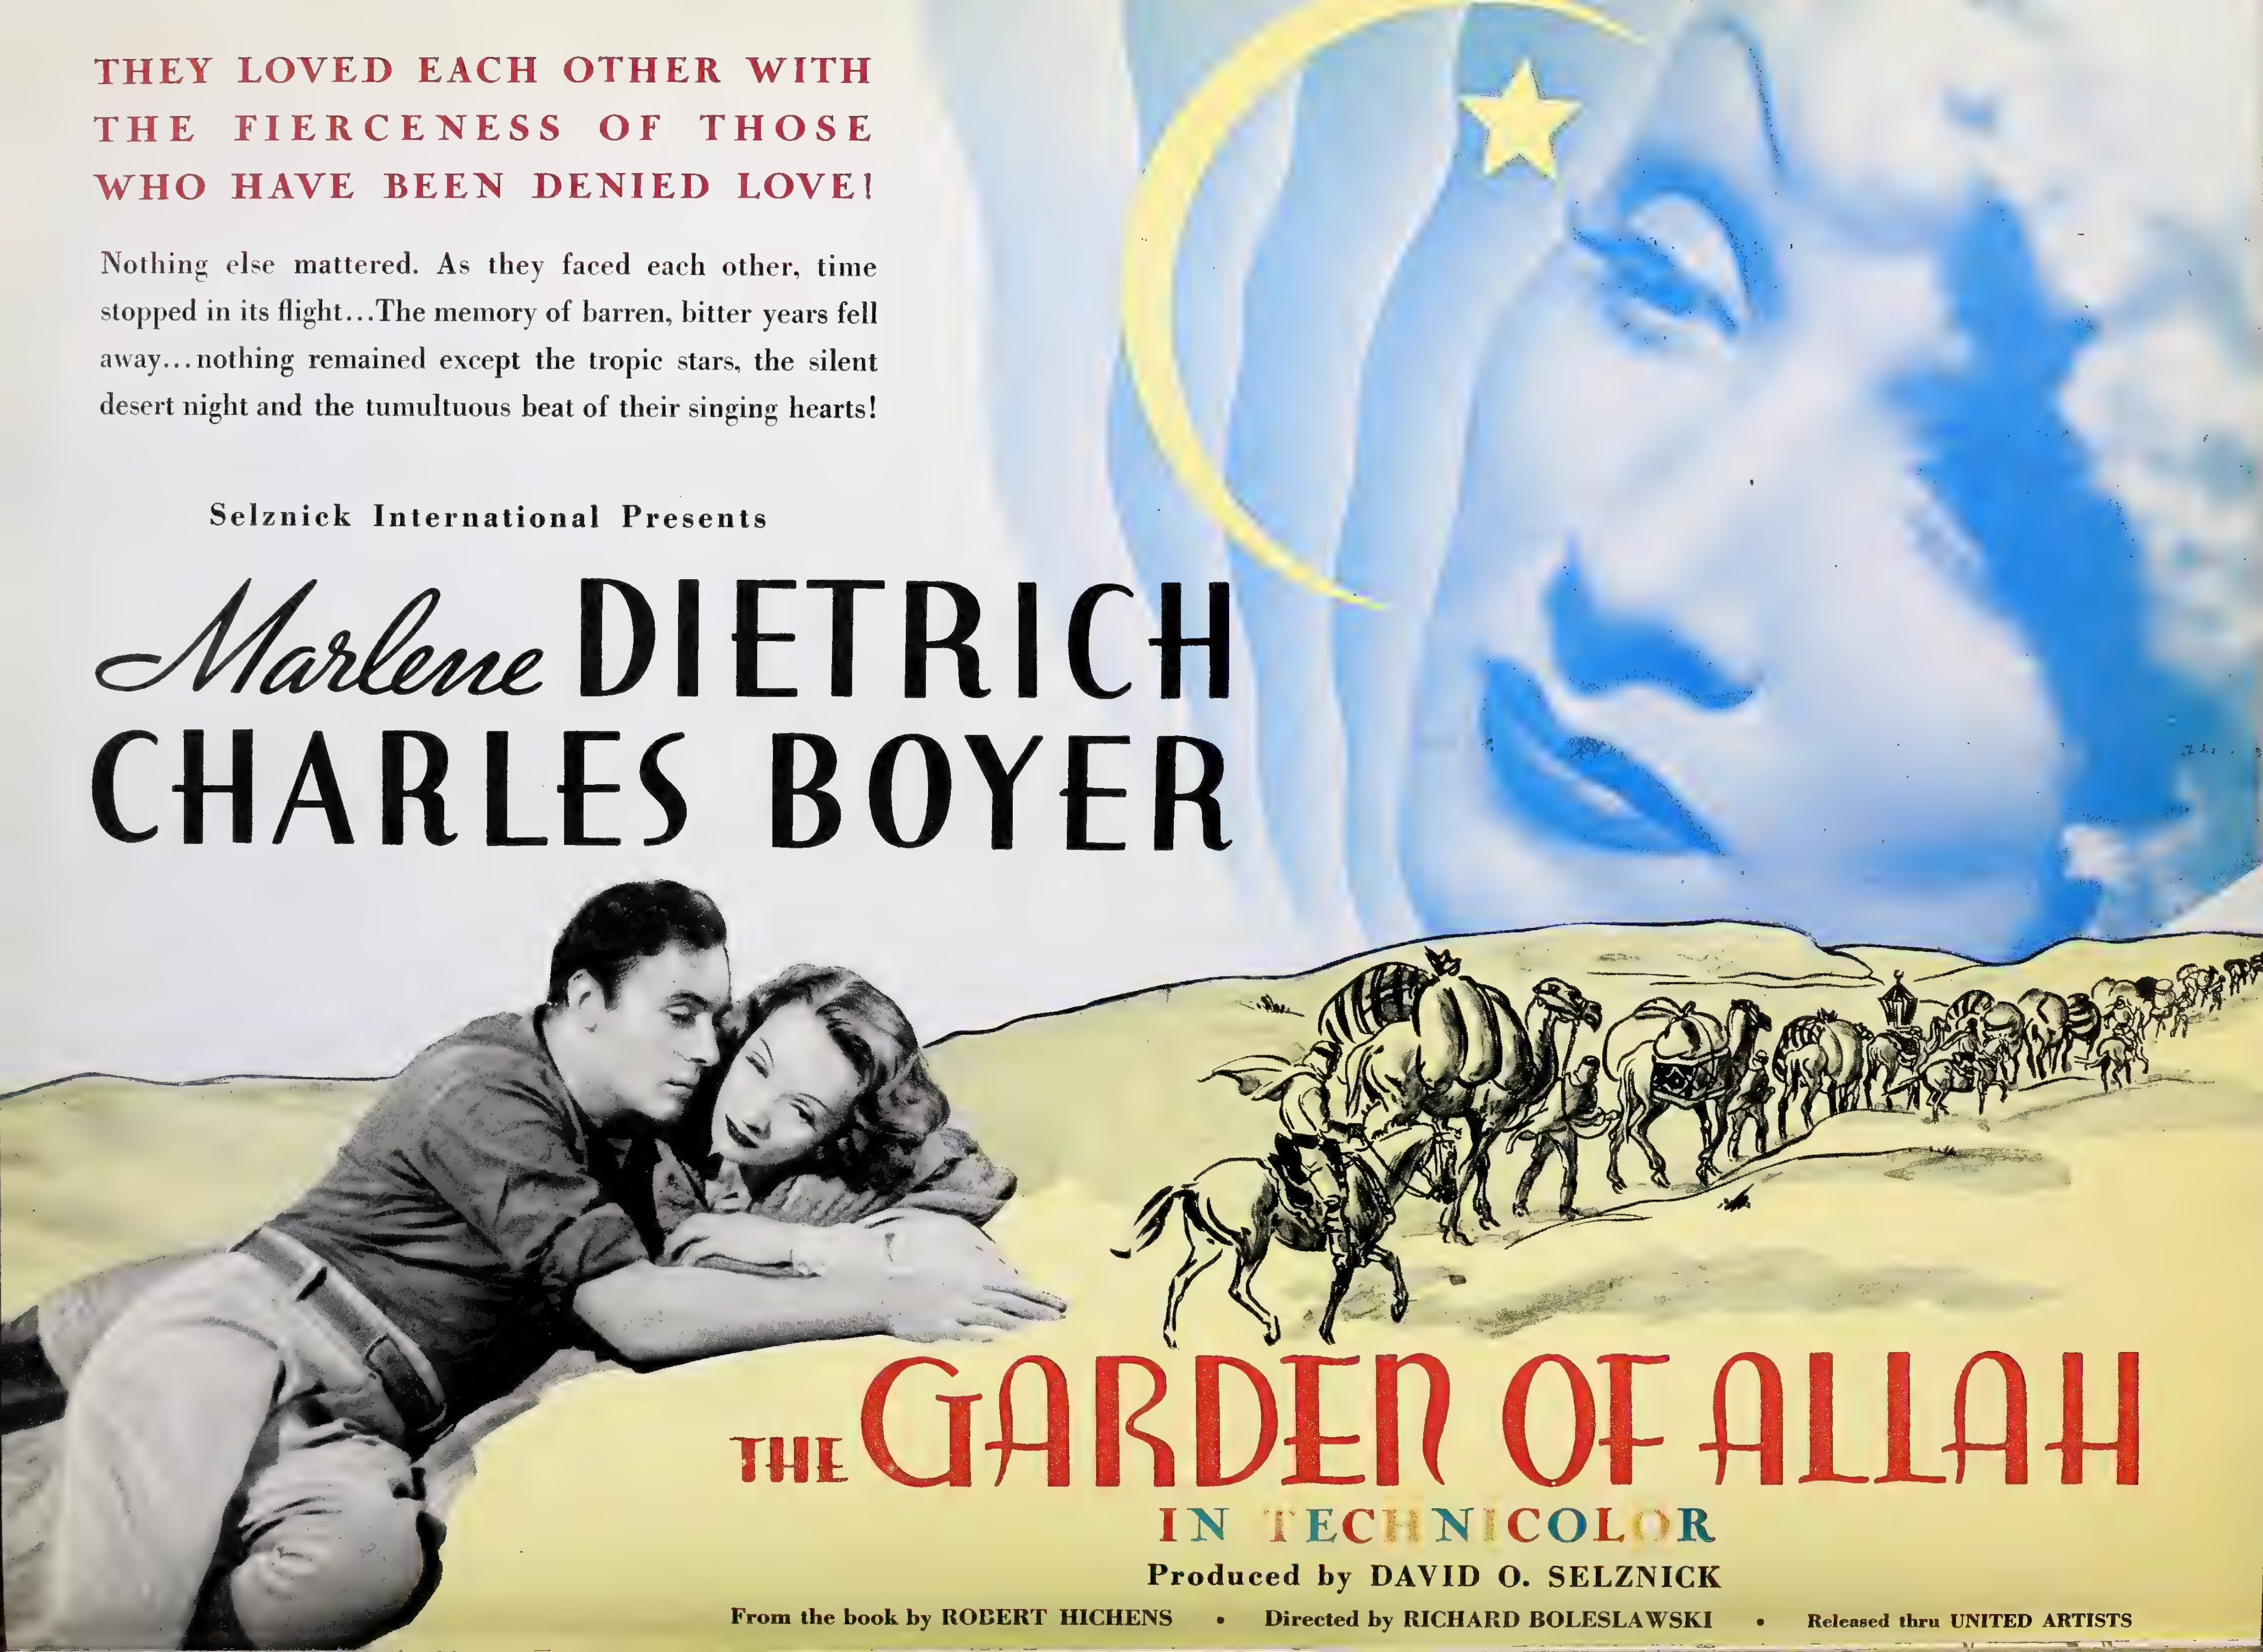
crashing



THEY LOVED EACH OTHER WITH THE FIERCENESS OF THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN DENIED LOVE!

Nothing else mattered. As they faced each other, time stopped in its flight...The memory of barren, bitter years fell away...nothing remained except the tropic stars, the silent desert night and the tumultuous beat of their singing hearts!

RECORD BREAKER

EIGHTEEN months ago Eastman Super X Film was introduced as a special film for a special purpose. Today it stands as the world's leading all-purpose negative. Breaker of records, it is a notable contribution to a record-breaking era in the motion picture industry. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

QUOTA NOT PRACTICABLE FOR SOME THEATRES, BRITISH COURT RULES

Exhibitor Wins in Test Case Claiming He Can't Comply with Act Because of Poor Quality of Films Available

Decision Recognizes Showman's Right to Consider Entertainment Value of Product; Warner Theatre Move Denied

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

An important decision, affecting a large number of British exhibitors who claim that they cannot comply with the Quota clause of the Films Act, owing to the poor quality of the limited number of British films available to them, has been handed down by Everard Dickson, magistrate of the Old Street Police Court, London.

Ruling on a prosecution instigated by the Board of Trade against C. A. Mathes, a member of the Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, in respect to the Forester's Super Cinema, Bethnal Green, London, Mr. Dickson dismissed the summons.

"Not Commercially Practicable"

Commenting that Mr. Mathes' deficiency in British films shown was small (it was proved that he showed 13.8 per cent of features and 12.77 per cent of all films, instead of the statutory 15 per cent) the magistrate said:

"I have come to the conclusion, in this particular year and in this theatre, having regard to the special circumstances relating to competition, it was not commercially practicable to exhibit the full amount."

The following interchange then took place with counsel for the Board of Trade:

Counsel: "You attribute non-compliance to reasons beyond defendants' control?"

The Magistrate: "It is commercially impracticable and therefore beyond their control."

19 Exemptions Issued in Year

This pronouncement is regarded as of the greatest significance in CEA circles. The Act provides for certificates of exemption to be granted in the case of exhibitors who can convince the Board of Trade that insufficient British films were available, but it was declared at the hearing of Mr. Mathes' case that only 19 such certificates were granted in 1935, and it is common knowledge in the trade that only an actual physical shortage of available British footage has been accepted by the Board as a valid excuse for default.

Mr. Dickson's decision, for the first time, recognizes the exhibitor's right to take into consideration the entertainment value of the British films available to him. Undoubtedly, there would have been many more exemptions if this factor previously had been considered, in practice, by the Board. It seems equally certain that there will now be a great increase in applications for exemption, in proportion to the increase of the quota to 20 per cent, and in reliance on the precedent of the Dickson judgment.

It does not follow that there will be a corresponding increase in the certificates issued or, in the case of legal action, in decisions in favor of exhibitors. There was very convincing evidence in Mr. Mathes' case that exceptionally critical East End audiences had to be considered, that competition, from circuit and other halls, was intense as regarded the available usable British product and that, in spite of these factors, the margin of default was very small.

Discounting all these factors, there is undoubtedly encouragement in this case for those who argue that the quota provisions are impossibly onerous in many theatre situations, and also for those traders who have been arguing that any modification of the Films Act should provide, by one means or another, a definite guarantee of exhibition standard in every British film registered for quota.

At the moment the Moyne Committee has before it two rival suggestions to this effect; the establishment of a minimum cost and the setting up of a committee to administer a quality standard. To complicate its discussions, it also has to consider proposals for increase of the quota, from some producers and studio owners; for its reduction, from other producers, from distributors and from exhibitors, and for its conditional abolition, as part of an American-British reciprocity scheme. It is possible that the Committee's choice among all these nostrums may not be unaffected by this latest contribution of cold business fact from the courts.

India's Ban on U. S. Films

A question from Harry Day, M. P., in the House of Commons brought from Assistant Secretary of State Butler, spokesman of the Indian Office, the information that in the two years Aug. 1, 1934 to July 31, 1936, forty films had been banned by various Indian authorities, and that the national complexion of the films were: 18 American, 17 Indian, 4 British, 1 Italian.

Plan to End Title Clashes

A method of coping with the old trade problem of two distributors or producers claiming the same film title has been evolved by the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, and M. Neville Kearney, secretary, is to announce the details soon. It is understood that a register of titles is suggested, with priority of entry establishing a definite right to the title.

The most important part of the FBI plan will be an attempt to make the register international, by agreement with representative bodies of the American industry. By this extension of the idea, registration of a film title in either country would establish an exclusive right in each. The date of registration would be the governing factor and there would be a regular interchange of data between New York or Hollywood and London. The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, it is understood, is being consulted.

The two producing companies British Lion and Joe Rock are both claiming "Calling All Stars" as the title of a musical.

Damages for Composer

Damages of £2,000 ($10,000) have been awarded Michael Spoliansky, the composer, against the London Reporter, in the King's Bench Division. The Reporter, an affiliated enterprise of the Hollywood Reporter, ceased publication some months ago, when debenture holders put in a receiver. Spoliansky's case was that the paper had accused him of plagiarism because he introduced a few bars of "Ye Banks and Braes of Bonnie Doon" into special music he wrote for "The Ghost Goes West." His counsel, Sir Patrick Hastings, K. C., made it plain that Spoliansky's desire was to clear his reputation and that the damages were worthless, in view of the insolvent state of the paper.

Warner Theatre Move Denied

Reports link Warner Brothers with plans for theatre acquisitions in England on a large scale. From various cities in the provinces it is reported that two individuals are seeking to obtain options on properties, stating that their principals want to acquire a theatre "in every town in England."

Among the exhibitors approached is Harry Buxton, who controls 20 houses, chiefly in the Lancashire and Yorkshire areas.

Inquiries led to the belief expressed in some quarters that speculators are after the options, in view of a potential trade situation which may develop into a scramble for theatres on the part of distributors.

Sam E. Morris, vice-president in charge of foreign activity for Warner Bros., declared in New York that company is not engaged in an attempt to acquire theatre properties in England.

371 Motion Pictures Censored in Portugal

During the first quarter of 1936, there were 371 motion pictures censored by the Unspeccao Geral dos Espectaculos for display in Portugal, according to a report from Vice Consul William B. Douglass, in Lisbon, to the United States Department of Commerce. The length of the censored films was 324,749 meters (about 1,065,000 feet).

Figures for the corresponding quarter of last year are not available, but the 1936 figures are far larger than last year's quarterly averages, which were 271 films with a length of 231,872 meters (about 761,000 feet). American films accounted for over half of the total censored during the first 1936 quarter, which is a slight advance over the American proportion of films censored last year.

Cuban Attendance Increase

Attendance at theatres in Havana during 1936 is expected to show an increase over last year, according to a report from the Department of Commerce in Washington. The same increase is predicted in the theatres in the interior of the island.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—A better than average program picture. The plot was rather mixed up, but after seeing it twice I got the hang of it. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 10.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Rosalind Russell, John Boles—Here is a picture worth shouting about considering all the good things said about it. Just seemed to suit the ladies, except the ending. Running time, 74 minutes. —Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

GALLANT DEFENDER: Charles Starrett, Joan Perry—Not being a western lover not prepared to give an opinion, but did a sellout business along with the stage show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Lionel Stander, Fay Wray, Chester Morris, Raymond Walburn—This is a very good picture and will do good business anywhere. Notice I placed Stander ahead of Morris and that is where he belongs. He is the baby they come to see. I also wish to put in a good word for Raymond Walburn. But in my opinion Fay Wray was miscast in this picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 24.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts, Ross Alexander—Excellent. In addition to having a fine cast and a good story, it has that "something" which holds the interest, no doubt, because of the present day interest in big aviation and the interesting shots of what was probably the real China Clipper. Running time, 89 minutes. Played October 25-26.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—You tell us why? For some reason Joe E. Brown draws and yet you go out on the street and find a person who will admit that they like him. His comedy is wholesome and, personally, we like him, but a large percentage of our patrons will say they do not, yet the final gross is above average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—There is one infallible way to know that a picture is not up to standard and that is when a producer takes it out of the percentage bracket and lets it come in flat. The old hack is still working overtime, the backstage shots and the producing of a show. Now I ask you how many times has this been done? It is so old that it has whiskers. We had a "walkathon" of our own on this one and that is the first time they have done that on a Warner musical. And you should have seen the rave the trailer had. The old superlative racket working overtime. Perhaps we will hear of Dick Powell walking out on Warners. That is the kind of a picture it is; the kind that kills a star off.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WHITE ANGEL, THE: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, Donald Woods—Kay Francis portrays the role of Florence Nightingale in so perfect a manner that she seems to be Florence Nightingale herself. While this has not the boy meets girl type of romance, it is a mighty interesting story from start to finish. You learn how modern nursing got its real start and you are very much entertained at the same time. Our patrons responded to this quite liberally. A John Wayne picture, "The Lonely Trail," on the same program helped the gross, which was above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Gaumont British

NINE DAYS A QUEEN: Nova Pilbeam, Cedric Hardwicke—Splendid acting and Nova Pilbeam is charming, but too many beheadings for most people. However, it was agreed that the picture is entertaining and different. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 12-13.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

EXCLUSIVE STORY: Franchot Tone, Madge Evans—We played this one for two days preceding "Ziegfeld" and quite naturally starved on it. But that wasn't the picture's fault. Metro is pretty consistent with good program pictures and they prove it with this one. It's good. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 26-28.—Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Melvyn Douglas—A class picture that is very well done and is highly entertaining. Tale of Andrew Jackson's time, and you know who would be Jackson, no other than the old reliable Lionel. However, I think that we are getting an overdose of the male Shirley Temple, Robert Taylor. Four leads in the last forty days. Of course, the femmes are supposed to be "nuts" about him and that may be the reason.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA: Marx Brothers—Good. Always plenty of laughs when these boys play. This one we played very late and a big snowstorm cut down the patronage, but the picture is all there and more. Running time, ten reels. Played November 1-2.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PICCADILLY JIM: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—Very, very clever comedy drama with a fine cast. First real opportunity Montgomery has had recently. Madge Evans swell girl and easy to look at. Running time, 97 minutes. Played October 11-12. —Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hot Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—An excellent picture and with us a special but the reaction to it was only normal. As a team Gaynor and Taylor should be seen more often. Frankly, though Taylor may have all the girls in other parts looking sideways, with us Gable is still tops. Running time, 105 minutes. Played October 15-17.—Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

TROUBLE FOR TWO: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Are we permitted to speak plainly and quite truthfully? Then this one is pure, undiluted tripe! Such was the opinion of fully seventeen of our eighteen cash customers. The eighteenth, being subject to strokes and feeling one coming on at about the third reel, left in a hurry without expressing his opinion. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 19-21.—Mrs. E. I. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

AND SUDDEN DEATH: Randolph Scott, Frances Drake—Just program but interesting, and possibly will help some wild drivers to slow down. If it does, it has performed a great service. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ANYTHING GOES: Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Charles Ruggles, Arthur Treacher—Thanks to Ruggles, this was Crosby's best picture to date; made to order for our audience. Plenty of laughs, plenty of good, snappy songs, and plenty of what it takes to make 100 per cent entertainment. Ruggles' remarks had the boys in an unroar from start to finish. Treacher also deserves a hand for his excellent work as the English Lord. Running time, 96 minutes. Played October 31.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

ARIZONA RAIDERS: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt —Very good western comedy. Running time, 58 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HEART OF THE WEST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—These Hopalong Cassidy series are well liked here. And they've every reason to be, for they have everything a Western needs. Running time, 62 minutes. Played October 22-24.—Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

POPPY: W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson—This comedian is no comedian in this town. Like Joe E. Brown, we can't find anyone who likes him, but unlike Joe E. Brown, he doesn't draw in spite of the dislike. Hope we are never called upon to use another picture in which he is starred or has the outstanding role. He is swell in support in minor roles when he isn't on so long. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 14-15.—Hay and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SKY PARADE: Jimmy Allen, Katharine DeMille—Pretty good program picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SO RED THE ROSE: Margaret Sullavan, Randolph Scott—This is a good show for any night. Holds interest from start to finish. Thrills and action in the southlands of cotton. History portrayed about the Civil War in Abraham Lincoln days. Running time, nine reels. Played October 30-31.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR LOVE: Eleanore Whitney, Robert Cummings—This one did not get a rise out of my patrons. Went over in a passive way. It is a nice little show. Eleanore Whitney is the best little dancer you ever saw and with her personality will fill in and she may make the grade, but Paramount will have to spend a million to do it, and will they do it?—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR LOVE: Eleanore Whitney, Robert Cummings—Refreshing. Good dancing and good music. For just a program picture, think it pleased our patrons very much. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—A natural. They don't make them any better.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey—Not as good as "Powder Smoke Range," but still better than most westerns and will please any Saturday crowd. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 3.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

M'LISS: Anne Shirley, John Beal—The title of this picture was against it here as no one knew what to expect. These old fashioned yarns are being overworked anyway. One gets tired of them. The older folks liked it but the younger generation think it silly. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 17.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This pair are always good for extra business at the box office and this picture was no exception. Some thought it the best from them to date. As for me I missed the singing of Irene Dunne, who took quite a part in "Roberta." Running time, 103 minutes. Played September 25.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—My patrons let me know how elated they were that this team was together again by staying away, so you know by this time this pair are not box office in my theatre. The picture does pretty well and may get by in some theatres but not here.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

HARVESTER, THE: Alice Brady, Ann Rutherford—A real down-to-earth homespun drama with all the trimmings, barn dances, husking bees, etc. The rich girl trying to steal the honest farmer from his rightful orphan sweetheart, and it all ends beautifully. This was enjoyed more than many much more elaborate dramas and it had the same drawing power at this theatre. The double with this was "I Stand Condemned" from United Artists, which is quite worthwhile if you double it with a comedy drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

LONELY TRAIL, THE: John Wayne, Ann Rutherford—On the same program with "The White Angel," it helped the gross, which was above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CRIME OF DOCTOR FORBES, THE: Gloria Stuart, Robert Kent—This starts in an interesting manner and ends in an interesting, satisfactory manner, but in between for about 10 or 15 minutes it gives the audience a dose of horror such as is seldom seen in pictures, where the doctor is hopelessly injured and begs his colleagues to end his sufferings. It brings up the question whether mercy killing is justified. This picture had no pulling power for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

FIRST BABY: Shirley Deane, Johnny Downs—Good show for any night and played this only one night. Could stand two nights but we play only one night so did not change our policy. Play it. It's better than a lot of the socalled specials. Let the customers know about it. Running time, eight reels. Played October 28.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Very good program picture but not by any means a special as Fox tries to make you believe. The rental on this was so high that it lost money for us. Young and Taylor both do very good acting. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SINS OF MAN: Jean Hersholt, Don Ameche—A show that comes in only once in a while. It has everything that you meet up with in your life. Drama, pathos and music, it is clean entertainment, and, oh boy, how the title killed it. No business whatsoever but we are glad we showed it because it adds cleanliness to the screen. Running time, nine reels. Played October 25.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

I STAND CONDEMNED: Harry Baur, Laurence Olivier—The double bill with this was "The Harvester." It's quite worth while if you double it with a comedy drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Universal

CRASH DONOVAN: Jack Holt, Nan Gray—A short picture, 54 minutes, but crammed with live, peppy action. A real good Jack Holt picture which did a fair average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lombard, Gail Patrick—These three coupled with a very capable cast, all good, make a very fine entertainment and you have here a box office champion. It will do business anywhere and please your patrons 100 per cent.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

NOBODY'S FOOL: Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell—I only saw parts of this. From what little I saw of it and from the reaction of the audience I conclude that this is quite enjoyable and above average of the Edward Everett Horton pictures. Business on this a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

SHOW BOAT: Irene Dunne, Allan Jones, Paul Robeson, Helen Morgan—This is way yonder better as a film production than the average offering, and there are places where it reaches the heights. Irene Dunne dominates the screen whenever she is out front and I would say she does as well in it as she has ever done. Robeson sings "Ole Man River" better than anyone could sing it. Helen Morgan is no doubt the best blues singer anywhere. Jones is great. The picture did not do the business expected.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Short Features

British Instructional Films

IRIS FAMILY, THE: Secrets of Nature Series—A British nature reel of very poor caliber. Running time, nine minutes.—Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Columbia

CAUGHT IN THE ACT: Broadway Comedies—Andy Clyde, he stole the show and left our house in an uproar.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STAR GAZERS: Columbia Tours—A very interesting and instructive reel on the advancements made since the days of Galileo Galilei, discoverer of the planets, to the present time. Beautiful color photography. Running time, one reel.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

WHOOPS, I'M AN INDIAN: Three Stooges—A fair comedy for kids and some grownups. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Geber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Educational

FRESH FROM THE FLEET: Buster West, Tom Patricola—This kind of comedy pleases all classes and we think it is a knockout. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

AN AXE TO GRIND?

Though it hardly seems necessary at this stage of the game, it may as well be said and most emphatically that opinions on this page are set down with no personal bias. Nor do they point out mistakes for any other reason than to call attention to errors that tend to injure the prestige of the industry and by the same token that of the manager.

All of which is said in view of the excitement created by a recent editorial having to do with a piece of advertising that should never have seen the light of day and sponsored by theatremen who unquestionably are acquainted with the accepted tenets of intelligent showmanship. But after reading what we had to say about it the men concerned gave evidence of taking the reproof as a personal matter, which is indeed to be regretted.

This department has long been regarded as the only place in the industry which is essentially the manager's own, where he can look for sympathetic understanding of his problems and which has never yet failed the members in putting up a fair-size battle for an even shake for the man in the field. From the beginning, this commentator has gladly undertaken the responsibility of representing the manager, to act as his mouthpiece, to call attention to his good works, to aid and comfort him in every way possible.

If your Chairman is privileged to applaud the membership when praise is in order, he also reserves the right to feel free to speak up when criticism is indicated.

The only axe this department has to grind is the welfare of the manager and the protection of his rights.

VALUABLE ASSETS

The personal reputation of a manager may have less bearing on the boxoffice take in one spot than in another. He may be the sweetest guy, above reproach and everybody's friend but still remain powerless to stop the grosses from nosediving. And then again, mebbe right around the corner another laddie blessed with fewer of the same virtues may be running a theatre where the rattle of the ticket machine sounds like a flock of machine guns in action. It all depends.

But it happily appears there exist situations where in addition to his ability the man himself counts heavily and where his influence in important places has accomplished much in lifting theatre prestige to profitable heights. Among these situations we are pleased to include the F P-Canadian Capitol Theatre, Regina, in the capable hands of Round Tabler Walt Davis. The story is best told in the following quotes from a letter to headman J. J. Fitzgibbons from Father Murray, far-famed founder of Notre Dame College, nearby the Saskatchewan metropolis. Speaking of the change for the better in local theatre background, Father Murray writes:

". . . I should apply this to Walter Davis particularly. The part he and his wife have played in transforming the atmosphere of the Capitol is really amazing. When they first arrived every one was rather bewildered. The originality and versatility of his ideas, the straight change from the old Main Street routine was a bit disconcerting, though a few predicted 'it couldn't go over in Regina'. . . . They were wrong. It is going over strong. How was it done? Simply that Davis is a burning enthusiast . . . the town caught alight at his fire. . . . Today the finer element in town are distinctly proud of their theatre; take pride in going there, in being seen going there. In the lounge, for the first time, women of social standing move about perfectly at ease.

"The perfect host, dressing the part, speaking the part, being the part, is Walter Davis. . . . Even tempered, always smiling, at all hours of the day he is on the floor receiving his guests. . . . I am not overstating the case. Davis has been fine. I can voice that for Regina. It has meant a lot for the whole community to have such a splendid couple as the Davis' in charge of our amusement center."

Of course one does not say flatly that a man's character determines his standing as a showman. But in Davis' case, as in many others, his personal characteristics definitely can be set down as among the valuable assets of the theatre he operates and the city he serves.

A medal has been made up to be given that patron arrested for slapping a loud-talker into silence at a New York theatre. And now similar honors are suggested for an invention that will bite the fingers of those folks who park gum under the seats.

Long-time Round Tabler accustomed to putting on smart campaigns for his attractions took over a job in a house where giveaways rather than exploitation were featured. Fed up finally, he quit, wiring the news to this desk as follows:

Log Rolling Contest Aids "Come and Get It"

Between halves of the recent Oregon-Washington football game, Jack Proctor and Ted Gamble put on a log rolling contest to advertise "Come and Get It."

The stunt was arranged in a special steel tank placed in midfield and two log rolling experts dressed in colors of the rival teams gave a 15 minute exhibition of the art.

Stunt was sponsored by the Oregonian and national wire and photo services also cooperated.

McLaglen Bust Planted In Fifth Avenue Window

Outstanding among the many fine window displays arranged for the New York Roxy Theatre "Magnificent Brute" engagement, was the display in Udall and Ballou, one of Fifth Avenue's most exclusive jewel shops. Display centered about a bronze bust of Victor McLaglen, modeled by the noted sculptress, Miss Electra Waggoner. Bust was set in a dignified display of expensive jewelry, with only two photographs showing McLaglen posing for Miss Waggoner and an explanatory card to tie up the window to the Roxy showing. Bust was also displayed in the lobby of the theatre during the run.

Strong Campaign Used For "Steps" Premiere

Concurrent with the opening of "In His Steps" at the New York Criterion a serialization of the film appeared in Screen Romances and plugged on newsstands opening day. Special cards were spotted for display throughout the metropolitan district and Liberty also ran a story by the author with credit carried on magazine cover.

Postal Telegraph distributed special "In His Steps" news posters in all branches, and a direct mailing campaign to New York organizations was instituted.

Motion picture editions of the book were gotten out by A. L. Burt and Grosset & Dunlap and window displays were arranged with various stores.

Strong newspaper campaign was also included as put on by Arthur Jeffry, Criterion publicity head in conjunction with Ed Finney's Grand National advertising department.

Many Newspaper Breaks On Chicago "Mohican" Date

Unusual newspaper breaks featured Miles Conconnan's campaign on "The Last of the Mohicans" at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago. The Daily News gave a full page to a special interview with Binnie Barnes. Dorothy Deere in the American ran a feature on scalping. Movienews and Herald Examiner used pictures and fashion material giving the picture full credits and literary editors plugged the film in connection with the original edition of Cooper's novel.

Exploitation stunts were well timed and balanced. Woolworth's drug stores, bookshops and leading department stores all cooperated in a big way with special windows, co-op ads and cut-outs stressing selling angles of the production.

Station WCFL used the electrical transcription four times in advance of showing and gave the film several strong spot plugs naming the starting time and the full cast. A special skit attracted a lot of listeners the day after the opening.

Smart Front Tops 'Brigade' Showing

Termed one of the most attractive fronts ever used at a Broadway house, the display on "Charge of the Light Brigade" at the New York Strand illustrated to left, conceived by B. F. "Dinty" Moore, managing director and constructed by the Sid Nagler Studios is described as follows:

Blue velvet corduroy was used for background and burnished copper sheeting for contrast with the trim. 24-foot title made of thin white wooden letters two inches thick and set against a photomontage ribbon panel blowup of the Charge scene was spread across the arch. Panel on either end was finished off with curled roll of burnished copper sheeting.

In center of front, hand-colored cutout was set back in a burnished copper frame seven feet high and star names above were copper letter cutouts 18 inches high. Enlargements on either side of front were set back in burnished copper oval frames. Crossed behind center frame of front were bamboo lances flying silk pennants and topped with copper and atop the marquee the lances planted in a solid outline. Front moulding was finished off in copper to match trim. Contributing to the general effect was the new under marquee lighting system with special color schemes to highlight the unusual front.

Radio store used gag line in its display "Listen to the big game on the radio; see 'The Big Game' at the Rialto," local shoe stores featured heavy shoes in window displays which included scene stills and theatre lobby displayed a 40x60 enlargement of a "Big Game" tieup with News Flash, Inc., which furnishes a photo news service to thousands of stores all over the country.

CHATHAM AND MARTIN TOP OCTOBER VOTING

Oklahoma Manager Awarded Silver Plaque; Bronze Plaque Goes to Indiana Theatreman

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Another new "first" in the Quigley Awards is announced with the decision of the October Judging Committee that sends the Silver Plaque to Oklahoma, thus giving that state its place in the Quigley line of honor with the others publicised so widely by the accomplishments of theatremen within their borders. The spotlight is now focused upon that sector of the country through the efforts of Manager L. A. Chatham, of the Sooner Theatre, in Norman, whose fine entry on Warner Bros.' "Anthony Adverse" makes him top man in October.

And added lustre for the state of Indiana is bestowed by the award of the Bronze Plaque to Manager Guy Martin, of the Colfax Theatre, in South Bend, Martin clicking with a fine job indeed on RKO Radio's "Swingtime." Both winners, though active in the Quigley Competitions heretofore are first-timers for the Top Ratings. And in addition, Chatham by his honors makes it two months in a row for the Griffith Amusement Co., the September Bronze previously voted to George Limerick, of the same circuit. Martin is identified with the Great States Theatres, represented among the plaque winners last in July, 1935.

The finish in October was close enough to make necessary the selection of three entries for First Mention Certificates and it is of interest to note that these go to theatremen in different countries. Canada is listed by Manager Dan Krendel, of the Tivoli, Toronto, with Universal's "Godfrey"; Scotland by C. R. Young, general manager, Paramount Theatre, in Glasgow, and this country by Manager Dick Warner, of the Bison Theatre, in Shawnee, Oklahoma, and incidentally another high score for that state further listed among the Honorable Mentions.

Newcomers Lead Honorables

Most significant in the development of the Quigley Competitions is the increasing number of new competitors and the percentage of the Awards they are voted monthly. This is especially true in the October Honorable Mention listing, for of the 18 theatremen credited in the 15 entries so rated, over 50 per cent click for the first time. The entire score of Firsts and Honorables, theatres and attractions are detailed on this page.

This interest in new quarters may also indicate that showmen in many widely separated sectors are going hammer-and-tongs after the Plaques that will make them eligible to compete for the 1936 Grand Awards and that Big Trip via United Air Lines to Hollywood, where the presentations are to be held. Every entrant who takes down a Silver or Bronze Plaque in 1936 has an equal chance for the year's honors which, as has been announced, includes the round-trip by air and a week in Hollywood as the guests of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Judges for October were S. Charles Einfeld of Warner Bros., Leon J. Bamberger of RKO Radio, and Lew Preston, general manager, Interboro Circuit.

Chief Sleeps and Eats On Sidewalk for "Mohicans"

Zone publicist Perry Spencer and manager Jerry De Rosa, Loew's Paradise, Bronx, N. Y., secured the services of Chief Bright Fire-Thunder Sky, a full-blooded Mohawk Indian, who for "Last of the Mohicans" camped on the sidewalk day ahead of opening, built a fire, cooked his meals and slept there all night wrapped up in blankets.

Chief visited the schools and lectured on Indian life and historical events, rode subways distributing small scene cards and accompanying photo shows him in front of theatre with some kids.

Perry and Jerry also staged a parade on opening day with 200 kids dressed in Indian play suits, four girls and two men dressed in Indian costume rode bannered bikes around town, Borough President Lyons was made an Indian chief at Borough Hall steps and feathers selling the picture were distributed at local football games.

Scholer's Ingenious Wire Aids in Selling "Dodsworth"

When the Junior Federation of Women's Clubs, numbering 125, had a meeting recently, Joe Scholer, Warner's Ohio Theatre, Sandusky, approached the president seeking permission to say a few words on "Dodsworth." However, since time was limited and the president couldn't see her way clear to allow Joe to have his way, undaunted, he sent a jumbo wire to her reading as follows:

"My message to you is big and of such vast importance that it behooves me to send this big telegram to inform you that Sinclair Lewis' greatest novel, Dodsworth, comes to the Ohio screen as one of the finer films of the year, on Sunday, October 18. No woman who has a husband or expects to have a husband can afford to miss this stirring motion picture. This telegram can be used for four admissions to the Ohio as a prize in any way you see fit."

This ingenious method of securing the attention of his city's leading club women helped Joe to deliver his message as effectively as though he had been given permission to make the personal address.

Costumed Man in Store Helps Brown Sell "Desperado"

William Brown of the RKO Albee Theatre, Providence, R. I., on "The Gay Desperado," effected a furniture store tie-up, and arranged to have a man dressed in costume to appear at intervals at the store. Those who touched him with a copy of the large newspaper ad containing the announcement of the stunt were given guest tickets.

Automobile company put a fleet of 1937 models out on the main streets draped with banners offering "A free ride in the finest car in Providence to see the best picture in Providence." The stunt ran for three days and caused a lot of comment. Brown held a special screening for the press and leading educational and civic organizations which received considerable mention in the papers. As a result, several groups sent special bulletins to their members urging attendance at the Albee.

Bill also secured a great deal of window space in the leading stores and arranged many interior displays. The local radio stations gave the film some strong plugs concentrating on the music.

A last-minute stunt which topped off the campaign was a "Gay Desperado" purse at the Narragansett Race Track. The winning jockey was presented with a Gruen watch.

Bill-Posting Company Ties In on "Rangers"

A natural was put over by Harland Fend, Sherman Theatre, Chillicothe, Ohio, when he played "Texas Rangers" and tied up the local bill-posting concern, making up a five by 12 ad, map taking up lion's share of the space with display and body type underneath reading "If it's a big picture, it's on the poster boards." Billboard itself showed photos of the stars with auto at bottom and "balloon" carrying the conversation of the folks in the car shown looking at the 24-sheet read "That must be a fine picture. I've seen it advertised all over town. Now it's coming to the Sherman Saturday."

Fend reports the stunt as an effective seller, with company planting it on all their boards about town.

"Vote for Suzy" Gag Ties in with Elections

Cashing in on the excitement over the recent elections, Ted De Grazia, Lyric Theatre, Bisbee, Ariz., held a mock voting contest in connection with his opening of "Suzy," planting ballot boxes in his lobby (see photo) inviting patrons to cast their votes for Suzy as their candidate for entertainment.

For his "Unguarded Hour" date, Ted placed large clock mounted on easel in front of his theatre with copy reading: "Beware, the unguarded hour." Teaser was pulled week ahead of opening.

Alert Mexico City Managers Put Public Contacts to Work

Merchants and Manufacturers Found Cooperative On Theatre Tieups

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Much is done in Mexico City to keep the motion picture theatre in the public eye and in addition to the prestige-builders and other institutional angles, the showmen on the other side of the Rio Grande as a whole do not neglect the most advanced methods of forceful exploitation. Exhibitors are not hesitant about advertising heavily.

Newspaper and magazine reviewers give a lot of attention to the screen, lobby and marquee display is considerably employed, merchants and manufacturers are open for tieups. All of which favors the local picture situation which is reported here as a continuation of the Showman's Travelogue series now current in the Round Table. A-MIKE

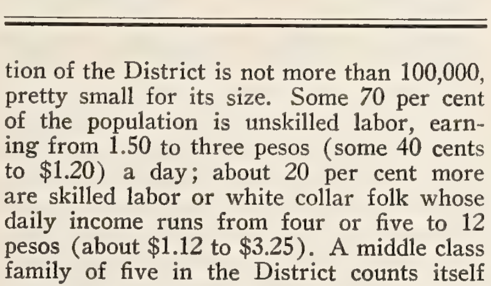
While the Federal District, which contains Mexico City and is the Mexican capital as well as the republic's greatest population center, corresponds in governmental designation to the District of Columbia, its exhibitors have propositions and problems that are, in general, far different from those of their colleagues in Washington site. The Federal District has a population of nearly 1,300,000, contained in the City and several large municipalities. Unlike many capitals of the Americas, it is the country's biggest community and true center. Almost everything, except revolutions, when they break, radiates from this community.

Mexico looks to the Federal District for government, apparel and other fashion, and, to a considerable extent, for its clothing and other manufactured products. Pictures and theatrical fare that go big in the District are generally the criterion for the provinces. But not always. Some smash pictures in the capital hardly pay expenses on many parts of the road, whereas, some mediocre or flop films in the hub of things in Mexico do very well in the lesser towns. The District lacks the placid air so often characteristic of capitals.

It is a mixture of manufacturing, industrial, mercantile, government and social metropolis. Very many of its inhabitants speak English or at least know what the idiom of the United States and the British Empire is all about. It is Mexico's greatest cosmopolitan city and the country's greatest purchasing power community. The latter thing, however, is not as big as it looks.

Of the total population, a shade more than 95 per cent are natives. There aren't many naturalized citizens. Most of these were Spaniards. The American population does not exceed 5,000. The British is less than 1,000. Nevertheless, it is safe to say that many more thousands, Mexicans, Germans, French, Italians, Near Easterners and Russians, in the order named, know English. About 75 per cent of those who know English here are regular cinema patrons, some making a business of attending three or more houses. Cultured Mexicans and other non-native English-speaking residents as well as the Americans and British, constitute audiences at the best first-run houses. Many Near-Easterners, former residents of the United States, where they learned the language, are regular patrons of a neighborhood operated by Fernando Garcia, and seats 3,100, in an old part of the city that features American pictures largely for the benefit of this trade. Many Mexicans attend cinemas largely to expand and improve their English.

The American standard buying population of the District is not more than 100,000, pretty small for its size. Some 70 per cent of the population is unskilled labor, earning from 1.50 to three pesos (some 40 cents to $1.20) a day; about 20 per cent more are skilled labor or white collar folk whose daily income runs from four or five to 12 pesos (about $1.12 to $3.25). A middle class family of five in the District counts itself very lucky if it has a steady income of 250 pesos (about $78) a month. The other 10 per cent, rather a generous estimate, has incomes that vary from fair to good American standards. The plutocratic class is very, very small. There is little if any market for high quality wares or truly beautiful things of an apparel or ornamental nature. Merchants don't handle such articles, because they can't sell them. There is a good market for mediocre things that are not especially pretty, and a steadily improving outlet for wares that are cheap both in quality and price. Exhibitors have this in mind when they fix admittance tariffs.



CARPET WINDOW. On the Bigelow-Sanford carpet tieup made by United Artists for "Dodsworth," date at the New York Rivoli was publicized with window display at Bloomingdale's.

Average living costs in the District are about equal to those that prevailed in American cities in immediate pre-war times (1914-1916). A good table d'hote dinner costs one peso (28 cents); a six-room house in a decent residential area, not too far from downtown, sets you back 100 pesos ($28) a month, unfurnished, water free, light, calefaction and phones extra. Electric services and phones are used generally in the District, though charcoal is still the most popular household fuel. Transportation is generally good. It is supplied by American style trams, buses and for-hire automobiles. No such thing as taxis in Mexico City.

Trams and bus fares are about three cents. Minimum charge for-hire cars, mostly small American makes, is equivalent of 14 cents, and 58 cents to $1.25 per hour. Most cinemas are on the principal tram or bus routes. Only about three per cent of the population owns its cars.

The District has a considerable drawing area, but its benefit to exhibitors is practically nil. Only a few visiting provincials patronize the big town movies. Nevertheless, the steadily increasing American tourist traffic has become a factor in trade for the front line houses. Inauguration of the road between here and the border has upped visitor trade 15 per cent. Downtown houses get very little trade from residents of far suburban districts. Such folk either stay home reading or playing chess, when it is not receiving visitors or calling. These folk do well if they visit a neighborhood once a week, usually on Sunday.

Parking facilities downtown have been somewhat relieved with the establishment of American type parking reserves. Most central zone cinema patrons either go afoot or in for-hire cars, trams or buses. But a great many customers of good grade neighborhoods travel in their machines, for parking is better away from downtown. No cinema has private parking space for customers. Guard corps, who depend on small fixed fees or tips, watch the machines.

Generally, customer population for cinemas has improved. A while ago the movies could only count on from 80,000 to 90,000 steady patrons, 90 per cent of whom came only on Sundays or holidays. In those times exhibitors took their profits on the fete days and kept open other days largely for advertising purposes. Then customers used to spend ordinary days' leisure time shopping around to find which show was best for them to see when their attendance day rolled around.

Today the District's cinema customer power is a shade over 200,000. Mending economic times, tourists and higher wages for the masses are factors in this marked improvement. Yet it's only an extra special smash picture that can command an orchestra top of 56 cents, and even then a fortnight is the maximum for that price. The Cine Regos, a small but class first run which seats 950, of which Mario Castelan is manager, started a 56-cent top for all pictures, on the basis that they would not be exhibited elsewhere in the District within 90 days. It was a short-lived plan; not enough trade to keep it alive in straight film shops showing pictures that were good but not extra. Religious theme pictures are usually the best bets for the 56-cent price. First runs have to keep their top at from 28 to 35 cents for workaday pictures, but can get as much as 42 cents for productions that are out of the ordinary. The swank new Cine Alameda never drops its top below 42 cents, but it has quite an elaborate stage show.

Afternoon Shows Start at Three

Local cinemas have no matinees, in the American sense. Their afternoon shows start at from 3 to 4 o'clock. It is the general custom to reduce the rate from 20 to 33 per cent for the night show, which begins at 7.30. Matinees here are Sunday morning shows, exhibiting pictures that have pretty much made the rounds and those that have a particular appeal to juveniles. Rates for these matinees vary from five cents, for little neighborhoods, to 20 cents at the Alameda. There is only one American style grind house, an 11 to 11 shop, the Cinelandia, a 376-seater, piloted by Arcadio Boytler, French screen writer-actor-director, which exhibits shorts exclusively and has an average orchestra top of 14 cents. The neighborhoods' tariff for ordinary pictures runs from five to 12 cents weekdays, and from ten to 25 cents Sundays and holidays. Occasionally these shops can get a 28-cent top fete days, for an unusual picture.

One of the leading local class neighborhoods is the Cine Balmori, a smart 1,800-seater managed by A. Bueno Urquidi. It is in the swank Colonia Roma, the "legation district," where reside most of the well-to-do foreigners and many wealthy Mexicans. This house gets good patronage throughout the week. While specializing in top grade American productions, several made in Mexico features have had their premier at the Balmori. It has the latest sound equipment.

Another popular downtown neighborhood, which features stage shows, is the Cine Maximo, run by Manuel Cava and accomodating 4,650. It is the largest local cinema and gets good patronage from shoppers. This house is also well equipped for talkies.

Cinemas are closely watched by the municipal government, which levies a 13 per cent tax on their gross, collectable daily immediately after the day's gate has been counted. All theatres are frequently visited by municipal inspectors, who zealously see to it that all of the numerous exhibition and patron safety and comfort rules are obeyed. Among regulations exhibitors must obey is that which demands that each picture must begin exactly at the time specified in the program. If not, a fine is imposed.

There are plenty of other fines for other breaches of the rules. These regulations keep the managers on their toes. Another curious thing about this regulation is that the cinemas must pay the wages of the inspectors, fees that are on a sliding scale in accord with the seating capacity and admission rates of the theatres.

Several exhibitors have taken advantage of the law that went into effect on July 1 which allows them a cut from the 13 to 8 per cent of their daily gross if they sandwich stage shows with their pictures. The object of this law, it is explained, is to afford employment for numerous vaudeville, revue and other players who were jolted out of work by the popularity of the movies.

Censorship is strict, but not as rabid as it was a while ago. The civic government ordered the censors to go much easier and to quit mutilatiing or banning pictures just because they are not in accord with radical sentiments of certain members of the board. The functions of this board are local. National censorship is in charge of the ministry of the interior.

Managers, as a whole, are allowed about as much say and latitude by the owners in running their theatres as are their colleagues north of the Rio Grande. Some owners give their theatres extra special personal supervision, hanging around the house most of the time, attending to this or that detail, and leaving such chores as answering the phone or attending to undesired callers to the manager. A few owners do their own managing; some do not even have assistants in this regard. Others allow the manager to be the boss, albeit within bounds.

There are not a great deal of outside activities by managers down here in the way of ulterior motive membership in lunch clubs. Nevertheless, the majority of managers are alert to the advantages of public contact and of expanding and maintaining good will for their theatres. There is a refreshing amount of friendly competition.

Cinema Is Outstanding Entertainment

Cinemas of the District enjoy a unique spot in that they have no serious competition from any other paid public amusement. In popularity they outclass the legitimate and revue theatres by about 20 to one. For every patron of the bull fights there are more than 100 for the movies.

The overwhelming majority of the public does not pass up the cinema for sport or other diversions. There is no regular horse racing here, there hasn't been any since 1922, until this month, when an American is conducting a flat and steeplechase season. Instead of being alarmed about this meet, picture men are pleased, for rather than offering them damaging competition it promises to bring them more trade as large numbers of movie-minded Americans are bound to be attracted here by the ponies.

There is only one house here directly owned and operated by Americans. It is the Cine Olimpia, a 4,500-seater, built in 1921 by R. P. Jennings, who made a fortune in copper mining, and is directed by his son, William R. Jennings, and managed by John A. Noonan, whose wife, Mrs. Alice J. Noonan, is company treasurer. The house is an independent first runner and is one of the largest here. It enjoys a high grade patronage of well-to-do Mexicans and foreigners.

Pictures Heavily Advertised

Jennings finds that stage shows are not a paying proposition and that straight pictures are far more profitable and much less bother. Pageants in picture houses are generally liked, but he prefers to play pictures only. Assistant Manager M. de la Serna of the Alameda holds that the stage show is a good bet. This theatre was built with stage as well as screen shows in mind. It has the only revolving stage in Mexico. De la Serna avers that the operators are not sorry that they put in regular stage accomodations. Most of the stage performers at the Alameda are Americans.

Theatres are not liberal with passes, not so much because their operators are stingy, but because the municipal government holds them down tightly for the sake of the 13 per cent on gross assessment. Theatres are among the heaviest newspaper, magazine, radio, billboard and nearly every other American form of advertising.

In fact, Mexico City exhibitors depend little upon word of mouth publicity. A long time ago they became convinced that much money must be spent to tell the public about their fare. Various forms of publicity account for from 40 to 60 per cent of the expense budgets of exhibitors, producers and distributors. Of late, during the past two years, radio is being more and more used to sell pictures to the public. Some large cinemas use an hour daily of air time, in 15-minute installments, spread over periods when folk give most attention to ether programs, to plug their establishments and programs.

In adddition to this urging, several cinemas are in a combine that hires a silver-tongued orator to give a half-hour spiel thrice weekly about movies in general and what is offered at their houses in particular. Neon illuminated billboards at strategic points of the city is the latest publicity wrinkle employed by some American distributors and Mexican producers.

"Although our houses are pretty much exclusively second run theatres—only occasionally do we have first runs, and then they are Mexican made pictures. It is necessary for us to spend a great deal of money for advertising, principally in daily and neighborhood newspapers, sports pro-

Walt Davis' Hockey Clock Display

Checking Counter Aids Davis In Selling Dates

From up there at the Capitol, in Regina, Saskatchewan, Walt Davis reports some recent activities on "Rhythm on the Range," using his theatre checking counter four weeks ahead of the date. As the counter does a thriving business, Davis had small tags tied to all packages checked and a few days in advance attached the tags to public phones. And instead of the conventional imprinting, Walt had the tags tied to restaurant menus.

Blotters were distributed in schools. The Davis specialty of mounting ads from motion picture trade journals for lobby display was again employed and Kraft-Phoenix tied to a citywide showing in a 100 windows. Walt finds blotters much in demand and on top pictures imprints one-column ad mats and special copy.

On "Road to Glory," a small tractor was placed on sidewalk in front of the house and Ford dealer cooperated with bannered new car (see photo) carrying line: "Ride in a Ford V8 to the 'Road to Glory.'" Above is reproduced an effective institutional display tied in by Davis to the wide popularity of ice hockey, in his sector. It's called a Hockey Clock and is placed in prominent view in candy shops back of soda fountains, the clock supported by regulation hockey sticks.

"SMALLER AND BETTER?"

ASKS UNIFORM SIZE FOR PRESS BOOKS

Dear Mike:

Now let us get each other straight right from the start. I fully realize that I am just voicing one publicity man's opinion. Hundreds may agree with me while other hundreds may say I'm crazy as hell. And now that we understand each other let's proceed.

In other words I may be conducting a one-man campaign, or a one-man grouch if you wish, but the slogan I am adopting is "Smaller and Better Press Books!" That may sound like a contradictory statement, but that is just what I mean and I'll stick to it.

And what do I mean by "Smaller and Better Press Books?" Well, having been a publicity man for fifteen years I have rambled through quite a lot of press books from the various producing companies and for the past fourteen years and eleven months I have been intending to start a campaign with the above slogan. Show business at its best is estimated to drive an exhibitor crazy in ten years and the poor publicity man should receive a gold medal if he can look out a window without bars across it at the end of five years. In fact the way I've started to ramble off the subject should be proof enough of the last statement.

Criticizes Elaborate Press Books

So let's get down to brass tacks. Press books. Now I'm not that crazy that I intend to try to tell the Howard Dietzs of the industry how to conduct their business. They know their business or they wouldn't be where they are today. But there are a couple of points on which I will argue with them until hell freezes over. First of all, the size of the press book. What a blessing it would be, in fact too much of a blessing to expect, if the advertising managers of all the companies would agree upon a uniform size for every picture. When the publicity men throughout the country could keep them in an orderly pile, or even a file, and not have a stack of old odds and ends that look like the accomplishment of a hard day's work by the street cleaning department.

Then this question arises, at least in my clouded brain: "Why elaborate press books?" On the bigger pictures of every major company there arrives at the office breath-taking manuals in gorgeous colors and the outlay of several thousands of dollars. And what happens? This happens: The publicity man goes through it for the mats he wants on his campaign, clips out the readers he finds best suited to his locality, takes a few hints from the exploitation section and then throws the breath-taking manual decked in gorgeous colors in the waste paper basket. In other words, a butcher doesn't give a damn how good a cow looks, it's the meat inside that his customers want . . . they don't see the cow. Talk about the "New Deal" spending money foolishly, brother that's chicken feed compared to the needless money spent on elaborate press books . . . in my estimation.

And now a word concerning the display advertising mats. That, of course, is a hard proposition, as different localities have different needs but every exhibitor wants ad mats that will sock the public in the eye and some of the other major companies need to take a few lessons from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warner-First National press books on this point.

Then there arises the question of "readers" for newspapers. That also may be a question of locality but in my humble estimation if press books contained more "readers" about the productions and less about what this star likes to eat, this star likes to read, or what this star does to keep the wolf out of her $100,000 home they would be much better. Those personal "readers" may be okay for the big cities but in towns the size of Zanesville, Ohio (40,000), where the newspapers do not have a regular theatre page, I feel that "readers" on the pictures with the stars mentioned attract more attention.

I'm not trying to pick a fight but I do hope I have started an argument. (It must be the Republican in me.). But I protected myself at the start of this article by telling you I realize that mine is just one publicity man's opinion and am not trying to hold myself up as a Moses of the Publicity Men of America. And then again, maybe I am nuts . . . who knows?—B. J. Mechling, Zanesville Theatres, Inc., Zanesville, Ohio.

THEATREMEN REPORT ANNIVERSARY DRIVES

Round Tablers in Canada and on This Side Put Over Campaigns to Stress Theatre Birthdays

It was a good week that Manager Joe Lefave picked for the celebration of the sixteenth anniversary of F P-Canadian's Tivoli Theatre, in Walkerville, Ontario, for the campaign was able to hook onto a local Firemen's Annual Field Day and also to promote a lot of expensive cutouts and displays from leading department stores that celebrated an anniversary the week before Lefave's party.

Top stunt at the firemen's event was a beauty contest viewed by thousands and Joe successfully angled to have the winner and the rest of the contestants appear on the Tivoli stage during anniversary week. This was announced at the field day as were the theatre's current attractions. Then Lefave had the happy thought of a fashion show using the beauties as models so he arranged with various merchants to sponsor the revue and to pay the girls for their services as models. And to cap this, the merchants were also persuaded to pay for the vaudeville acts which had appeared at the field day and the acts were advertised in addition to the fashion review.

Then of course there had to be a cake and the largest bakery gladly cooperated by supplying a 36-inch high confection (see photo) that was said to cost $150. Bakery also put out dozens of small cookies imprinted Tivoli Anniversary in boxes to which were added lucky prizes, passes, etc. The florists were not to be neglected and Lefave says he had his choice of the city's largest which decorated the stage and lobby and presented flowers to the beauty contest winners.

For his front, Joe used 16 large electric candles standing seven feet high and added pennants, streamers, etc., to decorate the marquee. And by altering the department store material described above, other impressive displays were arranged with little cost to the theatre.

Dancing schools were tied in for a Saturday matinee and at the schools attended by the children, Joe was able to secure announcements in class of the coming show. Contests for the kids were also scheduled. Letters to patrons, good newspaper breaks and other profit-bringing angles helped to build up the occasion.

Lefave's Giant Anniversary Cake

Smith's Birthday and Theatre's Made Joint Celebration

The fact that the first anniversary of the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., came on the birthday of W. Clyde Smith, Malco Theatre City Manager, was given much attention in the local press, the dailies running pictures of the Round Tabler with a lot of complimentary publicity on his performance since taking over the houses.

Clyde secured two fine co-op pages of congratulatory ads with top banners and center spaces given over to theatre copy and of course arranged to have a lobby display of a giant cake which was sliced and distributed to patrons on the very eve of night of the opening.

Holmes Ties with Paper To Plug Theatre Block

Local paper in Guelph, Ontario, is hard to crack and to get a fair shake for the second anniversary week at the F P-Canadian Royal Theatre, Manager Chris Holmes cooperated with the daily on a special section to plug the improvements in the street on which the theatre is situated. Merchants in locations affected of course came in on the issue and much publicity was forthcoming, the paper in a special story building up the theatre anniversary and crediting it with making the street one of the most traversed locally.

The "week" was used to inaugurate a community sing at a midnight show with Chris in personal charge and one of his ushers at the piano. Song sheets on this were promoted, the stunt going over well. Children were taken care of at a special matinee, each child receiving an imprinted book cover, back cover carrying copy on coming pictures. Attendance from local colleges was stimulated with letters to all students inviting them to a students' welcome night during the "week" at which time special cards were distributed in leather cases. Cards were good for weekly "rate nights" when students were allowed in at a lower price.

Flowers, decorations, stage lighting, special front, etc., were all employed by Holmes in addition to banners throughout the city, personal letters to patrons, etc.

Swanke's Fourth Theatre's Ninth Publicized by Local Press

The ninth anniversary of the Saenger, in Hope, Ark., was celebrated with Manager Arthur Swanke's fourth year in that spot and in honor of the occasion the publicity had much to do with the Round Tabler's success in his situation. In a story nearly a column long, local paper detailed Swanke's history in show business and what he had accomplished in Hope.

In addition, a page co-op was run, banner copy congratulating Arthur on his fourth anniversary. Manager's photo was included and all merchants' copy was also highly congratulatory.

ADMEN UTILIZE VARIOUS SLANTS

The presentations of newspaper ads on the following page featuring art, type and cartoon include interesting treatments of the subject matter involved and the men responsible are credited as follows:

The RKO Denver Orpheum display was created by Ted Halmi, the Longmont, Colo., "Sleeper" ad by Mark Berkhimer and the "Adverse" Boston Paramount and Fenway layout by Paul Levi. The three small ads in the center are the work of Hank Harold, Warner Cleveland Theatres art head, and Hank is also responsible for the "Swing Time" flash at bottom right.

George Baker planted the Mayor's proclamation that inaugurated Amusement Week in Kansas City to celebrate the Electric Theatre's 30th anniversary and Myron Shellman, operator of the Raymond, Pasadena, Cal., found effective the institutional ad to publicize his coming attractions.

The Soglow ad on "Romeo and Juliet" was arranged by Si Seadler, Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer advertising manager, the two-column flash at top right for the Palomar, Seattle, by Jack Sampson, Sterling Theatres ad chief, and the smart "Adverse" ad for the Earle is the work of Frank La Falce, Warner's Washington ad director.

Promotes "Adverse" Heralds At Cleveland Exposition

A neat break was secured by publicist Mort Goodman and manager Ed Miller of Warner's Hipp, Cleveland when they promoted local lithograph company which had space at the Great Lakes Exposition to turn out thousands of "Adverse" heralds (see photo) which were distributed to onlookers.

Letters were mailed to special list of outstanding club women, civic leaders, clergy, educators, etc., special display of scene stills was planted in the cinema club exhibit at the exposition and book marks were distributed to all lending libraries. One of the highlights of the campaign was gratis interview of radio announcer with Sid Dannenberg, zone publicist, who managed to get in several nice plugs for the picture.

HERE IS A "SLEEPER"!!

A "Sleeper," as pertains to a picture, means one that has a good cast, good story and all other elements that go into making a good picture; but—the picture looks as though it would be just another picture—until it is previewed—then the critics begin to rave. Such a picture was "It Happened One Night."

And Now—Here's Another "PIGSKIN PARADE"

ELECTRIC THEATER'S 30TH ANNIVERSARY

CITY OF KANSAS CITY, KANSAS

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER

DON C. McCOMBS, MAYOR

October 15, 1936.

PROCLAMATION

To the Public:

Clean, wholesome amusement and entertainment is necessary to be had in every community. Thirty years ago the Electric Theatre of this city was first opened for business. It is the oldest institution of its kind in the city. It has always maintained a high standard of entertainment, and is to be congratulated for its service and the character of its productions.

To call attention to this theatre's long record of furnishing clean, wholesome entertainment in this city, in my capacity as Mayor, I hereby proclaim the week of October 18 - 25 as amusement week in Kansas City, Kansas as a part of the celebration of this remarkable record.

Don C. McCombs
MAYOR.

A facsimile of a proclamation declaration this week as Amusement week in Kansas City Kansas, which has been issued by Mayor Don C. McCombs, is shown above. Special designation of the week is in accord with the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Electric theater, which was established on its present site in 1906 by E. J. Grubel, Frank Grubel and A. F. Baker.

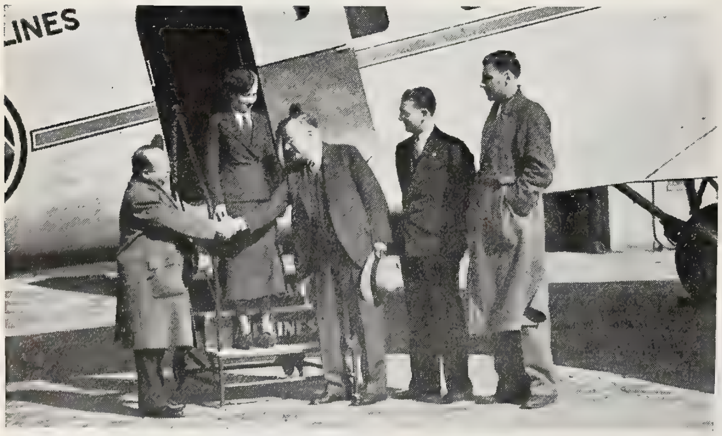
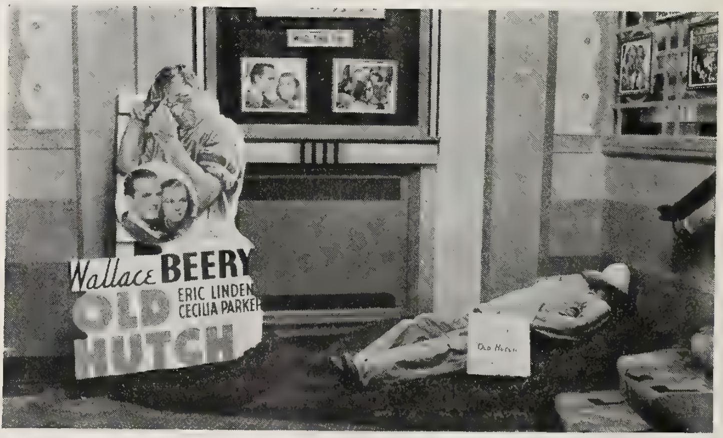
CLEVER SETPIECE. The familiar cartoon that identified the advertising on the long and various runs of "Three Men on a Horse" stage play was adapted as above in advance of the picture date at the Cleveland Hipp by Manager Eddie Miller.

PATIO EXHIBIT. In the famed extensive patio at the Egyptian, in Hollywood, Manager Dave Fred and J. E. Poynter, publicist, stage interesting exhibit of native cactus and pottery. Much interest is reported in the show by theatre patrons.

PUPPET REVUE. Another extra attraction in the patio of the Hollywood Egyptian stage by Dave Fred and J. E. Poynter was a marionette puppet show featured matinees and nights during the recent Los Angeles American Legion convention.



BACHELOR GOES WEST. That's Milt Harris (left), Loew's Cleveland Theatres publicity head, bidding farewell to local bachelor selected to be guest of Paramount studios and Mae West in national contest on "Go West, Young Man."



LOBBY-RESTER. Dummy to represent the favorite position of "Old Hutch," reclining on grass mat, was placed in the lobby of the Lemoine, Macomb, Ill., by Manager John Ewing as a buildup in advance of the picture of that name.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

manages the Lexington Theatre in Chicago, Ill., and since joining the club we haven't heard from him. That's not right, George, remember that old obligation to keep us posted so that we may detail your activities for the benefit of your brother members. Here's hoping this will serve as a gentle reminder to keep in touch.

manages the Regent Theatre in Kearny, N. J., started in RKO Proctors, Newark, as part-time usher; after working there a while was transferred to the Regent as chief of service. Within a year was promoted to assistant manager and in July of this year made manager. RKO is the only circuit Norman has worked for.

is the assistant manager of the Central Theatre, New York City, one of the Brandt Theatres, and certainly with him but a stone's throw from our office, we can expect a call real soon. Remember, George signing the application blank is just the beginning; we shall expect to hear from you.

is the publicist at the State Theatre, Watertown, S. D., and with so many loyal and active members in his city to spur him on to some lively competition, we know reports will be forthcoming shortly. We are depending on you, Lane, so don't disappoint us.

is another Famous Players man to join the ranks from Cobourg, Ontario, Canada, where he is managing the Capitol Theatre. James has never worked for any other circuit, having recently been at the Tivoli in Kingston, from which point he was transferred. Starting out as paying teller at a bank, Jim took a job as assistant under Ernie Smithies at the Capitol in Kingston before moving to the Tivoli.

manages the Forest Theatre in Cincinnati, Ohio, for Forland, Inc., and we are hopeful that when he reads of the activities of his brother showmen in Cincinnati he will be sufficiently roused to send along some contributions of his own for publication in our pages.

out in Ouray, Col., manages the Uray Theatre there, and since he is the first member that we have enrolled from that city, the responsibility of keeping us informed of what's what in that sector will rest on Will's broad shoulders. Can we depend on you?

is the owner of the American Theatre in Erie, Pa., and we bid her welcome to our midst. We don't hear from as many of our members of the fairer sex as we should like to, so we extend a more than cordial greeting with the wish that the American shall be duly mentioned in our pages.

On Monday, October 26, James Earl Delaney to Audrey Malvery. Delaney is skipper of the Delaney Theatre in Gananoque, Ont., Canada.

is advertising manager and operator of the Grand Theatre, Rocky Ford, Colo., for J. J. Goodstein, and started as helper in the sign shop of the Palm and Rialto Theatres in Pueblo, worked there six months and was made head artist. Later we find Kirby traveling for a circuit to Alamosa, Loveland and Rocky Ford painting fronts. Kirby was then transferred to Alamosa as assistant manager and after moving to a few other spots, returned to Colorado and started to work for Goodstein.

grams and billboards, because it is impossible to keep going by depending upon patrons to induce others to come to our cinemas," explains Isaac Capon, president of Cines Modernos, S. A., which operates five neighborhoods that have a combined seatage of 7,185. He is the only Nordic foreigner to head a neighborhood chain here.

Exhibitors have no complaint about the amount of attention given their theatres and wares by newspaper and magazine movie reviewers. These men and women have quite a following, though their prints don't feature them to any considerable extent. This attention is swell publicity for exhibitors.

Exhibitors Advertise Heavily

Exploitation is becoming an advanced art down here. Street ballys in the form of attention-commanding floats and parades of costumed folk (it's pretty hard to get an okay for ballys of uniformed people owing to the law that forbids others than service members and some messengers to wear uniforms) are much used. Lobby and marquee exploitation is also considerably employed, some of which compares favorably with like stunts north of the Rio Grande. Some manufacturers and merchants are alive to the mutual benefits of tieups.

"We have to advertise heavily and to do much expensive exploitation, that cuts deeply into our profits, but if we try to save that money, well, we don't have any profits, for the public has to be told and told," says Jose Echeverria, owner of the Cine Palacio, the 2,307-seater first run house that heads one of the four circuits that rather monopolize the local movie situation.

Theatres Are Well Equipped

Most cinemas go in extensively for street and lobby ballyhoos. They occasionally employ such newspaper tieups as scrambled word puzzles and a little merchant show window exploitation, but not nearly as much as do Americans. Straight ads and serialized stories are used mostly in newspaper publicity. The prints have movie critics but they are not names and give much attention to picture copy, both native and Hollywood.

Cinemas here, excepting a few in slum districts, are modern, well equipped with the latest American appliances, well ventilated and clean. The health department strictly enforces its rules. Safety regulations are also in good working order.

In the American sense, Mexico City is not a good show town. But there is enough business to keep 66 cinemas going every day in the week. Three more cinemas are to open between now and fall.

B & K CHICAGO BUYS STATE-LAKE BUILDING

Circuit To Take Over Theatre When Jones, Linick & Schaefer Lease Expires

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

The twelve story State-Lake building at the southwest corner of State and Lake streets, the leasehold, and the 2,700 seat State-Lake theatre and equipment have just been purchased by Balaban & Katz for an indicated $650,000. Title was conveyed by State-Lake Building Corporation, stock of which is held by former bondholders, to One Ninety North State Street, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Balaban & Katz.

The transaction, according to B. & K. executives, will not have any immediate effect on the Loop theatrical situation, as Jones, Linick & Schaefer have a lease on the State-Lake theatre with six months yet to run. When it expires next May, it is understood that Balaban & Katz will take over operation of the big playhouse.

The State-Lake building, fronting 180 feet on State and 160 on Lake, was erected in 1918 on land owned by the Marshall Field estate. The long term ground lease calls for $95,000 rental this year. Beginning Aug. 1, 1937, it will be $100,000 annually until July 31, 1947. For the next 20 years it will be $110,000. From Aug. 1, 1967, until the end of the term, July 31, 2016, the annual rental will be $120,000.

The State-Lake theatre has had a varied career. For several years it housed vaudeville booked by the Orpheum Circuit, the same interests which then operated other local vaudeville theatres. For the last few years it has been operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, with pictures.

The State-Lake building has been managed for several years by Ben L. Lindheimer, who will continue for the new owners.

In the reorganization plan approved in June, 1935, it was provided that the bondholders would get one share of stock for each $100 first mortgage bond, giving them 90 per cent of the 15,970 shares.

The various departments of Balaban & Katz theatres will move their offices to the State-Lake building from the Chicago theatre building and the Loop-End structure. Several floors will be refurnished to house them.

Harry Lotz, Chicago branch manager for United Artists, died unexpectedly early Sunday at St. Francis hotel in Evanston from a heart attack. Mr. Lotz was at the office on Saturday afternoon when he first took ill.

Mr. Lotz had been in charge of the Chicago office for the last 13 months, coming here from Milwaukee.

Burial will take place in Buffalo, N. Y., his former home.

Surviving Mr. Lotz are his widow and mother and a son, Harry, Jr., who is on the Grand National sales force here.

New securities provided for in the plan for reorganization proceedings for Marks Bros. Theatres, Inc., are now ready for distribution. The plan, which has been approved by the United States district court, affects three of Chicago's large motion picture theatres, the Marbro, Granada and Broadway Strand.

Holders of old first mortgage securities will be entitled to receive in exchange therefor new first mortgage bonds in equal amounts secured by these properties. Holders of Marks Bros. Theatre Properties general mortgage bonds will be entitled to receive in exchange for each $100 face amount of such securities the sum of $7.50 in cash and one share of preferred stock of Midcity Theatres, Inc., as owner of all the capital stock of the new theatre companies organized under the plan.

Holders of old convertible preference stock of Marks Bros. Theatres, Inc., will be entitled to receive the sum of $2 in cash in exchange for each share of such stock. Interest on all new first mortgage bonds from July 1, 1935, will be paid at the time these securities are exchanged. The plan of reorganization provides that all securities involved must be exchanged prior to November 6, 1938.

The reorganization of Marks Bros. Theatres, Inc., and its properties was worked out by the first mortgage bond protective committee, of which Dayton Keith is chairman; the Marks Bros. theatre properties general mortgage bonds protective committee, of which Benjamin L. Dahl is chairman; the convertible preference stock of Marks Bros. Theatres, Inc., protective committee, of which I. J. Berkson is chairman, and Morris G. Leonard, as trustee of the debtor, Marks Bros. Theatres, Inc.

"Let's Go to the Movies" is the name of a series of full page institutional advertisements appearing in Chicago newspapers in an effort to build up reader interest in the motion picture sections. The first of these advertisements appeared in the Chicago Evening American last week. All local newspapers with the exception of the Chicago Tribune have been increasing their motion picture space considerably the last few months. New features from Hollywood and columns of film news prepared by staff writers here, have been added, enlarging the advertising space.

All local theatre circuits and other film organizations have selected their candidates for the "Queen Contest" to be held at the second Annual CAPA Ball, on Wednesday evening, November 25th.

A new theatre to be named the Park will be erected by Balaban & Katz in La Grange. Details will be forthcoming within a few weeks, say B & K executives.

The first issue of The Barker, official monthly publication of the Variety Clubs of America, was published this week by the recently-formed Barker Publishing Company of Columbus, Ohio. The issue contains 24 pages, set three columns to the page. Todd Raper, until recently connected with the Columbus Dispatch theatre department, is editor.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Dear Herald:

You should see South Dakota. No, you shouldn't, either. If you should see that part of South Dakota out near the Missouri river you would wonder why the Government took it away from the Indians. We have been traveling the middle western part of the state for a week and our wonder is how the Sioux ever lived out there unless the fishing was good in the Missouri.

We passed any number of farms that haven't grown a crop in five years (or so we were told) and on which there wasn't a sign of vegetation of any kind except Russian thistles, and they are cutting these for hay.

The strange part of it is that those who are left are optimistic, and, like the western Kansas folk, they say, "Oh, well, we are going to have a good crop next year." And the theatres are doing a fair business.

John W. Payne has taken over the theatre at Hurley and seems to be going after the business in a business like manner.

John has redecorated the place and put on a new front and has started out to give the Hurley folks some real entertainment, and the HERALD is going to help him.

Frank J. Simek operates the Royal theatre at Scotland. We didn't ask Frank whether he came from Paris or Missouri, as it wasn't any of our business, but we did tell Frank he ought to have the HERALD, and it didn't take us long to convince him.

If you should ever go to Geddes be sure to go to the Temple theatre and meet A. Florey, the manager. You will not only meet a mighty fine chap, but you will no doubt see a good show, as he aims to show nothing but the best, and the Temple is a very good place to spend an evening.

O. W. Anderson and his Lyric theatre are two pretty good reasons why you should make it a point to visit Platte. We don't know where they got the name Platte, most likely from the Platte river in Nebraska, and the Platte very often goes dry. We don't know whether O. W. goes dry or not, but we do know that he never goes without the HERALD, and that's a pretty good sign that he knows a good thing when he sees it.

Do you know Ernie Frace? Well, that's just too bad, for he stands ace high with exhibitors. Ernie sells the boys of South Dakota RKO service, and maybe that's why the boys are doing a good business. Ernie was going to call on the exhibitors and took us along with him. And what a dinner Mrs. Frace gave us in Sioux Falls. Bill Barker of Columbia at Omaha was there, too.

F. J. Aszmus, who operates the Ritz theatre at Stickney, is also one of South Dakota's uptodate farmers. When he is not billing the show he is working on his farm about a mile and a half out of town. He and Mrs. Aszmus were stacking some kind of fodder for his stock when we called. They have recently taken over the Ritz and Mrs. Aszmus said she read our stuff regularly and was surprised to find that we were not as dizzy as she had us pictured.

She got us up a dinner with roast pheasants 'n' everything and it was some dinner, too. Gosh, we had a dandy time with those folks.

J. L. Anderson of Plankinton named his theatre "An June." A stands for Anderson and J stands for June, his daughter, and when a theatre man names his theatre after his daughter it is conclusive evidence that he thinks that daughter is about right, and if you would see her you'd think so, too. J. L. is a HERALD fan and the HERALD is strong for J. L. also, which makes it mutual.

Letcher is on the South Dakota map just like Sioux Falls, Aberdeen, Mitchell and some more of the towns. Letcher don't have any street cars, but she does have the Letcher theatre, which is operated by R. H. Brewer. R. H. is a brewer, but he don't brew anything but first-class entertainment at the Letcher theatre. R. H. is also an ardent reader of the HERALD.

The other night we stayed in Wessington Springs and then called on S. M. Burton of the Rialto theatre. S. M. has a habit of reading the HERALD and he asked us to renew his subscription, which we did.

The Princess theatre at Miller, which is operated by A. D. FitzGerald, is the pride of South Dakota. We had a nice visit with A. D. and also with the Missus. It doesn't make any difference if A. D. didn't come from Bohemia, he is all right, anyway.

As we remember it, Highmore is where they broadcast the drought and grasshoppers of this region some time ago, but we found that T. H. Tomter of the Grand theatre don't pay much attention to drought and grasshoppers; he goes right ahead.

Redfield, South Dakota

If one could judge from the automobiles parked in this town tonight it would be hard to believe, as one fellow told us, that over half of the people are on relief.

The last time we visited Redfield Claude Hansen was operating the theatre here, but we understand that Claude is now furnishing the people of Bismarck, N. D., as good shows as they could get on Broadway.

In the present operator of Redfield's favorite theatre (we believe his name is Blum—he was away) the city has a man who knows how to provide good entertainment, I was told.

L. H. Altfillich operates the Clark theatre at Clark, and as far as we could learn, the people of Clark are pretty well satisfied with L. H. and the entertainment he is furnishing at the Clark theatre.

Bryant has a theatre operator by the name of H. P. Borah, but you mustn't get him confused with the Borah of Idaho. H. P. says that he has no desire to go to Washington as long as he can get Motion Picture Herald to aid him in his selection of pictures for his community.

Had we have known that Bill Klein of the Paradise theatre at Howard was laying for us with a butcherknife we would have told Ernie Frace to drive right on through the town, but we didn't know it. It seems that when we called there some years ago Bill was at home and we called him up and wanted him to come down to the theatre, but Bill thought we were some kind of a peddler and he wouldn't come. Our thought was that he had been out with the boys the night before and was out of humor. So when we reported his theatre we didn't give it or Bill a very flattering reputation. We had forgotten all about this until he called our attention to it. We don't know what we said, but Bill said we said aplenty. After a couple of rounds (of buttermilk) he offered to bury the hatchet and renew his subscription to the HERALD. The offer was accepted. Bill is a mighty swell fellow, even if he won't take the third drink of buttermilk (unless there is foam on it).

E. D. Nash operates the Lowell theatre at Canton. Whenever you meet a theatreman who has been a former film salesman it is pretty good business to keep both eyes on him.

E. D. is red headed and we never like to say anything that a red headed man can take exception to, so we won't except to say that it is our judgment that he is 100 per cent, but maybe that's because E. D. gave us a check to have us send him the HERALD.

You don't know W. S. Bogart of the Orpheum theatre at Rock Valley, Iowa, do you? You ought to know him. We called there recently and had a very delightful visit with him and Mrs. Bogart. W. S. mixed up something with ice in it and presently he said, "Say, Colonel, here's a check. Don't let my subscription to the HERALD expire."

Roy E. Sefert asked us to have the HERALD sent to his address at Ainsworth, Nebraska. Roy recently opened a new theatre at Ainsworth.

We passed through Oshkosh, Nebraska, some time ago but it was nearly dark and we wanted to get to Ogallala and so failed to call on Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Jensen of the Silver Hill theatre. We are ashamed of that but they have forgiven us, for they have just asked us to renew their subscription.

■ The city of Lock Haven, Pa., was in the heart of the flood area last spring, and the Roxy, owned and operated by Oscar Stiefel, was submerged up to its marquee soffit, as the accompanying photograph shows. The interior was beyond mere superficial repair, so general remodeling followed soon after the waters had receded—with the result pictured above. The original walls were extended 48 feet to increase the seating capacity to 900. The present decorative treatment features large murals, which almost cover the side walls. They represent Music and Dancing. The color scheme is rust, blue and pink. A marquee of one of the newer shapes and styles of lettering was installed, and the interior retreated throughout.

Theatre Equipment Sales Up 30% in 1936

THE EXTENT to which American theatres have been overcoming the ravages of the lean years and also the toll of obsolescence is indicated by authoritative reports on equipment sales throughout the country during the first eight months of 1936. They definitely show that the rise in sales over those for the same period of 1935 reaches an average for all sections of nearly 30%.

From figures available, it is believed that the 1936 total is thus far substantially under sales for a comparable period in 1930, but the latter belong to the peak years of the later twenties, and the construction of new theatres had not yet broken its stride.

New seating reached an unusually high level this year. Nevertheless it failed to outdistance projector replacements. Reports on the latter, however, include projector parts as well as entirely new mechanisms and bases. Installation of new seating was not only 55% greater this year than last, but apparently exceeded its 1930 sales by fully as much. Walter E. Green, president of the National Theatre Supply Company, states that in the experience of his company, it did.

Indicating the rate at which the medium-sized and smaller theatres are changing their projection light sources directly as a result of the introduction of the suprex arc, are reports showing that during the first eight months of this year, the purchases of projection lamps for use with suprex carbons were double those of low-intensity and hi-lo combined. While low-intensity lamp sales were somewhat greater in 1936 than in 1935, they were almost 85% under those of 1930.

New carpeting was another one of the more important items in theatre purchases this year. Sales were 74% greater than in 1935, substantially topping the 1936 figures for seating. However, carpet purchases were only 2% greater than in 1930, as compared with 56% for seating.

Sees Water Shortage Due to Air-Conditioning

AN INTERESTING feature of the annual convention of the League of California Municipalities, held recently at Santa Monica, was an address before the Health Officers' Section by Walter M. Dickie, M.D., State Director of Public Health, who said that air conditioning of stores, factories, theatres, office buildings and homes is introducing not only physiological questions but, in a more common place way, problems regarding the systems of water supply and drainage.

"The enormous volumes of water required by the more popular methods of air-conditioning will tax water systems because no water system was designed with that demand in mind," he declared. "The same comment pertains to the sewer systems and sewage treatment works. In some places, the expedient is being used of draining the cooling water into drainage wells. Two problems to be studied are the influence of underground temperature in the vicinity and also, the prospect that plumbing drainage may be attached to the same drainage system.

"In a few other places another expedient is to pump the cooling water back into the water system. Air cooling using large quantities of water calls for cheap, abundant water supply. The effect of the added volumes of water upon the sewage systems and treatment plants should be given consideration."

Expansions Bring New Construction in Illinois

MANY OF THE smaller Illinois circuits are now expanding their operations. Among them are Frisina and Kerasotes at Springfield, Hainline at Macomb, Alger at LaSalle and Fred Anderson at Morris.

The Frisina Circuit which at present numbers 26 theatres in the St. Louis film territory, has just completed a new theatre at Keokuk, Ia. J. B. Giachetto, general manager for Frisina Amusement Company, reports a combination had been effected in Springfield between Frisina and Leo Burnstine, who operates the Empress and Capitol theatres there. The present Capitol theatre will be torn down and a new 1,400-seat house will be built on its site at a cost of $100,000. The Empress theatre will be remodeled, enlarging its seating capacity to about 700, at a cost of $50,000. The Empress is expected to be completed by January 1st.

The Kerasotes Brothers, who recently negotiated a lease for the theatre in Havana, Ill., are also building a new house in Peoria. A. L. Hainline, who operates three theatres in Macomb, and who also is the head of Central Illinois Theatres, has taken over the Mt. Sterling and Augusta.

E. E. Alger, of the Alger Theatre circuit, and operating head of the LaSalle and Peru theatres, in a combination with Great States, has just reopened the Majestic in LaSalle, after extensive remodeling and complete rebuilding of the front of the theatre at a cost of $43,000.

Fred Anderson's circuit in northern Illinois towns, now numbers twelve houses with his recent acquisition of the Fargo, Geneva and the Fargo, Sycamore and the Arcade, St. Charles. He is now building a new theatre at Manteno Illinois which, when completed, will have 600 seats and will cost $20,000.

Business Men Finance New Theatre for Town

BUSINESS MEN of Omro, Wis., have gone into the theatre business as a means of giving local citizens modern theatre accommodations at home. Bonds have been issued to finance a new theater building under the sponsorship of the Omro Independent Business Men's Association.

The size of the building will be 50 by 100 feet, with the theater auditorium measuring 48 by 66 feet. The seating capacity will be 500. The basement, which will house the heating and ventilating systems, will also have a room for community meetings.

The High School Annex where the business men's association has been showing films, has been renamed the Annex theatre.

RCA Photophone Expanding Facilities

THE RISE during the past year in the sale of sound equipment is given as the reason for the establishment of a new and larger manufacturing plant in Indianapolis. Announcement of the move was made by Edwin M. Hartley, RCA Photophone Division head.

"Establishment of the new plant has been under consideration for more than a year," Mr. Hartley said. "The company's manufacturing facilities in Camden, N. J., have been greatly taxed this year by a 100% increase in theatre installations of Photophone sound reproducers. The signing of sound recording license agreements recently, with several major motion picture producing companies, including Twentieth Century-Fox, Columbia Pictures and Warner Brothers has also been a large factor in the expansion move."

The new factory provides more than 165,000 square feet of space, air-conditioned throughout, which will be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of sound equipment, including public address and stage sound re-enforcement apparatus.

Building in St. Louis Area at Boom Level

THE BIGGEST theatre building boom since the pre-depression days is on in the St. Louis film trade territory this year. Projects actually completed, under construction or definitely announced have been running 200% ahead of 1935.

Architects, contractors and real estate men have been very active in promoting new theatrical ventures and on some occasions they induced persons from outside the industry to finance new projects.

In St. Louis proper 22 new projects have been brought forth. Some of these may not materialize, but they are potentials. Collectively these houses would have 21,750 seats and cost about $3,085,000. In 1935 there were seven new projects announced for St. Louis. Those houses were to seat 6,600 persons and cost $853,000.

Outside of St. Louis the same situation prevails. In 1936 to date, seventeen new houses seating 8,370 persons and costing about $454,000 have been announced. Many have already been completed and are now in operation. In 1935 in the same territory, six theatres with 3,700 seats and costing $370,000 were announced. Thus the entire St. Louis territory, both in the city proper and elsewhere in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, has a 1936 theatre building program that is to include 39 theatres seating 30,120 persons and costing $3,539,000. The 1935 program included a total of 13 theatres with 10,300 seats and costing $1,223,000.

Oklahoma Circuit Begins Building Program

RAZING OF structures at 22 North Robinson avenue in Oklahoma City, Okla., to make way for construction of a $50,000 theater has been started by T. B. Noble, president of Conhuskers Theaters, Inc., who also has announced plans to build an undetermined number of neighborhood houses in Oklahoma City.

The Conhuskers circuit's entrance into the Oklahoma City field will produce direct competition for Standard Theaters, Inc., operator of most of the downtown and neighborhood houses in Oklahoma City.

The circuit's downtown theater, tentatively named the Arcadia, will seat 1,200 persons and will be of stadium type.

Theatre to Have Bar, Nursery, Escalators

COCKTAILS AND CRADLES will be features of Chicago's newest cinema, the Walton, a $250,000 motion picture theatre to be built on the near North Side by the Essaness Theatres Corporation. A bar and a nursery are to be installed in the new theatre, according to plans by Newhouse & Bernham, the architects.

Another innovation in the new Walton will be escalators for patrons using the mezzanine and balcony. The house will be completely air-conditioned. Work is scheduled to start within sixty days with the expectation of having the new Walton ready for films by June 1st. It will cost a reported $250,000 and will have 1,600 seats.

The L-shaped site, fronting 90 feet on Rush street, has a depth of 200 feet with an additional 75 feet of frontage on Walton.

New Theatres on Way In All Parts of Nation

NO GENERAL division of the country is absent in reports of the last few weeks on new theatre projects. Plans for new construction and building just begun are reported in several separate stories covering certain important territories. The projects listed below, selected from general reports, indicate the national character of the new construction.

P. F. Panzice, of New Orleans, has purchased a lot and will build a new theatre in that city.

Ellis Lazear has plans for a 1,200 seater at Devon and Western Avenues, Chicago. George N. and Harold M. Golles, operators of the Midway and Ray theatres in Chicago, have leased property on East 63rd Street where they will build an 800-seat house.

The Cherokee Amusement Company, a Toney Sudekum enterprise, has started construction of a new 500-seater in Spruce Pine, N. C.

The Palmer Park Theatre Company has arranged for the construction of a 1500-seat theatre in Detroit, to be opened next March with Raymond Schreiber as Manager.

L. W. Goodman, of Cumberland, is building a theatre in Cambridge, Md.

The Southern Amusement Company of Lake Charles, La., will build a new house at Abbeyville, La.

The Comerford Amusement Company plans the construction next year of three theatres at Wilkes-Barre, Pa. A 2,400 seater, the largest of the Comerford Circuit, will be built in Public Square.

Bailey Brothers are proceeding with the construction of two theatres in New Haven, Conn. One will be a 1,000 seater in the Westville village section, and another will be a 944-seat house in Hamden.

Roth Amusement Enterprise will shortly begin construction of a theatre in Chatham, N. J.

Lewis Pearlman, head of a circuit of Philadelphia neighborhood theatres, is planning the erection of a 1,000-seat house on Church Lane in Yeadon Boro.

T. B. Nobel, Colorado, circuit operator, has leased a site for a new theatre in Oklahoma City. Sam Caporal, owner of the Yale in Oklahoma City, has plans for a new theatre there. Pat McGee, general supervisor of Standard Theatres, Inc., has approved plans for another new house in Oklahoma City.

Uhlrinch & Davis are building a 1,200-seat at Norwood, Ohio, and are also building a theatre at Ripley, W. Va.

The first theatre in St. Matthews, S. C., is being built in West Bridge Street.

Ferd Midelburg, independent operator, is erecting a 1,000-seat house at Logan, W. Va.

The Palace Realty Company has begun work on a negro theatre in South Dallas, Tex., to seat 600 persons. It is to be called the Century.

Max Aronson, president of the Cedar Garrison Corporation, is building a 1,000 seat, one-floor house on Cedar Lane in Teaneck, N. J.

A. E. Lichtman, of Lichtman Theatres, Washington, D. C., has announced plans for the construction of two negro houses in Richmond, Va. One will be a 400-seater, and the other will seat 600 persons.

Lens Company Begins New Research Program

A PROGRAM of investigation of the chemistry and physics of glass surfaces has been started at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company of Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. Frank L. Jones will be in charge of the investigations. An enlarged staff will continue the work on plant problems at the new research laboratory of the company in Rochester.

Law Affecting Your Right To Remove Your Equipment

● What the theatre operator should know about the law of legal fixtures so that he may protect himself when leasing or selling a property

By LEO T. PARKER

A GREAT DEAL of litigation has arisen in the past with respect to the legal right of theatre owners, operators, lessees, and sellers of theatre buildings, to remove equipment from theatre buildings under various circumstances. For instance, a theatre operator may lease a theatre building and, during the period of the occupancy of such building, he may install different kinds of equipment such as a pipe organ, air-conditioning systems, new seats, electrical apparatus, suction and ordinary fans, etc. After expiration of the lease contract the theatre operator may decide to remove from the building certain of the above mentioned items only to discover that the landlord objects.

In other instances, the owner of a theatre building may meet with legal controversy when he decides to remove from such building certain equipment after he sells the premises, or after a delinquent mortgage is foreclosed.

Therefore, in order that readers may with dependability decide exactly what kind of equipment may be legally removed, it is the purpose of this article to review important higher court cases decided on the subject during the past few months. And although variations of the law will be discussed, the same legal difficulties are experienced and the same law is applicable to sellers, mortgagors of theatre buildings and theatre operators or lessees.

A person may purchase a theatre building and invariably controversy arises between the seller and purchaser as to what equipment may be legally removed from the building by the seller. The same situation exists when the holder of a mortgage on a theatre building forecloses. Frequently the holder of the mortgage attempts to prevent the owner of the building, or the theatre operator who holds a lease on the building, from removing equipment and other personal property from the theatre building. If it is legally a "trade fixture" it cannot be removed from the building.

Generally speaking, the law has been established that the owner of personal property or chattels, such as theatre equipment, may remove the same from a theatre building, whether he is the seller of the building, a theatre operator or a mortgagor, providing such equipment is not permanently attached to the building.

However, the higher courts, in many decisions, have modified this generally accepted legal rule in view of the fact that many items, comprising theatre equipment and accessories, although permanently attached to the real property, may be removed without damage to the building.

Therefore, when determining whether an item is a "trade fixture" three things must be considered: First, the method of annexation to the building; second, adaptation of the building to which it is connected; and third, intention to make the article a permanent addition to the building.

SIGN HELD LEGAL FIXTURE

Any apparatus or equipment which is permanently affixed to a theatre building in such a manner that its removal will result in damage or injury to the building is termed a "trade fixture." However, any device which may be removed without material damage to the building is known as personal property and may be removed from the structure by any person who has legal title thereto.

For instance, in the late case of Hollywood Improvement Company vs. Blanchard (50 F. [2d] 737), a theatre operator attached an electric sign to a leased theatre building. Litigation developed over the question of whether or not this sign should be termed as a trade fixture or personal property. In holding the sign to be personal property, which entitled the theatre operator to remove it, the court stated the following important law:

"A tenant may remove from the rented premises, any time during the continuance of his term, anything affixed thereto for purposes of trade, manufacture, ornament, or domestic use, if the removal can be effected without injury to the premises. . . . The tapestry upon the walls, the tables in the rooms, the settees in the lobby, the chairs, the lamps, and all other similar property obviously never lost their character as personal property, nor in the opinion of the court did the draperies, curtains and shades. . . . We are therefore led to the conclusion that the title to the sign remained with lessee (tenant)."

WHEN ORGAN IS FIXTURE

There have been many litigations involving pipe organs, and the courts have consistently held that where the testimony indicates that a pipe organ was installed permanently in a building, such pipe organ is a part of the realty and cannot be removed by either a theatre operator, seller, or mortgagor of the building. Of course, if it is apparent that the pipe organ was only temporarily installed in a building, it remains personal property under all circumstances.

For instance, in the leading case of Ballard vs. Theatre Company (93 Washington 655) it was shown that a pipe organ was installed in a theatre by a theatre operator without any intention of making it a permanent accession to the building. The organ was attached in a manner that it could be quickly removed without any material injury or damage to the building, although to do so required tearing away of certain walls which the theatre operator could replace. In holding the theatre operator entitled to remove the pipe organ from the building, the higher court said:

"In determining whether a chattel which has been annexed to the freehold is a trade fixture or a part of the realty, the cardinal inquiry is into the intent of the party making the annexation. It is conclusive, of course, that the chattel annexed is a fixture when it cannot be removed without a material injury to the freehold, as for example, where it is essential to the support of some part of a permanent structure."

In other words, this court broadly indicated that if a pipe organ is installed in a theatre building and is not adapted to removal and installation in another theatre building, the organ always is a trade fixture and cannot legally be removed by a proprietor, theatre operator or mortgagor of the building. The same law is applicable to a pipe organ which is installed in a building in such a manner that its removal necessitates permanent damage to the building.

On the other hand, it is quite apparent that where a pipe organ is installed in a theatre without any intention of making it a permanent accession to the building, and which is in no way located so that its removal will permanently damage the premises, the organ is personal property and may be removed from the building even

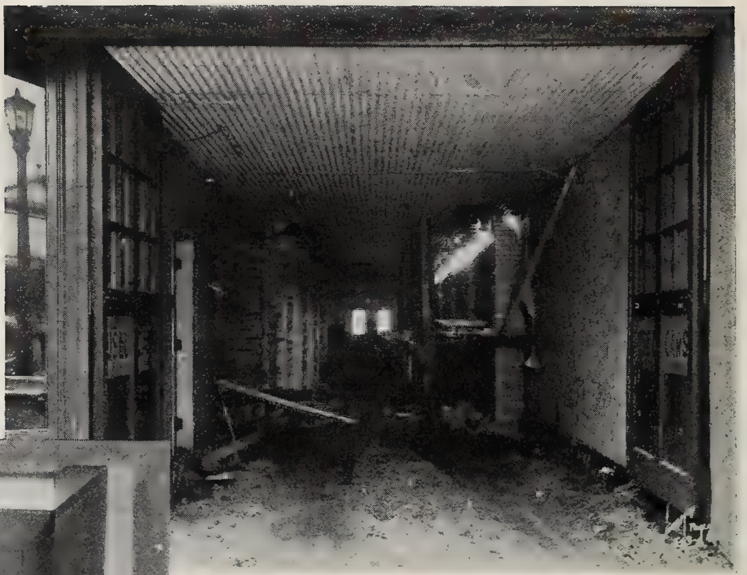
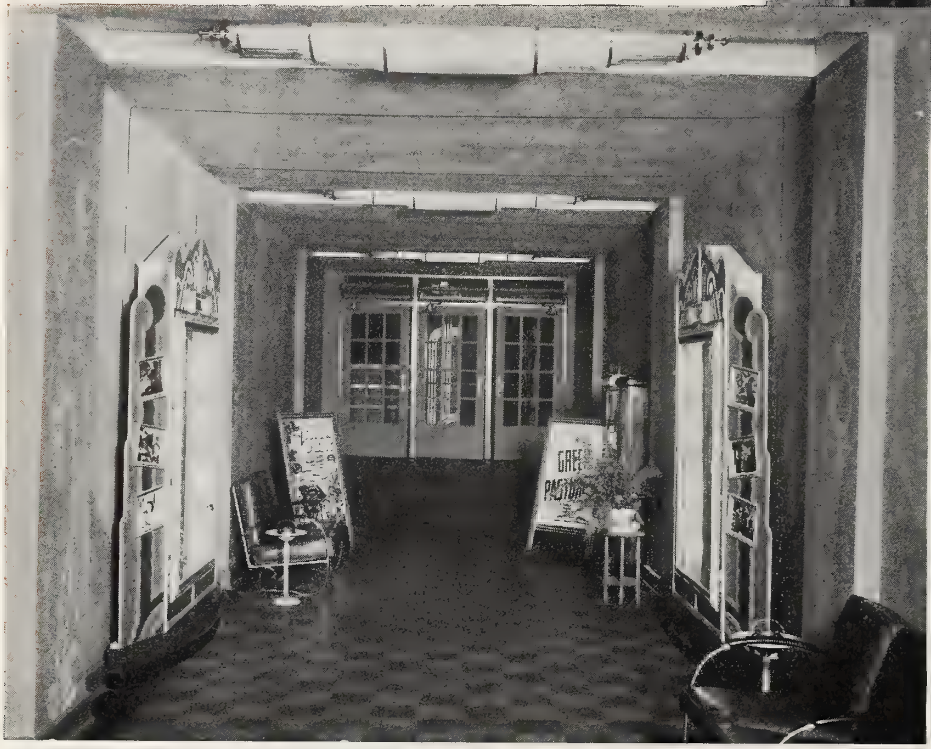
Converting a Garage into a Fine Theatre





The view above indicates one of the defects of the building as one adapted to the requirements of a motion pitcure theatre. It shows the long, narrow passage of the garage as it appeared from the entrance. At left is a similar view—that is, toward the auditorium—of this area after it had been transformed into the lobby of the La Belle theatre. Note how the pilasters seem to reduce the depth of the lobby by dividing it into sections.

Another section of the entrance area fashioned from the automobile approach is pictured below. This view is of the vestibule, looking toward the doors leading into the lobby. Here structural conditions permited a ceiling about two stories high. The floors are of asphalt on a concrete base and with a greenish marble-like pattern. The walls are finished in a colored Zonolite plaster laid on metal lath.

● Describing the methods by which the La Belle theatre in Oconomowoc, Wis., was fashioned at a total reconstruction and decoration cost of $15,000 with the use of modern materials

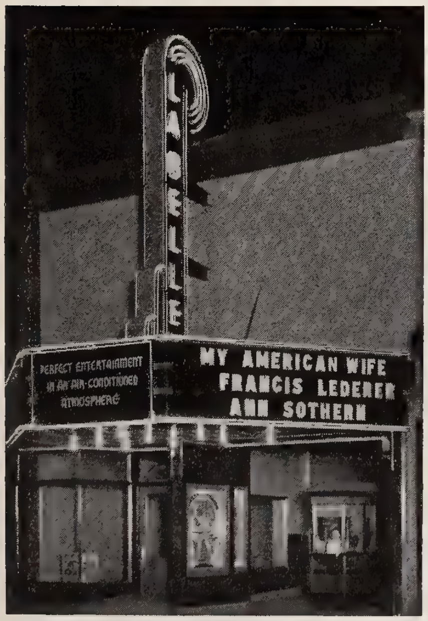
The auditorium of the La Belle theatre, and the garage area into which it was built. The steel trusses of the garage have been concealed by Celotex wall board, on which the decorative patterns have been painted. Illumination is supplied by concealed light sources and also by ornamental wall fixtures.

HOW TO CREATE a modern theatre on a small scale out of a huge unshapely garage building and entrance has been demonstrated effectively during the past few months by W. L. Ainsworth in Oconomowoc, Wis.



A night view of the front of the La Belle theatre. Walls, bases and area around display frames are of structural glass with metal mouldings. The marquee fascia are of enamelled metal and converge at the front to form a truncated triangle in one of the newer marquee forms.

The long entrance from the street to the garage proper was made over into an attractive theatre lobby, and the shop converted into a 650-seat auditorium. The theatre remodeling job cost $15,000, while the equipment and furnishings cost another $15,000. The theatre is doing an excellent weekly gross, holding within $200 of the first week's gross and exceeding Mr. Ainsworth's expectations.

Oconomowoc is a high-class resort city, almost midway between Milwaukee and Madison, the State capitol. There are rich farm lands surrounding, and numerous towns and hamlets within a radium of 15 miles. Thirty-six lake lies within a radius of 20 miles. There is one other theatre in Oconomowoc, the Strand.

CONSTRUCTION

The remodeling job gave the La Belle a lobby 16x90 feet and an auditorium 60x110, and also a store 12x35. The building itself is constructed of brick and hollow tile. Zonolite plaster has been used on metal lath, with Celotex wall board for ceiling and side walls, and acoustical board for the back wall. The interior decorations are painted on the wall board. The skeleton structure consists of steel columns and steel roof truss. A modern style of architecture is employed throughout the building.

Structural glass is used at the front, with metal horizontal bands for division bars. The marquee is of modern pattern, while the sign is vertical and extends the height of the building.

The vestibule has asphalt tile floors on a concrete base, with green and marble finishes. The walls are of colored Zonolite plaster as are the ceilings, and both are on Ecod metal lath.

Box lighting was provided in the auditorium, along with ornamental glass colored fixtures at each side column.

The foyer wall and ceiling have colored Zonolite plaster, and the floors are carpeted. The inner foyer and auditorium aisles are covered with heavy ozite and carpet. The foyer is decorated in old rose and blue, with modernistic silver striping. The inner lobby decoration plan and materials are the same as the inner foyer. Light sources are flush and are lamped in three colors. Steel furniture is used in the inner lobby and foyer. The furniture has polished steel arms and base with dark blue leather upholstery.

The width of the auditorium is 58 feet, 6 inches. The depth from rear wall to screen is 92 feet. The height at first row of seats is 23 feet; height from last row is 16 feet. Seats are air-cushioned type with reclining back and fully upholstered. All are on one floor and arranged three banks. There are three aisles. The side aisles are 3 feet, 6 inches wide, the center aisle is 6 feet. Distance from the first row to screen is 18 feet.

Celotex wallboard has been used on ceiling and sidewalls in the auditorium, with acoustical board on the rear wall. The board is glued to the mansory wall.

The size of the stage is 12x24 feet. The width and height of the opening is 30 feet. The size of the screen (maximum) is 12 feet, 6 inches by 18 feet.

PROJECTION

The dimensions of the projection room are 10 feet, 6 inches by 18 feet, 6 inches, and there is also a washroom here. The projection room is painted in cream color. The room has re-enforced cement floor and ceiling. Load bearing hollow tile is employed on walls, which are plastered on both sides. The angle of projection is approximately 9°. The projection throw is 82 feet, 6 inches. Equipment includes two Simplex projectors, Jewel projection lamps and Ultraphone sound. Direct current arc supply is by tungar tube rectifiers.

AIR SUPPLY

The building has a washed air ventilating system (by U. S. Air Conditioning Corporation). A cold water well (depth 18 feet) maintains water supply at a temperature of 50°. Air is forced into the auditorium by blowers. The heating is done by two unit coils set up in front of blowers. The building has return air ducts and exhaust ventilators on roof. The heating in the inner and outer lobby and box office is by radiation. The ventilating capacity is 1400 cubic feet per minute.

The building is insulated, walls and ceiling with celotex. Other parts of theatre have Ecod metal lath and plaster which also has insulation qualities.

The women's lounge is done in bright red and yellow, with chormium furniture in blue and green. The men's lounge room is in blue.

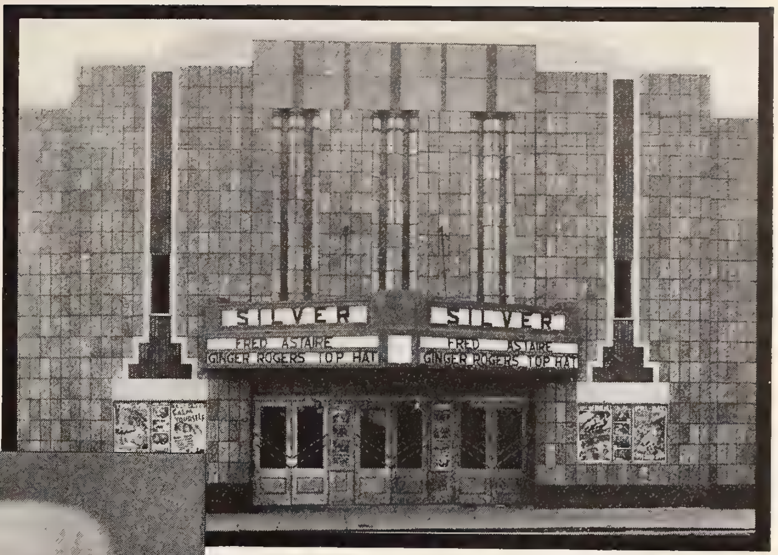
My 71 Years in Small Town Showbusiness



Bert Silver today, and (upper picture) the facade of his new Silver Family theatre in Greenville, Mich.

• It's a new showbusiness that the motion picture has wrought. The circus, waning. Vaudeville, gone. Troupers and trouping, only occasionaly recalled. This we do here, in an interview with Bert Silver, who uniquely links both the old and the new

"IF MY foresight had been as good as my hindsight, I would have been a bigger guy in showbusiness," chuckled Bert Silver, echoing many another person's good-natured lament.

"But," he added, "I have a reputation of having always given my patrons satisfaction. In the old days when I was trouping, they always requested me to come back with my show." And he chuckled again as he observed, " I know of showmen who dare not go back!"

Certainly, a showman who gave his patrons satisfaction always would be unique enough, but we need not make an issue of that here. Bert Silver is unique in showbusiness for plenty of other reasons. Son and father of troupers, his continuance unto this day bridges a period during which theatrical amusement has been completely transformed and gives the vastly different world of the motion picture one of the few old-time showmen remaining to it. Even as an exhibitor of motion pictures, his career spans a quarter of a century.

"Mary Pickford, Owen Moore, Charlie Chaplin—I bought them for a dollar a reel," Mr. Silver recalled. "They were money-making stars, too!

Bert Silver's first motion picture theatre was Michigan's pleasant little country town of Greenville. There too is his latest. He opened that first "moving picture show" in 1911. He has been an exhibitor in Greenville ever since.

The original theatre did very well for Greenville through the years. Bert Silver, remember, is a true "grass-roots" showman. Of course, as equipment was improved, the Silver Family theatre got its quota of the new apparatus. But in appearance and incidental facilities, the Silver cinema remained just about what it originally was until last year, when it was completely remodeled into a playhouse that any town of 5,000, Greenville's population today, could well be proud of.

Although hale and heartily on hand to greet his patrons when the new Silver Family theatre was opened, the occasion was just 65 years after Bert Silver made his first professional appearance in showbusiness at the age of five. The debut, if you please, was at the Canton, N. Y., fair of 1865. The lad sang a song in his father's minstrel show.

The father, Dick Silver, had been trouping a good while by then, as a minstrel man, singer, dancer and violinist, booking out of Boston. The elder Silver and his brother Jim, with whom he formed a minstrel company, were born in Vermont. Bert, now a full-fledged Midwesterner, was born in New York State.

His father taught him to play the violin, banjo and cornet. For years he used a banjo solo as a specialty. When he had come to the mature professional age of seven, he did a song-and-dance in white-face, while burnt cork was added a year later. He deftly combined white-face and black-face in his repertoire for 30 years, working much of the time with his brother, G. Lote Silver, in a team. The brother, a singer and trombonist, later went into Keith vaudeville and was a circuit attraction for a number of years.

It was shortly after G. Lote left the original family troupe that Bert, with other brothers, organized the Silver Brothers circus in Michigan. It held together for nine years. Then, in 1905, Bert observed that his own family (he had been married in 1883) had amplified sufficiently to make up a troupe of his own, so with his three eldest children he formed the Silver Family Swiss Bell Ringers and Concert Company, playing on the Chicago Star Lyceum Course in several States. The following year he expanded this venture into the Silver Family circus, with 25 performers and helpers in addition to himself, his wife and six children.

It wasn't Ringling Brothers, of course, but—well, the billing could boast of 25 teams and wagons (later becoming five trucks, five trailers and 15 touring cars), and fourteen circus acts in addition to vaudeville acts and band. By 1916 there were 52 people in the company.

"We were just about the first all-gasoline circus in the game," observed Mr. Silver proudly, "that went out, stayed out and made money and friends."

Then in 1917 his youngest son, Richard, was called to war. Showbusiness was supplying its quota of doughboys. Performers were hard to get. Bert Silver decided to quit trouping until after the European business got settled and the people he needed were available again.

He never returned to it. Daughters had married out of the profession. The family was broken up. He sold the circus property and "settled down" in Greenville to confine the rest of his theatrical adventuring to the "picture show" which he had established there seven years before and had been operating by remote control.

"The day for small travelling shows had passed," Mr. Silver added. "Fifty or 60 years ago theatres were scarce things in Michigan, and travelling shows scarcer. But the motion picture, once it got a good start, quickly changed the small town showbusiness.

"But I still cannot see the picture show business as showbusiness. The improvements from film to equipment are great. Still, it used to take experience to run a show successfully, and now farmers, butchers, bakers and any guy that has a lot of nerve can go into it and as a rule be more successful than people who have had a lifetime of experience in handling and entertaining the public.

"I always figured that it was more profitable to be a big man in a small town than a small man in a big town, so I spent most of my life in the sticks, as they call it." Here Bert Silver chuckled yet again. "Just the same, we never failed to make good when we did happen to wander into some big town!

"The motion picture business needs the small town showman. And if he were treated a little better he could be kept satisfied—and, you know, a satisfied customer always comes back where he was well treated the first time."

The fine new Silver Family theatre has been built as a monument. It will carry into coming years something from the very beginnings of showbusiness in America. To revamp the former house, Mr. Silver employed a firm of experienced theatre architects, Bennett & Straight of Dearborn, Mich. An entirely new front was constructed, the interior was revised throughout, in materials as well as decorative scheme. The seating capacity was enlarged. Old-fashioned elements were removed. The new theatre is modern in both appearance and mechanical facilities. It will be fit to carry on the Silver Family tradition in showbusiness for a good many years to come.

"My other interests?" Bert Silver thought a moment, then offering another one of those Silver chuckles—"Maybe it's a pretty good time to say that I am a Democrat. I have been elected four times the mayor of Greenville, which is a Republican town, and now, at the age of 76, I am supervisor of the largest ward in our city. I have worked as hard trying to be a good citizen and help to my town as I worked at showbusiness. I am on the job eighteen hours of every day—and hope to be fore at least 100 years more."—George Schutz.

Acoustical Values in the Use Of Fabrics for Theatre Decoration

● The second and concluding article of a discussion of the place of fabrics in theatre interior treatment and how best to apply them

By EUGENE CLUTE

SOME OF THE acoustical materials used on the walls of motion picture theatre auditoriums—specifically, materials that in no way lend themselves to participation in decorative schemes—are hidden by a decorative fabric. This is particularly true of rock wool, which is much used because of its high efficiency in absorbing sound, especially of the lower frequencies, which are not absorbed to so great a degree by most other materials. As these low frequencies are responsible for some of the most serious acoustical troubles, the use of rock wool to cure these conditions plays an important part in the acoustical treatment of many auditoriums.

Since a high degree of sound absorption is needed most often at the rear of the auditorium, it is frequently advisable to cover all or most of the rear wall, and to cover the side walls as far forward as the front line of the balcony, with a rock wool treatment, even when there may be little if any acoustical material elsewhere, and the decoration of these areas therefore are likely to call for a fabric of some type.

Rock wool is used either as a blanket back of a perforated board of asbestos-cement composition or other perforated hard board, or in the form of slabs composed of a rock wool blanket with expanded metal mesh on one side and a wire mesh on the other, and the use of such acoustical materials is one of the reasons for the return of decorative fabrics to favor for the treatment of at least certain areas of auditorium walls in motion picture theatres. For that matter, fabrics, when properly laid, have definite acoustical value in themselves. Just what is the acoustical efficiency of the various types of fabrics remains to be determined, scientifically, but practical experience has shown it to be appreciable. It seems as though it would pay some of the makers of suitable fabrics to have tests of their acoustical properties made by a laboratory.

METHODS OF LAYING

Until data secured as the results of laboratory experiments are made available, two general principles must serve as guides in this use of fabrics. The sound absorbency of a fabric used as a wall covering depends upon two factors. The first factor is its character, the openness or porosity of its weave, permitting sound to be absorbed. The second factor is its manner of application. That is, how much air space there is between the fabric and the wall, whether it hangs straight or in folds, and whether it hangs free or is tautly stretched.

When there is an inch or so of space in back of the fabric, its absorbency is very much greater than when it is applied directly against the wall. As fabrics are generally used on walls there is a space of somewhat less than ¼-inch in back, which is sufficient to afford the needed amount of absorption in most cases. But the efficiency increases rapidly if the space is increased. A fabric hung in folds absorbs sound much more efficiently than one that hangs flat; also, a fabric that hangs free is somewhat more efficient than one that is stretched. It is said that if a fabric is stretched very taut, a diaphragm action may be set up by the sound and a resonance produced. It seems to the writer, however, that the chance of any trouble from this cause is negligible.

The sum and substance of the matter is that fabrics used on the walls are among the best means of securing satisfactory conditions for hearing in a motion picture auditorium. The fabrics generally used for decorative effect absorb sound well, and those on walls are usually backed with a flannel blanket that further improves the acoustics of the room.

Usually, fabrics employed for decorative effect on walls are stretched and tacked to slender strips of wood attached to the walls for this purpose. These strips, which are known as tapestry slats, are about an inch wide, and beveled from about 3/16-inch at one edge, to a little less at the other. They are applied with the thin edge towards the inside of the panel, so that when the fabric is tacked on, the inner edge of the strip will be far enough in back of it not to cause a line to appear in the fabric. The tacks are hidden by a narrow molding or by a narrow decorative braid. Usually a backing of "flannel"—a cotton cloth with a flannel-like knap—is tacked on before the decorative fabric is applied. This backing gives added firmness and helps absorb sound. The walls in back of the fabric are usually plastered, and regulations frequently require that this shall be the case, except where acoustical material is used. Fabrics are generally used to conceal blankets and slabs of rock wool acoustical material and are then applied in much the same way as to a plaster wall.

When fabrics are hung in folds, they are tacked to a wooden batten at the top, the batten being attached to the wall. Draperies, either in folds or draped in various patterns, are largely employed at doorways and sometimes at other points. Fabrics that are sized and pasted on the wall like wallpaper, are often excellent decoratively, but the acoustical value is greatly reduced by this method of application.

FLAME-PROOFING

Fabrics used in motion picture theatres should be efficiently flame-proofed—this is, indeed, usually required by State or municipal regulations. The flame-proofing preparation of chemicals can be applied to the fabric before it is delivered at the theatre, or it can be applied after the fabric is in place on the walls. In the latter case, the flame-proofing liquid is applied by means of a spray painting machine which operates on the principle of an atomizer.

When the fabric is flame-proofed before it is hung, difficulty is sometimes experienced in the attempt to make the pattern match at the seams, because the material may stretch unevenly during the flame-proofing process. For this reason it is sometimes regarded as preferable to spray the flame-proofing liquid on after the fabric is on the wall. When this is done, the contractor should not use too little of the liquid near the top, as is sometimes done, but should apply the preparation thoroughly from top to bottom.

Flame-proofing needs to be renewed by spraying at reasonable intervals. Once a year is regarded as sufficient; this is required in some localities. In many places, there are no regulations calling for the renewal of flame-proofing. This should, then, be done at the discretion of the theatre owner, but often enough to ensure that there is at no time a fire hazard due to fabrics in which the flame-proofing no longer serves as an adequate protection.

As most flame-proofing preparations are of such a nature that they have a strong affinity for water, they tend to draw

About People of the Theatre

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Frank Templin, manager of the Strand in Kendallville, Ind., reports that extensive modernization of that theatre will be undertaken by the owner, Mrs. Anna Deardorff, for the Hudson Enterprises, Inc., the operators. Besides structural changes and complete redecoration, the auditorium will be reseated.

Joe B. Moore, owner and operator of the Lyric and Orpheum theatres in Havre, Mont., has installed complete air-conditioning systems in those houses. The installations were made by Carrier.

The NuGulf theatre was one of four buildings in Houston, Tex., destroyed by fire which was spread rapidly by a high wind. The fire originated in the theatre.

The Interboro circuit, headed by S. M. Strausberg, has opened its Hobart theatre in Woodside, New York City.

Frank Bowen of Kansas City, is opening Eastern territories for the National Cinema Service Company of Chicago. They are New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Fred W. Wheeler has taken a 50-year lease on the Rogers building in Gallipolis, Ohio, and will convert it into a theatre. He also operates the Opera House in Gallipolis.

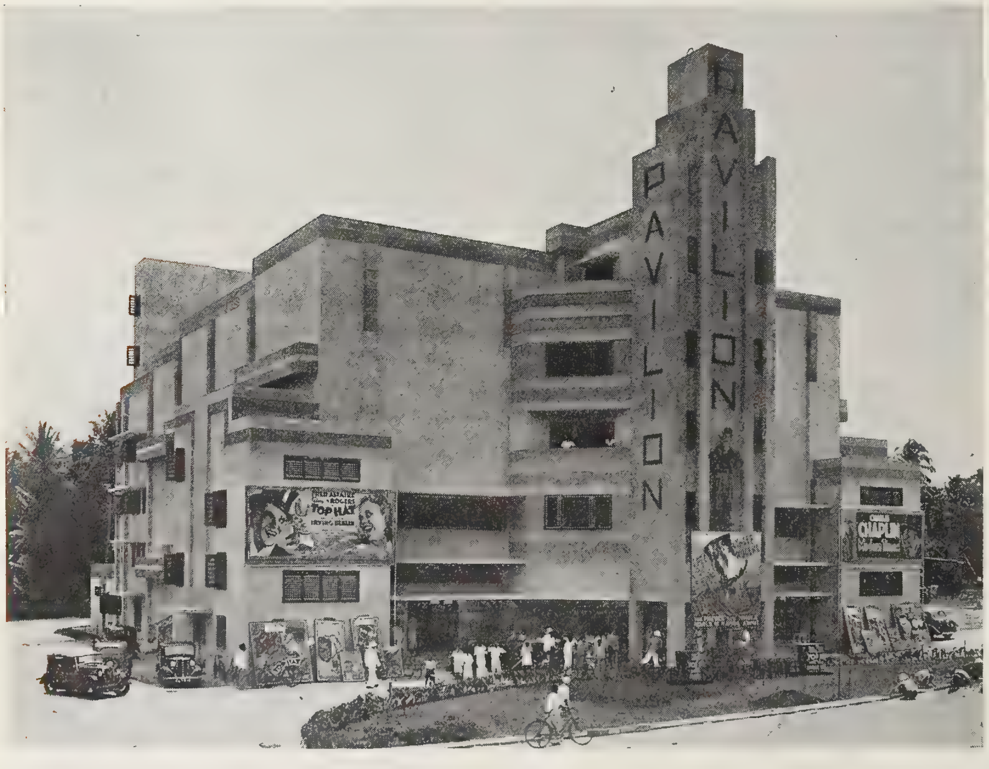
M. C. Batsel, RCA Photophone engineer and department head, has gone to Hollywood to confer with sound technicians on studio installations.

Bob Sweeten is again publicity director of the Orpheum theatre in Denver, following the resignation of Fred Schaal.

Frank Booth, formerly assistant manager at the State theatre in Denver, has returned to that post following an extended leave.

Mickey Hornstein has been placed in charge of the theatre modernization department of Joe Hornstein, Inc., New York City theatre supply dealers.

B. F. Shearer, head of the B. F. Shearer Company, Pacific Coast theatre supply dealers and also head of the Tower Theatre Company, announced that his circuit will erect an 850-seat theatre in Bremerton, Wash., this winter. The cost is estimated as $200,000. The new house would make the second Tower circuit theatre in Bremerton.



An Oriental notion of "modernism" as applied to theatre architecture. This is a view of the new Pavilion theatre in Kulua Lampur, capital of the Federated Malay States. Construction is of reinforced concrete. The architecture relies essentially on massing, with the facade dominated by a tower-like structure surmounting the entrance. Equipment is reported to be in keeping with Western standards. While the air supply systems is without a refrigerating unit, some cooling effect is obtained by large capacity blowers and an extensive exhaust system giving five changes of air per hour. Projectors are Simplex, the sound system Western Electric. The house is owned by Pavilion, Ltd., distributors in the Straits Settlements for RKO Radio.

N. A. Mears has been named vice president in charge of purchasing, and R. Shannon has been appointed vice president in charge of manufacturing, of the RCA Manufacturing Company.

W. B. Uhring has adopted a policy of combination stage and pictures on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, at his Rex theatre in Steubenville, Ohio.

J. D. Wineland is building a new theatre in Picher, Okla., to be completed in time for a December opening. Construction will cost $12,000. Mr. Wineland also operates the Mystic theatre in Picher.

O. F. Sullivan has opened his new Civic theatre in Wichita, Kan., erected at a cost of $75,000.

F. L. Lowe has opened his new 450-seat theatre in Lyons, Kan.

The New Avalon theatre, Olympia, Wash., has been reopened.

Irwin Waite, manager of the Melba theatre in Dallas, Tex., will also manage the Tower theatre now under construction there. The Tower almost adjoins the Melba. Thomas Howell will be in immediate charge of the Tower.

A dinner attended by local theatre and film people was arranged by Johnson Musselman, manager of the theatre, and G. E. Plues of Electrical Research Products, Inc., to celebrate the inaugural of "Mirrophonic" sound at the Rialto in Louisville.

Ferd Middleburg, who with his brother Charles A., operates the Capitol in Charleston, W. Va., in addition to several other houses, has plans for $150,000 theatre to be erected at Logan, Ohio. The house will seat 900. Meanor & Handloser of Charleston, are the architects.

Another theatre was added to the properties of Paul Gusdanovic, James E. Scoville and Howard Reif of Cleveland, with the opening of a new 1200-seat house in Parma, Ohio.

The Anthony theatre in Anthony, Kan., erected by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Barron, has been scheduled for a November opening. The capacity is 750, and the cost is reported to be $40,000.

The New Madison theatre, formerly called the Garrick, is expected to be opened the latter part of this month following modernization costing $10,000. The auditorium is being completely reseated by the American Seating Company.

Mrs. E. A. Hartman has been granted a permit to erect a temporary building at Bandon, Ore., for use as a motion picture theatre. The business district of that city was razed by fire a few weeks ago.

C. E. Huish will operate a theatre to be erected at Elko, Nev., by John Hunter.

Denzel Piercy has reopened the Lyric theatre at Prineville, Ore.

Frank Hahn, Sr., has begun construction of a theatre, store and office building in Ashland, Wis., to cost $55,000. Perry E. Crosier of Minneapolis, is the architect.

Ted Wilson will remodel the Alpine theatre in Leavenworth, Wash.

Charles A. Ames and his son, Kenneth, have opened their new Ames theatre in Portland, Ore., erected at a cost of $60,000.

Don Reilly, assistant manager of Warners' Palace theatre in Lorain, Ohio, has been named manager of the State in Lima, succeeding Lou Milder, who has been transferred to Warners' Variety in Cleveland.

The Empire Theatre, a 1,000-seat house decorated in Empire style, has been opened on West Portal Avenue, San Francisco. The new house is under the management of Jess Levin.

The Rivoli theatre in Berkeley, Calif., is being completely remodeled. Much new equipment will be installed. This is a unit of the Golden State circuit.

Sol Lesser, manager of the Lyceum theatre in San Francisco, smelled smoke as the house was being closed for the night. Employes made a seat-to-seat search, found a cushion on fire and doused it with water. Despite the precaution, the newly-renovated house caught fire, with a resultant loss of about $10,000. A similar loss was suffered eight years ago.

William Cornwell has taken a lease on the theatre at Main and Elm Streets, Woodland, owned by John F. Garrette.

Joe Kuriger, projectionist of the Istrione theatre in Jackson, Miss., was fatally burned early this month in his successful efforts to prevent the spreading of a projection room fire. In paying tribute to Kuriger's courage, Marion Ferrera, manager of the Istrione, said that he prevented what might have been a serious disaster. Mr. Kuriger was 52 years of age.

Frank Putnam, manager of the Texan theatre, and John Stanfill, manager of Peoples theatre, in Port Arthur, Tex., have exchanged posts.

Henry Lazarus has completed remodeling of the old Wonderland theatre in New Orleans, now called the Center.

J. W. Brace has been granted a permit to operate a theatre at Taft, Calif.

A ten-year lease has been taken on the Rialto theatre, formerly Heuck's Opera House, in Cincinnati, by the Ohio Valley Amusement Company. The move introduces this circuit into the Cincinnati field. The theatre will be remodeled at a cost of $35,000.

A. W. Pugh has opened his White Way theatre in Fredonia, Kan., following remodeling. The capacity was increased to 1000. Among Kansas City "Film Row" representatives at the opening were Arthur Cole, Joe Manfre and Roy Young, all of Paramount.

The New Georgia theatre in Statesboro, Ga., has been opened. The house seats 750. Hal Macon is managing.

Warren Irvin, district manager of the Palmetto Amusement Company, has announced that the theatre which this circuit is building in Columbia, S. C., will be called the Center. The theatre is being erected on the site of the former Imperial theatre at a cost of $100,000.

WILLIAM HANLEY, theatrical and radio figure of San Francisco and New York, has been made program director of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco. For the past five years he has been with the National Broadcasting Company.

ELLIS ARKUSH of Burlingame, Calif., long associated with the motion picture industry on the San Francisco peninsula as an exhibitor, has returned from a four months' tour of Europe made with Mrs. Arkush and their son John.

Progress of construction of the theatre being erected by JAKE ESKIN in Richland Center, Wis., indicates an early opening. It will cost $55,000. JOSEPH G. DURRANT of Boscobel, Wis., is the architect.

The Plaza theatre, new house erected by T. MILLER DAVIDGE in Durant, Okla., has been completed. The capacity is 850. Cost of construction was $35,000.

The New Grand theatre in Grand Island, Neb., will be opened on Christmas Day, according to the present plans of HARRY SCHILLER, who will manage the house. The new theatre seats 850, replacing a smaller house seating only 350, and was erected at a cost of $85,000.

H. F. KENNEDY plans to reopen his Lyric theatre in Broken Bow, Neb., the first of December. The theatre is being remodeled at a reported cost of $40,000.

UZIA BERMANI is remodeling the National theatre at Stockton, Calif., and will reopen it as the New Roxy upon completion of the work.

E. L. FINK has arranged to erect a theatre at Patterson, Calif., contracts having been awarded to Walfrid Knutson.

Mississippi Theatres, Inc., owned by AL H. YEOMANS of Meridan, has been sold to the Saenger circuit. Theatres involved in the sale are the Alberta in Meridan, Jean in Laurel, and the Rose in Hattiesburg. MR. YEOMANS plans to build up another group in southern Mississippi.

DANIEL P. WINE, who established the first motion picture theatre in Harrisonburg, Va., died recently of pneumonia at the age of 55.

ALBERT E. PTAK, operator of the Lyceum theatre in Cleveland, has closed a contract with W. S. Ferguson Company of Cleveland, to erect a 1000-seat theatre in Rocky River, a residential suburb of Cleveland. MR. PTAK has taken a fifteen year lease on the theatre, which is being built by JOHN RESNICK.

Safety and Maintenance Factors In Marquee Design and Lighting

● Examining some methods followed in the selection, construction and illumination of marquees and signs, and why some should be avoided

THE MOTION picture theatre has developed certain characteristic means and methods of reaching out for its public patronage. Since the days when "moving pictures" were a novelty, every theatre operator and manager has learned that to sell his empty seats he must reach out and bring people inside his theatre. The late depression years served to emphasize that fact. During the last decade many novel and ingenious advertising and exploitation schemes have been devised. The one medium of advertising available to the theatre manager, which seems to have survived the many changes of policy, has been the marquee, with its attraction boards and brilliant lighting effects.

The marquee is still one of the important means of reaching out for patronage. This method of advertising has proved so successful for such a long period of time that, despite the fact that it is a typical theatre front, it is slowly being adopted by restaurants, night clubs, "legitimate" theatres and even department stores.

Perhaps the most important reason why the theatre marquee has retained its importance is because of the continuous improvements and developments which have been made throughout the years. This, of course, is due to the effort on the part of manufacturers of changeable letters, the research by one of the largest incandescent lamp laboratories, and the progress of the neon light industry—all this, combined with the fact that the theatre marquee does attract passersby.

The architects, too, have aided in popularizing the marquee and have adapted it, in many instances, to architectural treatment, making it, so to speak, a part of the building, rather than a mere appendage. It is interesting to note at this point that most credit for the continued improvements in marquee and theatre signs is due to persons and organizations outside of the motion picture industry. This is the rule rather than the exception, and the indifference of the theatre industry towards developing its own improvements is just about as characteristic of the business as the "theatre front" is.)

With all the improvements, there are still many theatre operators who seem satisfied to operate their theatres with dark fronts and out-of-date marquees—hiding their light under a bushel! The ususal excuse in the final analysis is that they are waiting to be forced into the improvement by competition; then they try to resort to some clumsily designed "box" slopped together at the smallest possible cash outlay, often marking their theatre in this manner as a "shooting gallery." That is not good advertising policy. On other occasions they will spend $2000 or $2500 on a marquee, then deface it by placing four 15c admission signs on all sides of it. Price, of course, is important, but price can be overly emphasized. The American public is price conscious, but it has enough common sense to weigh price against quality; and when an otherwise good theatre front is defaced with 10 and 15 cent signs they know that inside the chances are the theatre is a "dump" with terrible seats, dirty walls, bad projection, using old prints. After all—except maybe for juvenile patronage—we are trying to sell motion picture entertainment, and if the admission price is right we don't have to disfigure the whole theatre front with placards announcing the price.

DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION

IT IS BELIEVED that the proper theatre front can and should combine light, color, motion, beauty and ingenuity of design, mass proportion of light and dark, legibility and contrast, and, finally, it should be structurally sound and safe.

Good engineering with regard to the structural design of the frame-work of marquees and signs, has not generally been applied. Perhaps the field of sign construction has not had sufficient appeal to attract many high-grade engineers. More than likely, some sign manufacturers have not become aware of the benefits which they would or could derive from a really capable engineer. On new theatres, architects, with their structural engineers, usually provide amply strong connections to the structural frame of the building for signs and marquees. From that point on, however, it seems that they are only interested in the design.

The frame-work for marquees and signs is usually put tgoether in such slip-shod fashion, and the various structural members are so badly selected, that the result is a sign or marquee twice as heavy as it should be. Furthermore, because the signs are designed with little consideration for wind pressures, they are guyed with anywhere from six to sixteen cables. Very frequently these cables are put up by, or at least specified by, someone who has not the slightest idea of cables, their strength or the proper installation of them.

BOLT CONNECTIONS

Most of the connections between structural members is by bolts only and little care is taken to select bolts of a proper size, consequently the holes are often too large for the bolts. The result is that the sign is secure and reasonably water tight until, because of vibration or corrosion, the bolts become loose. The sign then "settles," causing internal stress and strain to be set up inside the sign, which is evidenced by the loosening up of seams and slight bulging of the sheet metal surfaces. It is at this point in the life of the sign that water seeps into the interior, causing shorts in the electrical wiring, corroded sockets and an increasing deterioration within the sign, the extent of which is hard to determine.

CLEAN BLOWERS: In checking up on a ventilating job during the past summer, it was noted that the blades of the blower were coated with oil and dirt to a depth of almost a quarter of an inch. After carefully studying the whole plant for possible means of improvement, during which velocity readings were taken at the delivery outlets, the fan blades were ordered cleaned thoroughly, also the spider and the inside of the scrole of the fan. Much to our surprise the new readings taken at the delivery grille were an improvement over the first reading by about 15%. From this I am lead to believe that the blowers in theatres should be carefully cleaned each year. The collection of dirt on the moving parts inside the fan and on the inside of the fan housing very apparently affects the efficiency of the blower.

AIR CHANGE RATE: During the past summer, it has been noted that some air-conditioning men have been leaving theatre managers under an erroneous impression. Air change in a theatre is of importance—that is, the period in minutes during which a sufficient quantity of fresh air comes into the theatre to equal the cubic volume of the auditorium. Frequently the manager has been lead to believe that the cubic volume of the auditorium, divided by the rated cubic feet per minute (C. F. M.) of the fan or fans, provides this answer of the time of total air change.

This is definitely in error because after the blower has been in operation, there is a balance arrived at between the capacity of the blower delivering air through the ducts, and the physical arrangement of the auditorium, particularly with regard to facility for air to escape, where the quantity of air that the blower can possibly put into the auditorium exactly equals the quantity of air that escapes from the auditorium. Hence it follows that the correct number of minutes required for a complete air change is found by dividing the volume of the auditorium in cubic feet by the number of cubic feet of air being exhausted or escaping from the theatre.

ADAPTING TRANSFORMERS: In my opening article in this department, this issue, the question of power factor in relation to neon transformers was touched upon. The power factor of low power factor transformers can be improved without junking the old transformers. The correction of the power factor is brought about by the use of condensers or capacitors.

These capacitors may be mounted alongside the tube transformer, then the combination of the transformer and the capacitor becomes, for all practical purposes, a high power factor transformer. The capacitor is connected on the low voltage side of the transformer. This correction is of importance if the electric service in the theatre is billed on a metered demand rate.

bling the frame-work of the sign is employed by only one or two sign manufacturers in the country. In place of definite knowledge on the part of the sign makers of the strength of materials, structural members seem to be sized by guess-work. To be perfectly sure that the sign will hold together, amply heavy angles and channels are used. It has been noted that frequently 4-inch angles have been used where 2-inch angles would have been amply strong. And, too, it has been noted that in places 2-inch angles have been used where 4-inch angles should have been specified. The result is a sign or marquee entirely out of structural proportion and basically weak. (It is fortunate for our bank accounts that we don't buy our signs and marquees by the pound,

ROOFS

So much for the engineering on signs and marquees. Now how many managers have suffered with leaky roofs on marquees? The leaky roofs result from basic wrong roof construction. This is the result, not so much of lack of knowledge, as lack of attention at the time of construction. The great majority of marquee roofs are improperly flashed, or improperly pitched, or equipped with down spouts too small to carry off the catch of rain water. Another cause is the shifting of structural members, which opens up seams. Managers can catch some of these defects if they will give some attention to the job during the time of erection. One does not have to be an engineer to look and then ask someone about it besides the erection foreman who is making the installation.

ATTRACTION VALUES; LIGHTING

QUITE A FEW sign companies have engaged very capable designers who possess skill with colors and the use of the air brush. These designers produce beautiful sketches, and only too often a marquee is purchased because of the sheer beauty or novelty of these pictures. It is not believed that the designers of signs deliberately try or want to fool prospective buyers. In attempting to analyze just why these designs mislead, one cannot come to a definite conclusion, but perhaps the most important reason is the inability of the theatre man to visualize the theatre with the new marquee installed; or perhaps it is because of the great contrast between the old existing front and the beauty of the drawing or color sketch.

PROPORTION

But most frequently, I believe, these designs are not drawn in true proportion to the building—and the neighboring signs and buildings. The perspective used by these artists is usually one of the systems of mechanical perspective drawing which is not true perspective as the eye sees it. Also, an artificial horizon is often selected so that in the drawing the eye views the marquee from an angle which it is impossible to view it from in actual practice. This distorts one's whole sense of proportion.

It is much safer to insist on each side face of the marquee being laid out to rather large scale—say, ½-inch to the foot—then try and visualize that with relation to the height and width of the theatre front. Another method in use is to enlarge a small snap-shot of the theatre front, then paint on the new front. This method is also deceiving, since the snap-shot has usually lost all of its sharp definition with enlargement, and the brilliant colored paint makes the proposed marquee look startlingly prominent.

I once knew an executive of a large chain of theatres whose duty it was to pass on designs for new marquees. This man always insisted on having a very large-sized colored sketch, to scale, of the front, and end views, not in perspective. He would then thumb-tack them to the wall on the other side of his office and view and analyze the sketches through a concave lens. A concave lens makes an object look smaller, depending upon the depth of the concave face of the lens in relation to its diameter. The marquee, when viewed through it, would appear to be several hundred feet away. Red, which looks so pronounced on a large scale sketch, can not be seen through a concave lens, so it can either be eliminated or brought out stronger until the right effect is gotten. This same study can be applied to the size of changeable letters and details of design as well as to colors. Through this method of study, we have discovered that many of the intricate details of design which add so much to the cost of a marquee, can be eliminated without taking away any of its distinctive qualities.

The final effect of the marquees selected by this executive proved the soundness of this method of studying preliminary sketches.

There are probably no towns of more than 15,000 population where neon signs are any novelty at this time. Consequently neo marquees are inherently not theatrical unless some unusual color is used which has not been used by every drug store or beer parlor in the town. Recently a marquee entirely lighted with the new white neon was installed. This made a very novel front, not only because it was never used before, but because the design itself was very different. As the novelty wears off it will lend itself to combinations of other color effects and to the application of motion, so that the whole effect will be very satisfactory.

Neon lighting alone, without any unusual features of design or adaptation to motion and color changes, is not recommended. Neon needs the flash, the sparkle, the motion, the color and the high-lighting that can be given to it by the ingenious use of some incandescent lamps worked into the design.

Quite frequently some energetic salesman sells a theatre operator "a bill of goods" to neonize an existing marquee or sign. The result, in many instances, is disastrous. The neonizing of an antiquated marquee does not help much.

Perhaps the single most important part of a neon setup, with regard to a neon circuit, is the transformer. The transformer is used for stepping up the 110-volt current to, say, 15,000 volts. Such transformers have been continuously improved, and the design of a transformer to a great extent determines the current consumed and the electrical demand of the installation.

In small theatres, where there is a fixed demand rate, the lower power factor transformer should be used. Lower power factor transformers are cheaper initially, but in operation increase the electrical demand.

In larger theatres, where the demand is metered, it is important that high power factor transformers be used, otherwise the savings in operating costs will not be as great as one can expect. The high power factor transformers will cost more to start with, but the savings will justify their use.—J. T. K.

HOW BLOWER NOISE WAS REDUCED

THERE WAS a large blower in a theatre delivering an ample quantity of air, and doing it with about the right velocities and pressures. However, the system was very noisy. Careful study of the noise indicated that some of it was mechanical, some air, and some from the ducts. The noise was so great that people not only complained, but the sound had to be operated at three or four points higher on the fader setting.

The blower delivered air into one large duct and the large duct was split into two ducts that served the two sides of the theatre. The entire duct system was inspected very carefully while the system was in operation, in order to detect any undue vibration or "bellowing" of the sheet metal or for air leaks. After all such conditions had been corrected, there still remained a great amount of air noise and some mechanical noise.

To attempt to install a sound absorbing duct lining would have been expensive and, as a matter of fact, it was difficult to say just how much benefit would have been derived.

Finally, it was decided to install "sound cells." These cells were made of ½-inch hardware cloth, Johns-Manville rock wool bats, and chicken wire. They had the general form of cylinders. The ½-inch hardware cloth was formed into a cylinder 12" in diameter and 6 feet long—this to give the cell strength. Outside of the hardware cloth, and completely covering it, was placed the 4-inch rock wool bats, and outside of the bats the chicken wire to hold the bats in place.

Each one of these cells cost about $2 to make up. Enough were made completely to fill the main duct and the two large branch ducts. They were then placed in the ducts longitudinally, the cylinder in the direction of the air flow. In other words, at three points there were these sections of duct filled with cells, making it look, when viewed from inside the duct, like a large honeycomb. The effect on the noise was simply astounding. These cells reduced it to a level that was entirely unobjectionable, and the fader settings could be reduced to normal.

The total volume of air was reduced only approximately 8%, the outlet velocity at the grilles only about 3½%, and the pressure inside the duct was not appreciably changed (from readings of the field instrument that was available). The total result was that distribution and air quantity was satisfactory, the noise was controlled.—J. T. K.

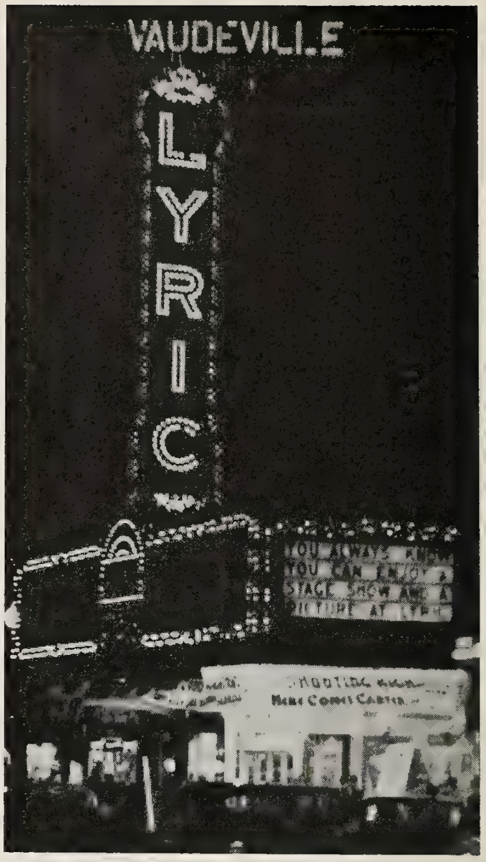
Greater Marquee Illumination With Reduced Wattage

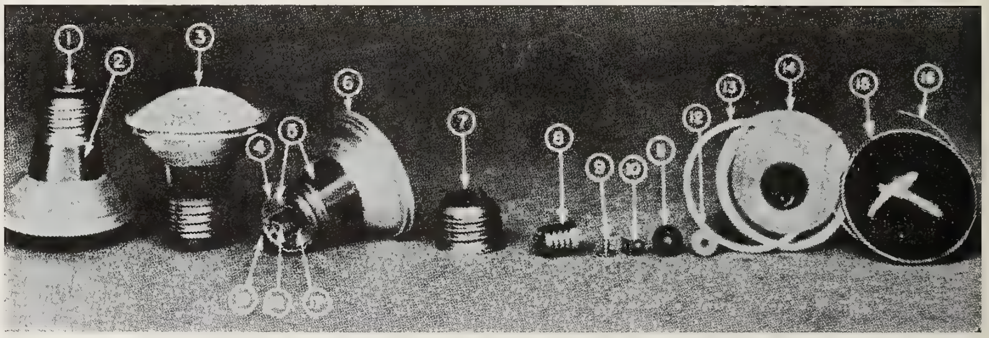
COLOR PLUS a substantial increase in effective illumination per watt can be readily attained in many lighting elements of the theatre by the use of reflector-roundels. Color-hoods for incandescent lamps have been extensively used by theatres, but a unit, developed by Climax Lamp, Inc., of Canton, Ohio, gives 25-watt effectiveness with lamps of only 6 watts as a result of its design, which provides a relatively high degree of light projection (see photograph of the assembly elements).

The color hoods are of natural-colored glass, obtainable in red, blue, green, amber, yellow and other shades, in addition to crystal. They have a diameter of 2¼ inches and fit into the rim of an aluminum reflector, being held in place by a metal snap-ring. The reflector is permanently joined to the plug, forming a unit adapter to standard sockets, and with the roundel in place, the lamp is protected from weather and its light, which otherwise is emitted at all angles, is given direction by the reflector and the plano-convex glass cover.



Front illumination of the Lyric in Indianapolis, effected entirely with 6-watt incandescent lamps equipped with Climax reflector color hoods. Colors are amber, red and green.

It has been pointed out by the General Electric Company's Nela Park laboratories that natural-colored glass transmits colored light more efficiently than glass on which some color material has been sprayed on. In connection with reflector-color units for low-wattage incandescent lamps, the same authority states that in the long run, colored accessories are less costly because they are used with less expensive standard lamps, and that colored lamps are most expensive, especially those of natural-colored glass, while with color accessories, color uniformity is better because once selected, the same accessories are used over and over again.



Elements of the Climax reflector, indicating assembly of plug, reflector and colored glass covers. The three views at the left show the assembled reflector. In use, only the glass cover is removable for lamping and change of colors. Arrow No. 6 points to the metal reflector, which is protected against corrosion. No. 16 indicates the sealing ring which snaps into the rim of the reflector, holding the glass cover in place. No. 15 points to the glass cover, or lens, which is plano-convex in form.

Increase in effective illumination with the Climax unit is due to the light transmission characteristics of clear glass in contradistinction to the coated type. Spray coating diffuses the light and gives uniform brightness through the widest viewing angles, whereas with reflector and clear-glass roundel, the light is concentrated at the visible area to an extent increasing the end candlepower three-fold. Because of the increase in effective illumination, reflector units of this type are adaptable to interior lighting as well as to signs and marquees, particularly in trough lighting extending over considerable area.

For marquees and signs, the roundel unit is indicated for various combinations of incandescent and gas-tube illuminants, in connection with attraction boards and marquee decoration. Where the name sign of a theatre uses incandescent lamps, these units permit either reduction in wattage or increase in visibility, sometime both.

Equipment Market Notes

S.O.S. Corporation, has issued a new catalog of ultra-modern lighting fixtures.

Noskrape Laboratories, Inc., of 4856 West Lake Street, Chicago, announces "Destainer," as a universal clearner for terra cotta, porcelain, tile, terrazzo, and similar surfaces. The cleaner is applied with a cloth or sponge, allowed to stand for a few minutes, and then rinsed off with water, the dirt coming with it.

Twelve to thirty-two ampere low-intensity arc rectifiers are announced by Kneisley Electric Company of Toledo. They operate from 110 to 220 single-phase lines.

A new catalog of theatrical stage hardware (No. 37), has been issued by J. R. Clancy, Inc., of Syracuse, N. Y.

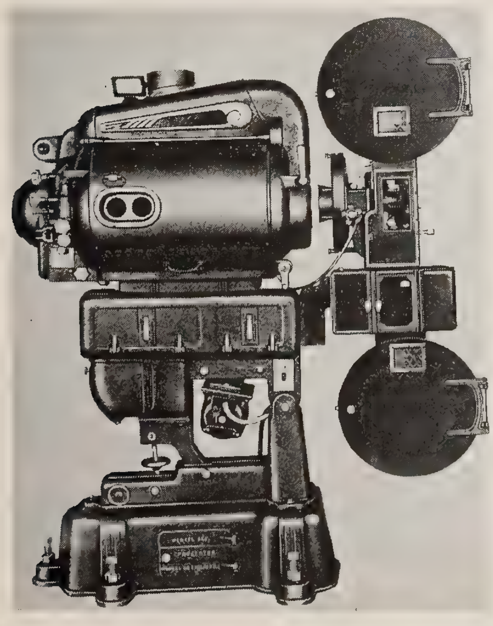
Bausch & Lomb have issued a new catalog, covering motion picture projection lenses and condensers.

Amplifier Company of America of New York announces a new 60-watt "anti-howl" public address amplifier using 6L6 tubes. The circuit provides volume expansion as well as howl suppression.

A semi-portable projector lamp suited to high or low-intensity operation, as desired, with either 16- or 35-mm. film, is announced by the Strong Electric Company of Toledo.

Seventy-five new contracts for Mirrophonic sound are reported by Erpi for the week ending September 26. The Hollywood territory reported seven new installations as of October 9.

Fifty-nine recent installations of RCA sound equipment are announced by the RCA Manufacturing Company. RCA-Sonotone hearing aid devices have recently been installed in two additional houses in Florida, St. Petersburg and Panama City.



New projector mechanism with base and magazines (shown also equipped with lamp) recently placed on the market by the Wenzel Company of Chicago. Mechanism includes built-in rear shutter.

You Can Have

MORE LIGHT and BETTER DISPLAY

With Less Current

Poorly displayed attractions hurt boxoffice receipts. Obsolete canopies and sign letters don't pull the crowds. Take a critical look at your marquee—it may be costing you revenue every week.

With Wagner Silhouette Letters you can have a more brightly lighted canopy and better display of your attractions. You can use more lamps of smaller wattage, secure better illumination and cut cost of current. Modernize your marquee — use Wagner Silhouette Letters to feature your attractions—it can be done at moderate cost and you can count the profit at the boxoffice.

The two illustrations herewith show the State Theatre of Uniontown, Pa., before and after improving the canopy. Wagner Letters now give the State Theatre canopy a greatly increased advertising value.

The Trend in Marquee and Sign Elements

At left is the marquee and sign recently erected on the Wisconsin theatre in La Crosse, Wis., by Electrolite Signs, Inc., of Milwaukee. This huge marquee of novel pattern with its associated name sign has 1,065 feet of neon tubing. The attraction boards, of silhouette type by Adler, use 400 letters.

The unique marquee recently installed on the Stanley theatre in Stanley, Wis., is another Electrolite creation. Marquee, sign and borders required 415 feet of neon tubing in red, blue and green. A neon chaser border terminates at the box office. The attraction boards use 200 lamps and 250 silhouette letters. The theatre was designed by Perry Crosier of Minneapolis and is owned and operated by John Heywood.

Servicing Testers for Modern Sound Installations

TEST INSTRUMENTS designed to facilitate trouble-shooting, service and maintenance of sound equipment, developed by the Weston Electrical Instrument Company of Newark, N. J., are adapted to the latest amplifiers and other elements of the newer sound systems.

Important is the use of socket plugs. Current trends of construction in amplifiers are in the direction of greater compactness. The new amplifier is likely to contain several times as much apparatus as an older model, and if it were built according to the patterns used some years ago, might fill half an average projection room. The separate rectifiers and other power supply units that once sprawled over the walls of the projectionists' domain are now all built into the amplifier unit. Amplifying tubes also are likely now to be of the multi-element types requiring several times as many resistors, condensers, etc., for their proper functioning. Yet the new amplifiers are actually smaller in size than the early ones were. One penalty of this progress is that penetrating to their interiors to get voltage and current readings for servicing or troubleshooting becomes extremely difficult. Hence the use of socket plugs, included in these analyzers, which are introduced into the tube sockets and permit proper readings to be taken at the one point in a modern amplifier that is always instantly accessible. Time is thus saved.

Further saving in time is achieved by the fact that a single meter, in these instruments, serve as a.c. voltmeter, d.c. voltmeter, d.c. milliammeter, ohm-meter and sometimes output meter or volume indicator. The instrument is made to perform any or all of these functions by adjusting appropriate switches and plugs on the face of the tester panel. Hence a great variety of readings can be taken, once the proper plug has been inserted in the tube socket (and the displaced tube inserted in the tester or in the plug itself) with extreme rapidity. Some practice is necessary before these testers can be used efficiently. Once they are familiar to the user, however, his mind remains free and undistracted to interpret meter readings in terms of the troubles they may indicate—flipping the switches to change from one type of reading to another being only a semi-automatic function that requires practically no attention.

As d.c. milliammeters, these instruments read the plate current of all tubes used in the projection room, and determine by plate current whether the tube is "good" or "bad." Some of them also are micro-ammeters, reading down to ½-microampere (one-two-millionth of an ampere) and thus are quite capable of reading the plate current of, and so testing, photoelectric cells.

As d.c. voltmeters, they check the plate, control grid and screen grid voltages of all amplifying tubes, the plate voltages of rectifying tubes, and the plate voltage of photoelectric cells. As a.c. voltmeters, they read the potentional applied to the heaters or filaments of tubes.

Further, as a.c. voltmeters, they are entirely suitable for use as volume indicators to check exciter lamp focus; or, in association with a frequency film, serve as decibel meters to make gain runs and check the quality and performance of the system. Readings may be calibrated directly in terms of a.c. volts, as shown by the instrument, or translated, through a very simple conversion chart into decibels.

Many of these instruments also will read line voltage and serve as a check upon the power company and upon dangerous excesses of line voltage that are likely to damage the sound equipment.

As ohm-meters, they check the values of all resistances used in sound work, determining whether a resistor, even of 10,000,000 ohms or higher, has burnt out and open-circuited completely. In their function of ohm-meters they also check condensers for leakage or short-circuit, and transformers and other inductive windings for open circuit.

Another feature of many of these instruments is that the voltmeter, when functioning with d.c., presents a resistance of 20,000 ohms per volt. The value of this type of construction can be understood by remembering that a voltmeter actually is a small motor, requiring current as well as voltage for its operation. But in reading vacuum tube voltages, current enough to deflect the meter fully may not be present.

Current enough to operate a voltmeter accurately cannot be drawn from such sources, or through such resisters. The rating of a voltmeter in terms of resistance per volt indicates, however, the amount of current necessary to make the meter function, and an instrument of 20,000 ohms per volt needs much less current than the more familiar types, which seldom present more than 1,000, and sometimes as little as 50, ohms per volt. The high-resistance instrument obviously gives a far more accurate reading when applied to vacuum tube voltages, and consequently a much more certain indication of the presence or absence of trouble.

Some of the instruments offered in the Weston line are confined to more specialized functions—decibel meters, capacity meters for measuring condensers, tube testers, and so on. The model that will be found best adapted to most projection rooms is No. 772, which has 5 d.c. voltage ranges, 0 to 1,000 volts, at 20,000 ohms per volt; 5 a.c. voltage ranges, 0 to 1,000 volts, at 1,000 ohms per volt; 6 d.c. ranges, 250 milliamperes to ½-microampere (meter automatically protected against accidental burn-out); and 4 resistance ranges from 0 to 30,000,000 ohms. Such a meter costs in the neighborhood of $50.

Factors in Matching the Elements of a Sound System

● In attempting to modernize existing sound equipment by the introduction of new elements care is urgent. Cited here are practices to observe

By AARON NADELL

THE EXHIBITOR who wishes to add to, modernize or improve an existing sound installation, is faced with the problem of matching the new components to those already installed. A reasonable understanding of the requirements involved will assist him in the selection of suitable apparatus and insure against unsatisfactory results that could easily have been avoided by making a more careful choice.

The several portions of a sound system must be electrically matched not only with reference to impedance, but also in volume level and (as a matter of sensible economy) in frequency range. Further, the question of power supplies must not be overlooked in selecting new apparatus to be used in association with existing equipment.

Essentially, a modern sound system can be taken as consisting of three components—a source of sound, the sound heads; a means of amplification, the amplifier; and a means of reproducing sound, the speakers. In some systems some or all of the sources of operating power are external to the three groups of equipment here named, and may be considered a fourth component.

Provided always that new elements are properly matched to those already installed, any one or more of these components can be replaced with modern equipment to secure better sound or greater reliability in operation.

SOUNDHEADS

Present-day soundheads are capable of responding to sound track records up to 8,000 cycles or higher. To secure this response, which represents an improvement of from 33⅓ to 50 per cent above the best results previously available, the new heads incorporate more accurate optical systems, and facilities for driving the film more smoothly.

In the matter of impedance match, it must be remembered that some soundheads incorporate output transformers, others photo-electric cell amplifiers that include output transformers, and still others run the high impedance photo-cell output directly to the system amplifier. The input impedance of the system amplifier will match the output impedance of the existing sound heads. If new soundheads are installed, they must offer the same output impedance, or the input impedance of the system amplifier must be changed to accommodate the new heads. The second procedure will often prove the easier and less expensive.

Volume levels must match, since if the existing sound head is one that incorporates a photo-cell amplifier, and the new head has none, the new head in all probability will not put out sufficient volume to drive the system amplifier at its full capacity. Pre-amplification must then be added in some form (special pre-amplifiers for this purpose are commercially available) or the system amplifier replaced by one of higher gain.

The frequency range of the system amplifier and loud speakers should be kept in mind when replacing sound heads. It is obviously no advantage to add 8,000-cycle heads to 6,000-cycle speakers.

Soundheads do not incorporate their own sources of p.e. cell and exciter lamp power supply, but if the exciter supply is a.c. a head designed for extended frequency reproduction cannot be used to maximum effect. When such a head is installed the exciter supply is preferably changed to d.c.

AMPLIFIERS

The system amplifier must match in impedance both the sound head by which it is driven and the speakers that it drives. The gain or amplifying power must be sufficient to provide the desired volume output from whatever input level is supplied by the soundheads. The output volume should be the same as the power handling capacity of the speakers, or less, but not more.

The frequency range of the amplifier should equal that of the soundheads and of the speakers. However, it is relatively easy to build amplifiers that cover extended frequency range, and it will commonly be found that even a very inexpensive amplifier offers better frequency response than either speakers or soundheads. The frequency range of the amplifier should never be less than that of the other components.

Power supply is an important consideration in the case of the amplifier. In modern systems that unit not only contains all the power sources it needs for its own operation, but very frequently supplies p.e. cell voltage, exciter current and speaker field excitation to the other elements. It is therefore necessary to make certain, in selecting an amplifier, that it is one capable of supplying the correct voltages and current to any other parts that may be dependent on it for power.

SPEAKERS

The speaker circuit must match in impedance the output impedance of the amplifier. Where frequency-selective filters are used to divide the power between any combination of high, medium and low-frequency speakers, the input impedance of the filter matches the output impedance of the amplifier, and the several output impedances of the filter match the input impedances of the speakers they serve.

In point of volume level, the speaker system must be capable of distortionless reproduction (reproduction without the type of distortion caused by speakers overloading) of the maximum volume to be drawn from the amplifier.

The frequency range of the speakers should equal that of the sound heads.

IN APPRECIATION

I feel I ought to say in these pages something about the splendid tribute paid by my friends and associates during "Richardson Week." Yet I hardly know what to say, or how to say it. No words of mine could half express my deep feeling of appreciation for what has been done.

That appreciation is the deeper still because I sense in the spirit of the occasion an expression of approval of my work—at least of the ultimate purposes of my efforts through the years that began when the motion picture was a silent but "colicky" infant. In its broader interests, at any rate, it had few to speak up for it. I did my mite, and maybe a bit more.

Sincerely indeed do I thank all of those who took part in the various affairs and who sent messages. To all of them, and to my readers as well, I should like to say that so long as I am able to hold off the inevitable, I shall continue, as in past years, to work for high standards and all possible improvement in projection.

I am immensely pleased, of course, to think that I may have deserved a few bouquets. The brickbats were in such abundance all down through the years. But at least I like to tell myself that it has been as stated in the American Projection Society's banquet announcement, that I have been given one of those rare opportunities to enjoy the fragrance of the flowers before it is too late. And I am grateful.

"Richardson Week" Proves All Seeking High Standard

THE TRIBUTE to F. H. Richardson, expressed in and at a series of social gatherings at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York from October 24 to 29, more than realized the aims of those who had conceived the idea of a "Richardson Week." Suggested by Mr. Richardson's attainment of his "three-score-and-ten," the event quickly became an occasion for recognizing how much the art and the business of the motion picture owed to the progressiveness, the perseverance, resourcefulness and vocational pride of those who had labored through the years to improve projection equipment in a practical way, and to raise standards among those who operate it.

This was the significance given by Mr. Richardson himself to the extraordinary honor paid him, and in large measure "Richardson Week" embraced the entire craft of projection, since it honored one who had fought for it, and none too politely, for 30 years.

Although the various affairs necessarily were held in New York, the telegraph and mails gave a degree of presence to projection and theatre men in many parts of the country. One telegram came from the British Projectionists' Guild. There were others from Canada. From outside the industry, the most notable response was, of course, from President Roosevelt, who, addressing Colvin Brown, vice president of Quigley Publications, joined "with the members of the American Projection Society in doing honor to F. H. Richardson."

Scores of messages were read at the inaugural affair, the banquet given by the American Projection Society the night of October 24, which carried well into the 25th, Mr. Richardson's 70th birthday anniversary. Carl Laemmle telegraphed from his home in Beverly Hills, Cal. Others responding from distant places were R. C. Buckley, director, and Harry Dobson, chief inspector, of the Canadian government amusement revenue branch; M. Williams, secretary of Local 348, Vancouver, who said that a life-membership in the local had been voted Mr. Richardson to mark the occasion; and from the Eastman Kodak Company through George A. Blair.

The historical exhibit of equipment maintained throughout the week at the Hotel Pennsylvania with George Edwards, general chairman of "Richardson Week," in charge, brought together for the first time a comprehensive group of early projection mechanisms. The entire exhibit is to be made permanent, having been asked for by the American Museum of Science and Industry, located in the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center. Most of the equipment had been gathered over many years by Herbert Griffin, vice president and sales manager of the International Projector Corporation. There was also a pictorial exhibit from the collection of George Edwards.

Also displayed among the relics were volumes of early issues of Moving Picture World, through which publication Mr. Richardson became a writer on projection. Here is a brief quotation from one of these articles, written following a visit to an early store-room theatre in New York magnificently named the Bijou Dream. After listing quite a number of flaws in the projection:

" . . . A first-class operator [!] who not only knows how, but applies his knowledge, is a prime essential, of course. Then a Tribute to of Projection

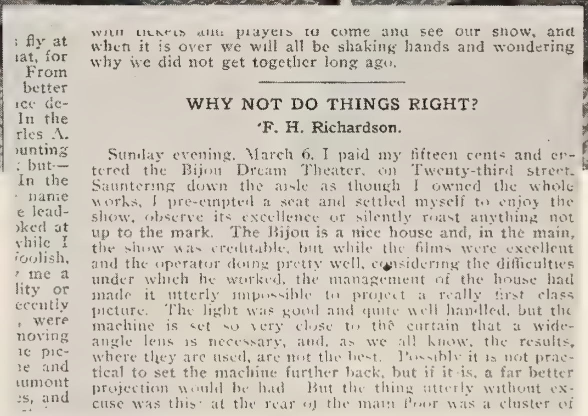
neither ignorance nor carelessness must be met with anywhere or the result will be spoiled. . . . In naming this instance I do it not only for the good of the individual house, but for the good of the business as a whole. . . ."

That early conception of the "good of the business" and the faith that "better projection" was worth fighting for, even if enemies had to be made, were really what "Richardson Week" was all about!

Following the A. P. S. banquet were three luncheons—that given jointly by the International Projector Corporation and the National Theatre Supply Company, presided over by Walter Green, president of the latter firm; one for the Pioneer Projectionists' Association; and, concluding the week's festivities, that of Quigley Publications.

Assisting General Chairman George Edwards were Will C. Smith, of the National Theatre Supply Company, who was secretary; Anthony Rugino, treasurer of the A. P. S., who acted in similar capacity for the "Week"; and 22 committees, the chairmen of which were Alfred R. T. Bishop, Joseph D. Basson, Dr. A. N. Goldsmith, George Skouras, Mr. Smith, M. D. O'Brien, George E. Browne, Louis K. Sidney, Harry Rubin, Al Rosen, Charles Horstman, Glenn H. Humphrey, Thomas Murtha, Frank Sutton, Ben Norton, William C. Covert, Arthur Marten, Louis Kaufman, Sidney Burton and Frank McMahon. Lester B. Isaac was toastmaster at the A. P. S. banquet, while Jay C. Flippin was master of ceremonies.

The equipment exhibit, which continued from October 24 through the following Friday, was widely attended by projectionists from points throughout the metropolitan area, bringing the total of persons participating directly in the "Week" to at least 400.



with tickets and prayers to come and see our show, and when it is over we will all be shaking hands and wondering why we did not get together long ago.

WHY NOT DO THINGS RIGHT?

'F. H. Richardson.

Sunday evening, March 6, I paid my fifteen cents and entered the Bijou Dream Theater, on Twenty-third street. Sauntering down the aisle as though I owned the whole works, I pre-empted a seat and settled myself to enjoy the show, observe its excellence or silently roast anything not up to the mark. The Bijou is a nice house and, in the main, the show was creditable, but while the films were excellent and the operator doing pretty well, considering the difficulties under which he worked, the management of the house had made it utterly impossible to project a really first class picture. The light was good and quite well handled, but the machine is set so very close to the curtain that a wide-angle lens is necessary, and, as we all know, the results, where they are used, are not the best. Possibly it is not practical to set the machine further back, but if it is, a far better projection would be had But the thing utterly without excuse was this: at the rear of the main floor was a cluster of

SHOULD THE UNION ALLOW MANAGERS TO EXAMINE MEMBERS?

RECENTLY in the "Bluebook School" in the HERALD I asked this question: "Do you believe membership in a union should stop employers from examining members sent to them for employment?" Out of all the mass of answers only one man replied in the negative. Now this man is a valued member of the "School," and I most certainly would deeply regret offending him. However, I am sure he is fair-minded and will not object to my answering him here. This good brother replies to the question thus:

"On the whole I feel that the business agent of most unions is fair to the employers and will not put an incompetent man in a projection room. A union has nothing to sell but the services of its members, hence in its own best interests it should be conscientious in the matter of placing men in charge of such delicate apparatus as projectionists of today must use.

"It is degrading for a projectionist to have a lot of questions thrown at him concerning his profession by a manager who too often knows nothing about projection except that there should be a picture and some sort of sound to go with it.

"I believe the employer is entitled to be satisfied that his employes are competent and that in the case of non-union men an examination is proper, since there is no responsible organization back of such men. But in the case of union men the union itself should be held responsible.

"If an employer finds a union employe incompetent, complaint to the proper union officers will effect a remedy. To all of which I might add that I am a union man and a member of the executive board of my local. To my knowledge there have been no differences between employer and employe that have not been settled with satisfaction to both parties."

First of all, this argument defeats itself when the good brother says managers are unable to examine projectionists, and then says he sees no objection to their examination of non-union men. Surely, if they cannot examine, the objection exists just as much for non-union as for union men. Doubtless many managers could not conduct a very precise and comprehensive examination, but nevertheless I do say that any manager may take the new Bluebook of Projection, select questions and even though he knows nothing about projection, tell by its indicated answers whether the man answers correctly or not, and by the general manner of answering, get a pretty good idea as to how well the applicant "knows his stuff."

And if all union men are truly competent, just what is the objection to the asking of certain questions? Wherein is it degrading? The employer is going to place the handling and care of many thousands of dollars worth of equipment under the charge of the man, if employed. Not only that but the box office is going to reflect his competence or lack of it in its cash drawer.

Now there are very many business representatives who are well able to judge a projectionist's fitness and who are conscientious; also there are some who are not. Yet it is proposed that the employer place his dependence wholly on them without qualification. When a man can only hope to gain admittance into a union only after an apprenticeship of a few years, coupled with study, then we may say to the employer: "Our members are all well trained, thoroughly competent men, but you may, in the presence of our business representative, examine any applicant for a position as much as you care to." But that time is not yet here. Therefore I hold the employer to have the inherent right to examine any man, union or non-union, who comes or is sent to his theatre for employment.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FROM BILL CANAVAN

A HIGHLY welcome epistle has come from my old friend William Cannavan, former president of the IATSE & MPMO, in which he comments upon various projection matters of timely interest. He writes:

"With your host of friends and well wishers, I extend felicitations upon the occasion of your one hundredth birthday—or is it a paltry seventy? [Must have got me mixed with Jawn D. It's a mere 70, I assure you!]

"In your last letter to me you say there still is need for your service and advice. You're telling me! About time there should be a bigger and better assault launched against 'sour' projection. True there has been a vast improvement, but there still is plenty of room for more. Those chaps out in the studios might pause for, anyhow, one-tenth of one second (there time is 'waluable,' y'know) in their strenuous endeavors, and consider the big idea that their brain child must be presented to the public via the theatre projection room. I fully realize that this would be asking a lot of them [Read that, you studio guys; I think it's a nawsty crack!—F. H. R.] but who can tell?

"Then too, the sound equipment people might lend consideration to practical projection room practices in both design and development of new equipments, and all manufacturers might give thought to the fact that when some new fangled doodads are being planned, they should be so designed that they will be more practical and accessible to projectionists, rather than the reverse.

"Another angle is neglect of the visual angle. Strange as it may seem, it is really necessary, or at least desirable, that audiences be able to see as well as hear. And see better. To me, the two should go hand in hand. It is not so much an overemphasis of sound as a neglect of visual functions. But with it all, the movies continue to maintain a more or less deserved popularity, and there surely can't be any harm in your efforts for improvement."

It sounds like "Bill," pointing out weak spots in humorous vein. Incidentally, he has been working in a St. Louis suburban theatre, but now is back in the Shubert, where I am told the former deluxe policy must in future give way to a "grind."

EFFECT OF VIOLET LIGHT ON EYES

J. L. MADISON of Boston, asks, "Do violet rays affect eyesight in any manner? Also, what is meant by the term 'relative aperture' as applied to lenses?"

Relative aperture is equal to the effective aperture divided by the focal length of the lens. It means that if a lens is, for example, f8, then its relative aperture is eight times its effective aperture. Its use is in the measurement of lens speed.

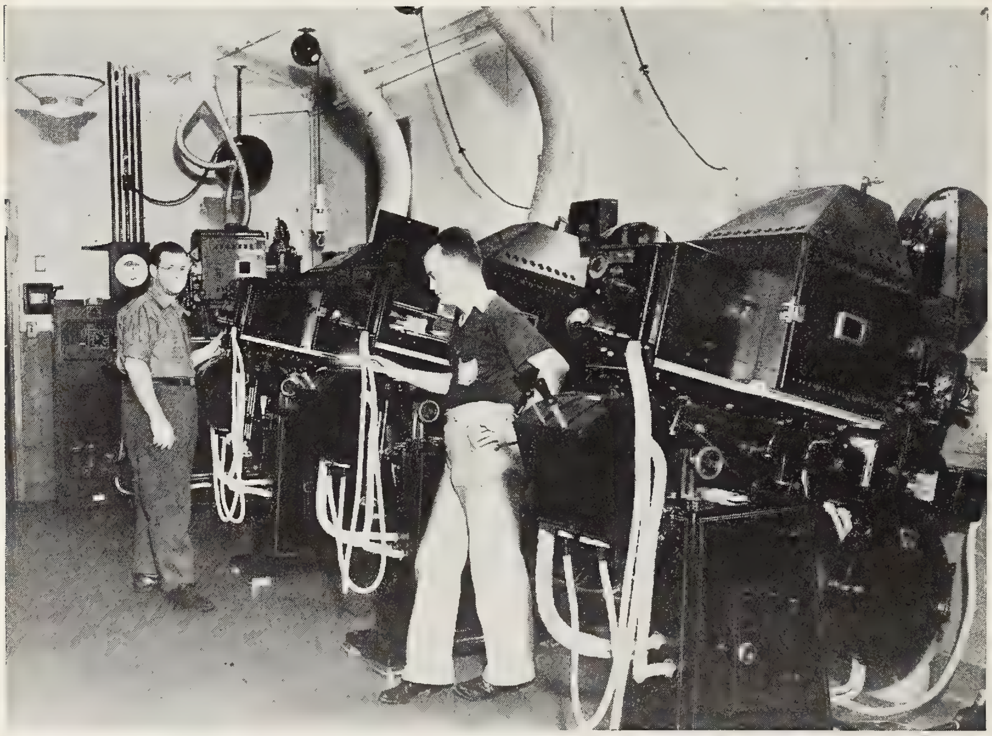
As to your violet ray question, I have it on the authority of an eminent optician that violet and ultra-violet rays present in the spectrum under normal conditions are not harmful to the human eye. He adds:

"In excess amounts, however, they definitely cause eye strain and even cataracts. Our ancestors who used soft light of yellow tone were not bothered much with eye strain, though it also is, of course, a fact that they did not use their eyes for reading, etc., nearly as much as moderns do. As you doubtless know, an ultra-violet ray lamp will cause serious injury to unprotected eyes. Dressmakers sewing on blue find that their eyes tire very easily. An ultra-violet ray lamp playing in a fish bowl will in a short time cause cataracts to form on the eyes of the fishes therein contained.

"I presume, however, you are interested in this subject only in so far as it has relation to motion picture theatre screens. Some while since I was invited to contribute to a survey titled 'The Visual Effect of Motion Pictures.' In my contribution I in part said, 'The movies would attract more business were pictures projected by means of a slightly amber-tinted light, thus removing much of the harsh glare and reducing the strain upon eyes of spectators.' "

MAGNIFICATION OF MOVEMENT AND DEFECTS

JOHN L. JACOBS of Sedalia, Missouri, writes: "Had an argument recently as to what magnification the movement of the film over the projector aperture is subject to at the screen. By this it is meant that if wear, lack of proper adjustment or defect in the intermittent movement, or any other thing, causes successive film photographs to fail of exact registration over the aperture, how many times will that misplacement be magnified at the screen?"



Here is the newest of Broadway's projection rooms. It is that of the Criterion theatre in Times Square. (It replaced the old Criterion of many fond memories. At one time it was leased by "Pop" Rock, and I can see him now as on that day of our big argument, he waving his arms—or was it his fists?—and telling where I disembarked, then asking my advice about something!) For this picture I am indebted to Manager Milton Marien and to Charles Rosney of the new Criterion projection staff, which also includes D. Senzer, J. Margolis, H. Rosenthall, B. Silver, M. Springer, M. Horowitz, M. Schwartz and A. Engler. The major items of equipment are three Super-Simplex projector mechanisms mounted on Motiograph bases and equipped with Hall & Connolly high-intensity lamps. Current conversion is by Hertner motor-generators. The sound systems is RCA Photophone. Other equipments are a Brenkert effect machine, a Hall & Connolly spot and Hoffmann & Sons rheostats. The motor-generator room, measuring 13x11 feet, adjoins the projection room, which is 30 feet wide, 12 feet deep and 10 feet high.—F. H. R.

For the sake of simplicity, let us assume the projector aperture to be one-inch square. Under that condition, if the screen image be undistorted by projection angle and have a width of 18 feet, it will have an area of (18x18) 324 square feet, or 46,565 square inches. It then follows that all things, including displacement of successive photographs over the aperture, photographic and other defects, will be magnified in the screen image in exactly that proportion. Put in perhaps somewhat different form, since the screen image would be (18x12) 216 inches wide, and of equal height, the linear magnification at the screen would be 216 times.

In other words, a displacement equal to 1/100-inch would be 216 hundredths of an inch, or approximately 2 1/16 inches at the screen, whereas if the displacement be 1/1000-inch at the aperture, it would show up on the screen as about ¼-inch.

However, in actual practice the magnification would be considerably in excess of that, since the projector aperture is not one-inch square. Any up-and-down movement will be magnified as many times as 0.600 is contained in the height of the screen image measured in inches. Any lateral movement will be magnified as many times as 0.825 is contained in the width of the screen image measured in inches.

Now that we have answered Mr. Jacob's question, let us consider this matter of magnification a bit more. We must all admit that visibility of movement caused by misplacement of successive photographs, defects, photographic and otherwise, detracts from, rather than adds to, the values of the picture. The screen image must be "rock steady," and that can only be accomplished when all parts of the projector mechanism that have to do with movement and registration of film photographs be kept in practically perfect condition.

Now many a manager has gone to the projection room upon receiving a request for intermittent replacement parts or for general overhauling of intermittent movements, looked at the parts and denied the request on the ground that they "looked all right." However, intermittent sprockets, shafts and intermittent movement parts mus be accurate within at least one ten-thousandth of an inch! To judge their condition takes more than good eyesight.

But this matter has another and equally grave aspect. As dimensions of screen image are increased, the magnification of all defects in the film photograph, including "rain" marks, are increased, and being larger, are the more plainly visible. If, for example, a defect be one-inch wide in a 14-foot screen image, that would be 1/14-inch to the foot, hence if the picture be increased to 22 feet wide, the magnification of the defect would automatically be increased to 1.6 inches, which, of course, increases its visibility almost in that proportion. I say "almost" for the reason that it is improbable that illumination values could, or at least would, be maintained, and lowered illumination of course decreases visibility.

THE ACTION OF AMPLIFIER TUBES

G. L. MCGEE of New Orleans, writes, "I am trying hard to perfect myself in projection as I intend upon reaching proper age (only 17 now) to adopt projection as my profession. Have made good progress, I believe, and intend to continue, as I regard the projection of motion pictures and accompanying sound as offering a field for reasonable advancement in future. That is to say, advancement to those who equip themselves with sufficient experience and knowledge to adequately cope with its problems.

"For some reason I cannot quite seem to obtain a right understanding of amplifier tube action. There seems to be something I cannot connect. Will you therefore set the subject forth in the simplest possible manner?"

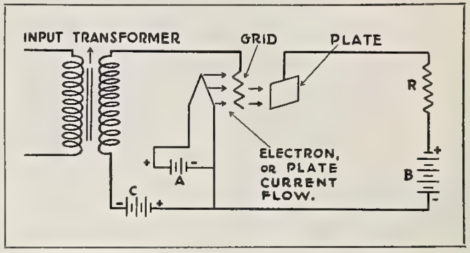
The action of amplifying tubes is not so hard to understand, once certain fundamental actions are well understood. First, as has many times been told, current is not really "amplified." Instead, in a manner I shall try to have described as simply as may be, the constantly fluctuating power impulses of an extremely weak photocell voltage are impressed, in precise duplicate, upon the very much stronger current employed to operate the loudspeakers. That is what happens when we "amplify" current.

The simplest type of vacuum tube has two elements, a filament (cathode) and a plate. When heated, the filament frees a cloud of negative electrons which are accelerated to the plate, provided the plate is positive in potential (voltage) with respect to the filament. This flow of electrons from filament to plate is the plate current, and the tube is a conductor of electricity, but only when the plate is positive with respect to the filament.

When the grid, an element usually in the form of an open spiral, is inserted between filament and plate, the tube becomes a triode. Suppose a triode is connected as in the accompanying diagram. When the grid is negative with respect to filament (as in the diagram), this negative potential repels the electron flow, because the electrons themselves are negative charges and negative charges repel each other. This permits comparatively few electrons to flow to the plate through the grid element, thus limiting the amount of plate current.

When an alternating signal voltage is applied to the grid through the input transformer, the grid potential becomes alternately more and less negative, depending upon the alternations of the signal. This variation in grid potential varies the flow of electrons from the filament to the plate exactly as the incoming signal alternates. When the grid becomes more negative, the electrons are more strongly repelled and less plate current flows. When the grid becomes less negative the electrons flow more freely and more plate current flows.

The plate current passes (see diagram) from the plate through resistor R and returns to the filament through the B-battery. The current variations through the plate resistor R build up a pulsating voltage across this resistor. These pulsations will be in exact accordance with the incoming signal, and by selecting a sufficiently high value of resistance for R, the pulsating voltages across R will be considerably higher than the original signal voltage. The tube has acted as a control valve, duplicating the signal characteristics in its plate circuit. The tube does not amplify the signal, but the amount of B-battery voltage and the amount of resistance at R, when properly selected, will determine the magnitude of the "duplicate signal," which is usually considerably amplified.



BRITISH PROJECTION GUILD PROSPERING

I HAVE RECEIVED a statement covering operations of the Guild of British Projectionists and Technicians since its first meeting in 1929. The statement shows a steady, healthy growth, also that quite recently the growth has been largely accelerated by those who "sit on the fence," ones who had waited for years to make sure whether success would crown the efforts put forth or disaster would finally overthrow the work of years.

Mr. Stanley Perry, its President, is a gentlemen of attainment in the profession. He is both respected and liked by Guildsmen and I feel honored to be able to call him my friend. Qualifications for membership in the Guild are four years or over of service as chief, and only chiefs and "seconds" are eligible. Technicians serving in the industry may be admitted as such.

The Guild is a most excellent organization, though I personally hold that raising wages tends to attract men of higher ambition and ability to the profession, and by reason of that fact, in the end more than repays its cost. Men of low or mediocre ability not only tend to produce mediocre results, but also waste electric power and increase rapidity of equipment deterioration.

ANCHORING PROJECTORS —AND A WARNING

FROM PHILADELPHIA comes this letter: "Am projectionist in a small theatre located about 20 miles from here. Have secured permission to move the projectors farther apart, but don't know how to anchor the anchor bolts in the concrete floor, so like those many others, when I get stuck I come to Dad for help. How can I do it? Please don't publish my name if you print this as they probably would laugh at me."

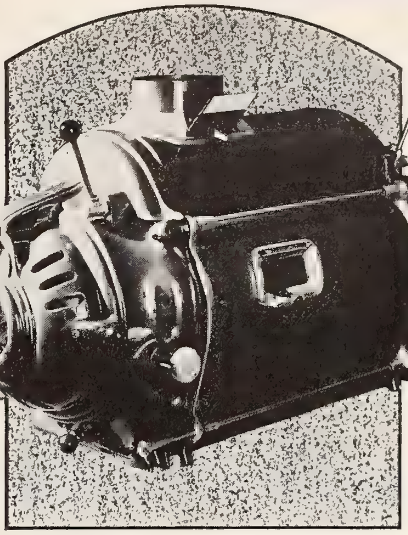
No reason why they should. There are none of us so terribly wise that we know all about everything, and that is not really a part of projection. To anchor bolts in a cement floor it is only necessary to drill a hole 4 or 5 inches deep and somewhat larger than the anchor bolts. A rock drill must be obtained and a "spoon" made for pulling out the pulverized rock formed by drilling. To make such a spoon, just flatten half an inch or so of a round rod and bend it at right angles. After the hole is done, insert the anchor bolt, head down, preferably with a thick washer next to the bolt head, and then fill the hole with thin cement mixed half and half with sharp sand—or better still, with moulten lead or babbit well tamped down after it is cold. But be sure and have the metal good and hot so it will not cool before reaching the bottom.

Before you start the job be very certain you will not run into trouble by spacing the projectors farther apart. This is especially important if the projection distance be short and the picture of good width. As you increase spacing of projectors you increase the difference in projection distance from one side of the screen to the other and, as you doubtless know, a lens gives critically sharp focus at only one distance. True a good, well corrected lens will provide acceptable focus over some relatively short distance, but nevertheless, critical sharpness will only occur at one distance from the lens. Be careful about that or you may have reason to be sorry.

HIS TRAVELLING SHOW SUCCESSFUL

IN THE AUGUST 22d issue of BETTER THEATRES I answered L. Warner of Detroit rather discouragingly when he asked concerning the practicability of serving several small towns having no shows, with a traveling outfit. That answer was based upon my knowledge of the almost universal failure of such ventures in past years. However, such outfits almost invariably consisted of a motor truck in which was mounted a generator arranged to be operated by the truck engine. Usually a tent was carried, with seats, in a second truck. In fact the idea was to carry everything necessary to the show. Most of these outfits, of which many existed 25 years or more ago, failed. Now comes J. N. Wells of Kingsland, Ga., who puts me to shame by saying:

"Was much interested in your reply to Mr. L. Warner, titled, 'Traveling Show Usually Impractical.' I am doing exactly what Mr. Warner asked you about and am getting quite a kick out of it. Every one is pleased with my shows, which, if I



Strong LAMPS

THE STRONG MOGUL marks a distinct advance in projection arc lamp design and construction, providing many fundamental advantages available only in Strong Lamps.

Designed to deliver a tremendous volume of light—a steady, brilliant light that is distributed uniformly over the complete screen area, projecting a picture full of depth and definition which fairly sparkles, bringing out all the delicate details and possessing a realistic daylight effect.

The higher efficiences attained through the modern Strong lamp result in the greatly increased volume of light without a corresponding increase in operating costs.

THE STRONG UTILITY series of reflector type projection arc lamps has been designed especially for theatres where economical, flawless projection is required, but where financial conditions limit the original investment.

This modern, dependable UTILITY series is comprised of the HI, new low voltage, high intensity arc, the LO, regular low intensity of advanced design and the A.C., efficient alternating current arc.

do say it myself, are practically as good as those put on by Mr. Anybody's theatre.

"Last fall I purchased two RCA portable projectors and am covering three small towns in South Eastern Georgia, namely, Kingsland, St. Marys and Woodbine. My home is in Kingsland, which is equidistant (less than 15 miles from each) between Woodbine and St. Marys. I give one show a night in St. Marys on Mondays and Tuesdays. Thursdays are reserved for Woodbine, and Fridays and Saturdays for Kingsland. I use the high school auditorium in each place, giving the school board 10% of the proceeds. Light and power costs me 25 cents per night. The same pictures the Jacksonville theatres use are shown, though of course from a few days to six months later. Upon several occasions I have even got them ahead of the city theatres, and at a rental that would surprise you.

"The nearest motion picture theatre is 19 miles away and Jacksonville, with its ten theatres, is distant only 32 miles. Of course some of the people here attend the Jacksonville shows, but many of them also come to mine, and a large percentage are not blessed (?) with means for transportation.

"The operating expense of my outfit is very low. Gasoline is the largest item, except the $5 a week paid a boy to help me. And only about five gallons of gas are required per week."

Shades of the prophets! Twenty-five cents a night for light and power! Some of you might read that and shed real salty tears. With such a set-up as friend Wells has it is very possible the venture might succeed, but I've my respectful doubts if many such favorable lay-outs could be found.

FUZZINESS ON ONE SIDE OF SCREEN IMAGE

FROM TEXAS comes this inquiry: "I want to know why picture is clear-cut on one side and fuzzy on the other."

There are several possible causes. First, if your projector is not central with the center of the screen, exactly that effect will result, and the shorter the projection distance, or the larger the screen image, the greater will be the effect.

If you have a large picture and a short projection distance, the effect may to some extent be set up by rather wide spacing of the projectors. You may test this by seeing if the picture can be made sharp on either side—if the fuzzy effect moves to the opposite side of the screen as the lens is moved in or out.

If this cannot be done, then remove the aperture plate and make certain something—dirt or possibly a bit of metal—is not under one side of it so that the plate is not resting square with the projector optical system. If this is not so, examine the lenses (I assume the effect is the same with both projectors), making certain there is no thin film of oil or faint, invisible finger marks on one of the projection lens square with the axis of projection. It is of course possible some element of the lens itself is loose, but not in the least probable, since such fault would have to be very bad indeed to produce such a result, and it is hardly conceivable that the same thing would happen to both lenses.

DETERMINING BEST SCREEN DIMENSIONS

FROM THE New Park theatre in Stapleton, N. Y., comes this inquiry:

"We intend installing a new screen and would appreciate your advice as to proper dimensions and best type of surface to use. The first and rear rows of seats are respectively 35 and 52 feet wide, the theatre itself being 62 feet wide. Front row 15 and rear row 68 feet from screen."

Gentlemen, may I voice appreciation. Yours is the first letter of its kind within memory that provides information from which a competent opinion can be formed concerning screen dimensions. And now to work:

At 68 feet maximum viewing distance, all details of a well illuminated screen image will be perfectly visible in a picture even so small as 12 feet wide. From the front seats common sense tells us that the smaller the screen image (within reasonable limits, of course) the better. From them a picture 8 feet wide would be sufficient. It then follows that, so far as has to do with visibility, a picture 12 feet wide would serve quite well at both extremes of your seating space.

With that width the picture would appear at least reasonably sharp from the front center seats, and from the front side seats there would be but little objectionable distortion due to side angle (see page 155 of your Bluebook of Projection for extended discussion of this, as well as a discussion of the whole matter of screens), though a somewhat larger picture might be a bit more pleasing from the rear seats.

However, this fact must not be overlooked. As screen image dimensions are increased, light demand increases, if equal screen brightness is to be maintained, very rapidly. Remember, a certain given amount of light must be spread over the surface, and a screen 12x12 has 144 square feet of surface, whereas one 16x16 totals 256 square feet, or almost twice as much. Therefore, it will require almost twice as much electric current, more carbons and greater production of heat in the lamphouse and at the aperture to give a 16x16-foot screen a certain level of brightness as would be required were it only 12x12. And that is something exhibitors should, but apparently do not pay much attention to, though in the course of a year the oversight costs a lot in electric power bills and damage to equipment and films.

However, we are considering only extremes, and that is bad practice. It will represent good practice to move down midway of the auditorium and consider that from this point a screen image, say, 16 feet wide, will serve very well indeed, and the rear seats at 68 feet, and not highly objectionable from the center front ones at 15 feet, though if there be a stage and it is possible to place the screen further back on it, the front seaters will be better served. We will therefore select a picture 16 feet wide as best for your theatre.

And now as to the surface: Laying your seating space out on paper, I find that a 16-foot screen image will place your farthest front seat at a 50° angle to the center of the screen (all figures approximate only), and your rear row end seats at a 23° angle. The former is a very heavy angle, the latter is favorable. I also find that your front row end seats will be at a 60° angle from the opposite side of the screen; your last row end seats at a 28° angle. These data disclose two conditions. If a 16-foot screen image be 15 feet from the 38-foot front row, there will be a percentage of seats from which the view of the side of the screen next to them will not be bad, but the center thereof will not be good, and the opposite side severely distorted. Many theatres operate under worse conditions, however.

The second fact is that a widely diffusive screen surface is demanded and must be installed unless a heavy fade-away is desired, which means the picture will be not nearly so bright from the side seats as from those located nearer the center.

Everything considered, I advise a screen image not to exceed 16 feet wide (would personally regard 14 feet as better), and a screen surface of maximum diffusive character.

REPLACEMENT OF OLD SOUND EQUIPMENT

FROM AN exhibitor in St. Louis comes this letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: It may appear strange that I ask what I shall. My reasons are as follows: I am able to get advice in quantities elsewhere, but always it is from those whose knowledge is little, if any greater than my own, or from men who have things to sell and whose opinions, however honest, are, consciously or otherwise, influenced by the company they serve or the amount of profit they can make on various things. . . .

"My theatre seats in excess of 1,000 and does a good business. I can afford to install new sound equipment if it seems advisable to do so. My sound equipment was the best of its kind when it was put in about three years ago. It has been kept in excellent condition and still, I believe, gives as good results as some equipments of equal grade that were installed much later.

"But I have been pestered by salesmen and others who insist that I should put in new, later apparatus, and that is why I come to you. Remembering that I am getting really good results, should or should I not accede to that demand? If so why and what kind is best?

"May I ask that you treat this seriously, as I shall regard your decision as the last word, and, as you know, considerable money is involved. Should you publish this matter, I ask that my name and the name of the theatre be not disclosed, since were that done I doubtless would be swamped with salesmen offering yards or even miles of reasons why their own apparatus is best, and something tells me they cannot all be right."

Fully realizing the responsibility attached to offering advice in such a matter as this, I shall certainly be very careful. For any one or all of several reasons I cannot advise as to which make of equipment is best. As to the matter of replacing your equipments, surely you must realize that very, very many genuine improvements have been made in all classes of sound apparatus during the past three years, and that equipments of today can, and if properly handled and cared for, do provide very much better, more natural sound than the older ones.

You say you have a large theatre doing a good business; that you can afford to install new equipment, provided the expenditure is justified. Well, I think the expenditure justified. Both recording technique and reproduction apparatus have improved so much during the last couple of years—and particularly during the past twelve months—to advise new equipment. You should select, after careful personal investigation, what you think is best, and install it. That is what I would do were I financially able to and situated as you are.

ENDING TRAVEL GHOST REGARDLESS OF WEAR

IN A RECENT letter, Chester Gleim, chief projectionist of the Seville theatre in Owensboro, Ky., says, "I have been a reader of your writings ever since I became active in projection work in 1929. May I congratulate you upon your seventieth natal day and upon the excellence of your work, which it is my hope you may continue for many years.

"And now may I ask: (a) The new Bluebook mentions a tool for aligning the projector optical train. Where may this be obtained and what is its cost? (b) Where may I obtain a suitable voltmeter for testing? (c) Where may sound test reels be obtained? (d) Can travel ghost be eliminated if there is excessive wear in the gear train?"

First, Brother Gleim, I thank you for your kind expressions.

Hall & Connolly, 24 Van Dam Street, New York, make the optical train "aligner" you mention. If you address the National Theatre Supply Company, 92 Gold Street, New York, I am sure you will be given the right steer on voltmeters; the Weston Electrical Instrument Corporation, Newark, N. J., can also help you. As to test reels, they may be obtained from the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City.

Yes, travel ghost may be eliminated regardless of wear, by increasing width of shutter master blade; but take my advice and have new gears installed. True you can cut out the ghost by widening the blade, but only at the expense of light loss and increased flicker tendency. Here is the test (see page 236 of the Bluebook of Projection):

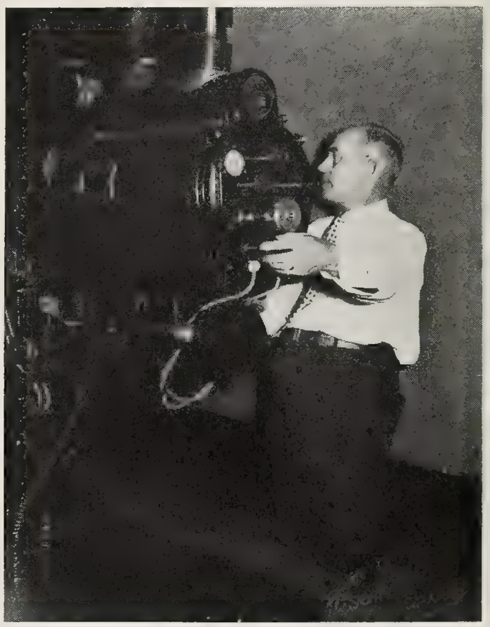
If when holding the rotating shutter stationary, you are able to rotate the rim of the flywheel more than 5/16ths of an inch, the mechanism stands in need of a thorough overhauling. Why a general overhauling? For this reason. There is excessive lost motion in the mechanism, part of which may be and probably is in the gear train, part in the bearings, and part in the intermittent movement itself. True, it may all be in the gears, or all in the bearings, but that is extremely unlikely.

That lost motion means one of two things; namely, travel ghost or a two-wide shutter master blade, neither of which should be tolerated.

SHORT ON LEGS, LONG ON ABILITY

WHILE IN TORONTO last summer I met William H. Taylor, who is a full-fledged, very capable projectionist in a Famous Players-Canadian theatre located in Cobourg, Ontario, despite that fact that, as the result of a railway accident when he was fifteen years of age, both his legs were amputated. Charles A. Dentlebeck is projection supervisor for Famous Players-Canadian and I know Taylor must have made good or he would not be employed. Concerning Taylor, Dentlebeck says:

"He was one of seven sons, and at the age of thirteen obtained a position with Canadian General Electric to assist in supporting the family when his father became ill. At the age of fifteen he lost both legs in a railway accident, after which he attended school until he was 21.



William H. Taylor at his projector.

"He spent a lot of his spare time around theatres, and gradually picked up some projection knowledge during the days of hand cranking. Finally he became apprenticed in projection at Cobourg, later taking a position in a Toronto theatre. Still later he went to Peterboro, finally returning to Cobourg, entering the employ of the Allen's when they built a new Cobourg theatre. And there he is to this day, though the theatre was taken over by Famous Players-Canadian fifteen years ago.

"Taylor is a very efficient projectionist. As you may see by the photo, I have installed the equipment in a manner to suit his requirements, or handicaps, if you will. We obtained the shortest pedestals available to assist him in handling the projector efficiently, which he certainly does. He has seen all the changes in equipments, from the hand-driven types to the up-to-date models. He recalls the days when two to three reels and a set of song slides was a complete program, with three to four showings per night, at which time films were shipped in for a complete week's run.

"Taylor is married and has three children. He is very energetic, has a fishing scow and is a terror to the various tribes of fish inhabiting waters within reaching distance of Cobourg."

My compliments to Brother Taylor. Some men who wail and sob about their "hard luck" might well read the foregoing several times and take a slant at the picture, in which we see a man who does not sit down and bemoan his very genuine hard luck, but stands upright upon what little underpinning is left to him, takes pride in his work—and does work too. I met Coburg when he came to Toronto to listen to an address of mine on projection.

THE EFFECT OF INCREASED AMPERAGE

FROM AN Illinois exhibitor who asks that his name be withheld, comes this inquiry:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: May I offer sincere congratulations upon the recognition accorded you by 'Richardson Week.' I have followed your writings for years and feel that my three theatres owe very much to you, and to the MOTION PICTURE HERALD and BETTER THEATRES that has made your work possible. I inclose a small check with which I ask that you purchase a bit of your favorite joy water for your private birthday dinner. This is for yourself and friend daughter, so don't be piggish!

"And now here is another reason for this letter. I have arguments with my projectionists, with whom I am on friendly terms, however. Just now I want to know exactly what effect increase in amperage has on increase in light at the screen. I shall hope for an enlightening answer."

I thank the good friend for his complimentary words and will agree to share the "joy water." As to the inquiry:

The carbon crater gives off light at the rate of (low intensity arc) 165 foot-candles per square millimeter; reflector type high-intensity, 400 to 650 foot-candles per square millimeter; straight high-intensity, 750 to 800 foot-candles per square millimeter. These values are not exact, but are closely approximate. They are values at the source. What the light values at the screen may be depends upon many things, including the projector optical system and its adjustment, size of spot, width of rotating shutter blades and the type, size and condition of screen.

Increase in amperage operates to increase the millimeter area of carbon crater and thus to increase light production in the proportions above indicated.

A NEW THEORY FROM MR. GRIFFITH!

MOST READERS at least know of John Griffith, for many years a projectionist in Ansonia, Conn. Many know of his pioneer work on projection optics, which compelled optical experts at one time to admit that their treatment of the projector optical train stood in need of revision. Now John has a new theory concerning light energy and has written me a little something about it. Of course, this isn't the first time he has submitted his ideas on the subject, but heretofore I have protested that the matter is one which does not belong among discussions of practical projection affairs. John Griffith, projectionist, of Ansonia, Conn., is not so easily put off, however, so I am going to let him have his say. He writes:

"Dear Frank: When I first started discussing optics in your department many years ago, few if any of your readers had anything more than a most nebulous idea of the theories I advanced. When first I began the study of modern physics I was in exactly the same predicament. It is only by extended study that meanings in such matters become clear. Failure of understanding is not always due to lack of competent description, but lack of interpretation of the description."

Friend Griffith presents his theory under the title, "What is the Real Mass of the Electron?"

"The mass of the electron," he states, "was determined by the application of the laws of uniformly accelerated motion to cathode rays, which were assumed to be streams of negatively charged particles. These laws contain the factor e/m, in which e is assumed to represent the charge of the electron and m the mass of the electron. This assumption is correct if cathode rays are really streams of separate particles, but is not true if cathode rays are lines of polarized nuclei.

"If cathode rays are lines of polarized nuclei through which the electrons are propelled by the energy of the protons of the nuclei, e represents the charge of the protons, and m the charge of the electrons. That value which has been accepted as the mass of the electron is really the value of the charge of the electron. The charge represents the kinetic energy of the particle, while mass represents the neutralized or latent energy of the particle; e plus m represents the total energy of the system, so that when a single particle is being considered, e plus m equals unity; even though when e equals zero and m equals infinity, the total value is still unity.

"If, then, m represents the charge and not the mass of the electron, the mass of the electron will equal unity minus m, or nearly unity.

"Now the question is, which of the two theories is right? Are cathode rays streams of negatively charged particles, or are they lines of polarized nuclei? Or is the mass of the electron equal to m, or unity minus m. The Bragg test seems to indicate that cathode rays are lines of polarized nuclei along which a wave crest forms at the same velocity as the speed of the electron. Einstein's electron mass formula assigns unity-mass to the electron at c velocity, with a lower mass value at lower velocities. Einstein's formula is given in pure mathematics. It merely states at what velocity all the energy of the electron is converted into mass, or a theoretical condition in which e equals zero. Reduced to practical mathematics, it could read when the velocity of the electron equals c or the speed of light, the mass of the electron would equal unity.

"Einstein's theory yields the mass of the electron in its extreme negative state and predicts a lower mass value at lower velocities. The new theory yields the mass of the electron throughout its entire range. In its normal state the particle has unity charge, zero mass and a surface velocity of c. In its extreme negative state it has zero charge and unity mass, and a backward or minus velocity equal to c. Halfway between these two extremes it becomes an electron at the point where its mass exceeds its charge. The electron therefore has a variable mass from .5 in the lower, or K layer, to nearly unity in the outer layer. This particle of unity charge and zero mass can have no other form than that of a balanced centripetal system—a bipolar vortex of layer construction in which the inner layers receive a positive acceleration from the outer layers in which the outer shell is maintained at unity energy by frictional contact with single free units which have a normal surface velocity equal to c.

"These single free units form a magnetic field in the form of a disk around the equator of the nuclei whenever the outer shell drops below unity energy and functions as extra layers to the nucleus. The above is a perfect mechanical expression of the Bohr Postulates. With this new value of mass we can assign two protons to the atom of hydrogen and thus reveal a gap at the head of the series of elements which would naturally be filled by a single proton minus electrons, the single particle that can be either a proton or an electron.

"Assuming the mass of the single electron in hydrogen to be .5, and further assuming mass to be neutralized or latent energy, we would have an equal amount of mass in the protons of the nucleus, making a total of unity. The extra proton acts as the outer shell of the nucleus; it is at once apparent that this system is nearly balanced without any magnetic field.

"Without the outer shell the system would run down and disintegrate, but as soon as the outer shell radiates energy to the inner layers, its own energy drops below unity and it polarizes a magnetic whirl or wave. This speeds the nucleus up to a high energy level, making the magnetic whirl unnecessary, whereupon it dissolves, leaving the system to run down from the high level created by the magnetic whirl. Therefore this system only has a magnetic whirl for a period during each cycle. While it has a magnetic whirl its mass is two; without it the mass is unity, and its observed average mass is 1.0078.

"We can use the same method to check the observed mass of uranium, which is 238. Not counting the outer shell, the nucleus of element contains 92 protons and 92 electrons, or 184 in all. The mass of the electrons vary from .5 to nearly unity, because there is a full quota in this element. The average mass of the electrons will be nearly .75, hence the total nuclear mass will be 184x.75, equals 138. However the e/m state is .25:.75; mass being .75, the charge must be .25. The magnetic field must raise the charge to unity, which increases the total by 75%, or 138x1.75 equals 241.5. If we assume the average mass of the electrons to be .74, the total would be 236.9, indicating that the average mass of electrons in this element is between .75 and .74, in full agreement with the theory that the m value in the original formula represented the charge of the electron, and not the mass, as was assumed; and that cathode rays and all other rays are lines of polarized nuclei."

And there you are, gentlemen! But leave me out of all arguments!

moisture if there is dampness in the walls. Therefore, all damp places should be effectively water-proofed and the walls allowed to dry out before the fabric is applied, otherwise spots or blotches are likely to develop upon the fabrics, due to the effects of moisture upon the flame-proofing. For the same reason the plaster in a new or modernized theatre should be allowed to become thoroughly dry before a fabric is applied.

In cleaning fabric walls, simple brushing of the surface is all that is required, for dust cannot readily penetrate the fabric and its flannel backing. The lower parts can be kept thoroughly free from dust by means of a vacuum cleaner with suitable attachments.

Interior decorating establishments are of course in a position to supply samples of fabrics and to advise in their selection, and local department stores are ordinarily familiar with the fabric market. However, some theatre supply dealers have become interested in fabrics following increase in their use during the past year, and because of their greater familiarity with factors peculiar to theatre decoration and acoustical treatment, it is advisable to apply to them for such service.

Law Affecting Right to Remove Your Equipment

though a wall need be torn down, providing the wall can be and is replaced by the owner of the organ exactly as it was before the organ was installed and removed.

REMOVAL IN FORFEIT

Moreover, this same rule of the law is applicable to a seller of a pipe organ who sells it to a theatre operator with the understanding that he may remove it from the building if the purchaser fails to make the agreed payments. However, a mere description in a bill of sale, chattel, mortgage or the like cannot be relied upon to define whether a pipe organ is personal or real property.

For illustration, in the leading case of Kimball vs. Polakow (268 Illinois 344) the records disclose that the owner of a theatre building entered into a written contract with an organ manufacturer for the installation of a pipe organ, together with bellows and electric motor. The contract provided that the organ should remain the property of the seller until fully paid for by the purchaser. Also, the contract specified that the organ was "portable," which provision was intended to indicate that the organ was not constructed especially for the theatre building in which it was installed, and that the organ was removable from one theatre building to another.

After the seller had installed the organ and received several payments, and before the purchaser had fully paid for the organ, he sold the building. The legal question arose whether the new owner of the theatre building could legally prevent removal of the organ by the seller.

It was contended that the words "portable organ" in the bill of sale indicated that the organ was intended to remain personal property. However, the court held that a mere description in a contract sale, or mortgage, cannot be relied upon to determine positively whether the organ is personal property. This court said:

"The use of the word 'portable' would not, of itself, establish the fact that it remained personal property after its installation in the building."

Therefore, under all circumstances when determining whether a pipe organ is a trade fixture, and therefore a permanent portion of the building, the important consideration is: Was it intended to be a permanent fixture, and is it attached to the building in such a manner that it cannot be removed without permanent damage to the building? If so, it is a trade fixture and cannot be removed by either the firm which sold it, the operator, the mortgagor of the building, or the seller of the building.

SEATING, FANS, ETC.

While the same rule of the law, above explained, is applicable to all personal property, we shall review several interesting higher court cases involving variations of the law.

In Alwes vs. Richheimer (47 S. W. [2d] 1084) an owner attached to his theatre building certain articles such as seats, electric fans and the like. A person who held a mortgage on the building foreclosed the same and litigation arose over the question whether the owner could legally remove these articles before the foreclosure proceedings. In holding the owner not entitled to remove the articles, the court said:

"We think the articles enumerated above are fixtures because, not only are they attached to the building, but are used and are useful in connection with the building."

In this case, obviously, when the owner of the building attached the articles he intended that they should remain permanently. Therefore, the court did not give great consideration as to whether the articles may have been removed without permanently damaging the building, although, of course, the articles were attached in such a manner that their removal would have resulted in some damage to the premises.

On the other hand, compare the above decision with the opinion of the higher court in the late case of National Theatre Supply Company vs. Mishler Theatre Company (167 Atl. 324, Pennsylvania), in which it was shown that a theatre operator entered into a conditional sales contract with the National Theatre Supply Company for the installation of 668 opera chairs in the theatre building to replace approximately 700 old chairs then in use. The contract was properly recorded in accordance with the law, and provided that the theatre operator should pay a specified amount at the time the chairs were delivered and installed in the theatre, and afterwards the balance was to be paid in equal installments.

Several months after the opera chairs were installed in the theatre, the building was purchased by a man who believed that when purchasing the theatre building he also was receiving clear title to the chairs.

The purchaser or theatre operator failed to pay the installments due on the chairs, in accordance with the recorded sales contract, and the seller of the chairs began legal proceedings to remove them from the theatre building. The new purchaser of the theatre building contended that the seller of the chairs should not be permitted to remove them from the building on the grounds that opera chairs are legal "fixtures," and their removal would permanently damage the building.

In this case the theatre operator did not originally intend to permanently attach the chairs to the leased building. Also, he was not the owner of the chairs until he had fully paid for them. Moreover, the recorded conditional sale contract was valid and effective with respect to any subsequent purchaser of the building. Therefore, since the chairs were attached by screws readily removable, the higher court held the seller of the chairs entitled to remove them, saying:

"The question raised is whether the rights of a conditional vendor (seller) of chattels attached to the realty are superior to those of a purchaser of the premises by deed. The lower court answered the question in the affirmative, and we see no reason to disturb this conclusion."

ENCUMBRANCES

It is well settled, in view of the above cited higher court cases, that any person who purchases a theatre building, or any person who takes a mortgage on a theatre building, is bound to search the county records to determine whether the building and its equipment is clear and unencumbered. If a prior mortgage, conditional sale contract or option is properly recorded, it is a legal lien on the building.

Of course, a seller of theatre equipment may not record a conditional contract of sale, or a chattel mortgage, and use it under all circumstances to retain title thereto. In other words, if the equipment is attached in such a manner that it cannot be removed without effecting permanent damage to the building, such equipment becomes a permanent part of the building irrespective of recorded contracts or instruments to the contrary.

Moreover, it is a familiar rule of the law that if one stands by and allows his property to be sold to an innocent purchaser without disclosing his ownership, he is stopped from claiming it afterwards.

METHODS OF INCREASING CAPACITY

INCREASING THE seating capacity of a motion picture theatre presents two major problems: one, that of keeping down the cost of the new construction; and two, retaining a proper relationship of the width, height and length of the structure and screen size.

The scheme of adding additional seats, which appears to be most economical at first, may or may not create desirable seating locations in the new portion; it may even improve or it may destroy the quality of seating locations in existing seating portions. Therefore, it is highly important to think not only in terms of dollars spent, but also to think of the relative gain in good seating locations to the amount of dollars spent.

For example, in a theatre approximately 35 feet wide, it may prove inexpensive to lengthen the depth of the theatre for additional seats, causing the existing seats farthest away from the new screen position to be too far distant from the screen, the size of which would be limited in a theatre of such width. On the other hand, it usually proves entirely too costly to increase the width of a theatre for the purpose of increasing capacity (a scheme which is usually more successful) because it involves revamping of the existing roof construction.

It is entirely possible, of course, for the average theatre to be increased somewhat in depth to gain seats, without destroying the proper proportion desirable for seating area to any disturbing degree. One of the best ways of increasing capacity in theatres of widths of approximately 60 feet and less, is to add a small upper tier of seating. For this scheme it is essential to have at least 22 feet in height of structure at the projection room end, and a greater height in proportion to the number of rows of seats desired in the upper tier. The chief obstacle in the upper tier scheme may prove to be an existing projection room at too low a level. This, of course, involves not only the construction of a new projection room, but also the electrical work necessary thereto. It might also involve the necessity of raising a small portion of roof structure adjacent to the projection room to permit passage of the projection ray of light. In many cases, however, the reconstruction of the projection room may prove necessary regardless of the need for new seats.

If at all possible, adding an extra tier of seats is the most desirable method for increasing capacity. If the extra tier of seats is decided upon, it is advisable to arrange emergency and regular circulation to these upper seats by means of stairways starting at the lowest level of the tier emptying directly onto the orchestra floor. This is advisable in upper levels of seating up to approximately 200 seats in capacity, because it is much more difficult in planning and much more space-wasting to develop stairways starting from the highest level of the upper tier.

The front stair approach at the low end of the tier is also more desirable because it makes the upper seats more easily accessible and much easier to sell, although these upper seats are quite desirable to begin with, when they are at the proper distance from the screen. The most successful type of upper level of seating would be one that covers the orchestra promenade and a few rows of the orchestra seats, and if necessary, a few rows in the other direction beyond the orchestra promenade. It is not as desirable to start an upper level of seating beyond the orchestra promenade.

If the existing proportions of a theatre permits additional depth of structure on the orchestra floor, a fundamental problem exists in the sloping of the existing portion of the orchestra floor. The existing pitch will prove to be insufficient for the new viewing distances from the screen. Too much of the view of the screen will be obstructed by preceding spectators' heads.

Before starting construction work the theatre owner should make sure that these three points are satisfactorily provided for in the new arrangement:

1. That the last row of seats not be any farther away from the screen than five and a half times the width of the screen (four times the width of the screen being nearer to the ideal proportion).
2. That no seats be located too far to one side in the area nearest to the screen. The area nearest to the screen that should not be used for seats can be determined by forming a triangle with the face of the screen, of approximately 40° from either end of the screen. The areas on the screen side of the 40° angle are most undesirable for seat locations.
3. A competent engineer or architect should carefully check the measurements of the upper tier of steppings and the mathematical curve of the orchestra floor slope for clear sight lines and projection beam lines.—BEN SCHLANGER.

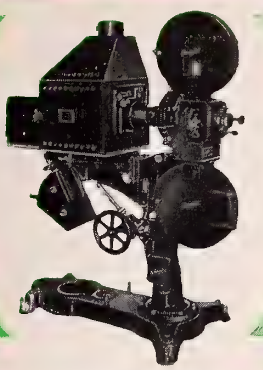
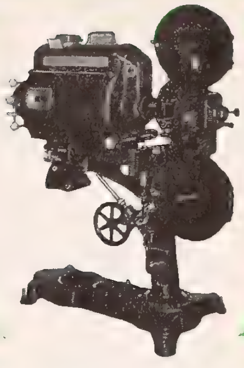
Simplex PROJECTORS — DISTRIBUTED BY NATIONAL THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY



SIMPLEX DE LUXE

GOOD PROJECTION REVENUE BUILDER

... Richardson ...



SIMPLEX SUPER MAGNARC

Millions in additional revenue would accrue to the industry by nation-wide improvement in the standards of projection.

There can be no reasonable doubt that—taking motion picture theatres as a whole—an additional sum of one hundred dollars per year per theatre as a minimum might be profitably expended for the improvement of projection equipment. In my opinion this represents the least that might be well spent for this purpose and many theatres could spend much more. This would bring about an appreciable improvement in both visual and sound projection and it is my view that the improvement would add literally millions of dollars to the box office income.

Screen presentation is the delivery of all the work of the industry to the public, and poor projection is really just the same as delivering inferior quality merchandise to customers. Many theatres are doing an injustice to their patrons by giving poor projection, and would find that all reasonable expenditures for improvements in projection would pay for themselves several times during the course of a year.

Every live wire, progressive exhibitor and theatre manager should realize that maintaining projection equipment in the best possible condition at all times greatly reduces damage to film—is an additional safety precaution, adds to the comfort and enjoyment of patrons and is a wise investment which will result in greatly increased box office receipts.

RADIO FEVER

THE current excitements and agitations over the radio invasion, with microphones set up around Hollywood as thick as oil derricks to pump entertainment out of that big talent pool, seem to take in little consideration of the basic facts—and the inevitabilities. No matter who wants to do what, nature will take its course, in this instance expressed in terms of the reaction of the talent to demand.

The talent is made up considerably more of fame than skill, more of personality than performance. It is for sale and the highest bidder gets it. The human reaction, and the trade reaction in a large way in all industries, is of the immediate Now. The hot heads, not the long heads, run the world.

The merchandise of Fame, the box office stuff, the attention value, stardom, is best when it burns brightest and fastest. And the brighter the shorter. With modern media what they are we are unlikely ever to see again such manifestations as the multiple farewell tours of Adelina Patti and Sarah Bernhardt. They do not last that long now.

But experience will have to make the decisions. Fame always percolates. Magnates become pontificating philosophers. Sports stars become authors. Society queens become endorsers, testimonial writers.

Many a year ago Miss Mary Pickford blossomed in the Pompeian Cream advertisements and Mr. Charles Chaplin was everything from a candy box label to a radiator cap.

Meanwhile the exhibition branch of the industry went in considerably for giving away merchandise to sell entertainment, using everything from Vanitabs to dishes. Now it seems that, as always, it works both ways and we have entertainment given away to move merchandise. It is not really a new notion. It was demonstrated for many and many a year with, for example, the medicine show, and perhaps some readers can remember when chromos of Lillian Russell and Anna Held and many other lovely ladies came along with Sweet Caporal cigarettes.

Currently the radio-screen relation has the fervour of young love. That will not last, at its high fever, but it is inescapable that fame that can be bought and exhibited will be used by every interest which can make it serve. Early in the evolution of broadcasting the screen sought to capitalize radio personalities—and found little nourishment in the notion. Many were called and few were chosen, at the box office.

The screen will survive and flourish. If star careers and lives are shortened there will be more of them.

KANSAS REDEEMED

AFTER all, there is really nothing the matter with Kansas. This week while the frostbitten sunflowers stood rustling in the winds of the bitter November of the Landon debacle, the august Associated Press brought tidings to the world from Hollywood announcing that a boy from Kansas, Mr. Charles Buddy Rogers, formerly of Olathe, had wooed and won America's sweetheart, Mistress Mary Pickford. It is, it seems, a sequel to being her leading man in "My Best Girl," produced in 1927. Kansas tradition began with Quantrell-the-raider, and is beaded with the names of John Brown, Sockless Jerry Simpson, Two-Gun Tom Allen, Bat Masterson and Carrie Nation. Now comes a softer, happier era. Art flowers and romance pervades. History is made in the trans-Missouri. The great seal of Kansas is inscribed Ad Astra per Aspera—which means: "To the stars through difficulties."

- - OR ELSE

IT seems that the radio, due to arrangements between the National Broadcasting Corporation and the Federal Theatre project, is to get, have, and present, a WPA program, regularly on the air—and like it. That may point for the motion picture industry the special advantages of an art and industry operating under government control, such control for instance as the Federal Ex-communications Commission.

FROM THE DUMBELFRIES

CERTAINLY the worst curse of the double billing policy is the flow of marquee jokes in linked titles, the contemporary successor to that infantile silliness of "stories" made of patchwork assembly of production titles, a lowbrow mania appearing with the first annual product announcements many a year ago.

THE movie column boys seem to be prattling about star-versus-story again. They might meditate on the subject of Shirley Temple, while debating the destiny of this art and industry. There is no substitute for Fame, not even Art. People, that is to say customers, are interested in people. The merchandise is personality and there's nothing to be done about it. Current developments make it clear enough that Radio knows the stuff of which attention is made.

This Week

Security Tax Procedure

Theatre owners and exchanges, producers, distributors and other employers in the motion picture business are now receiving the forms which must be filled out, immediately, in compliance with the Social Security Act for old age pensions, to which both employers and employees in this and other industries must contribute a payroll tax beginning at one per cent, starting January 1st.

The procedure for complying is explained on page 13.

Writers Disagree

The Western Writers Congress held a three-day conference of Pacific Coast authors in San Francisco this week to consider the subject of "the writer in relation to contemporary social problems." The motion picture industry in general and "liberal" Hollywood screen writers in particular came in for vigorous attack at the motion picture session.

See page 31.

Higher Admission Prices

Increases in admission prices are expected to become general throughout the entire area of Greater New York as soon as the court of appeals in Albany decides the issue of the two per cent municipal sales tax that New York has attempted to levy on the rental of motion picture film. Numerous exhibitors are now prepared to make the increases in price scales, but feel that if they raise them now and the sales tax is declared legal, they may have to make another increase. It is also felt that if prices are made higher and the sales tax is declared invalid, a decrease may be necessitated.

The story is on page 58.

Increment

Financial news cheering to the motion picture business reached a new high note this week with the report of an $82,000,000 appreciation in values of film stocks. Dividends are being poured out as the large companies' earnings continue to mount.

The motion picture's new and strengthened financial position is analyzed on page 69.

B & K's Loop Control

If the Balaban and Katz bid for the McVickers theatre in Chicago is expected by the Chicago school board, which controls the leasing of the theatre, the RKO Palace will be the only first-run house in the Loop not under B & K.

Trade Practices

Indication by Twentieth Century-Fox of its acceptance of industry self-regulation, and clarification of the announcement of Universal's acceptance of the ten-point trade practice program with a further statement that the privileges will be retroactive, led developments in that field this week. The Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors attacked the program and Universal's acceptance of it in part, as a "maneuver" to block passage of the Neely-Pettingill bill by the new Congress.

The developments are told on page 29.

Legislative Shadows

Legislatures in 44 states are scheduled to convene during 1937 and it is expected that besides the usual amount of anti-motion picture legislation the industry will be asked to bear the additional burden of a share of the taxes necessitated by the unemployment and social security measures of the national government.

In Washington, also, there are reports that the NRA, in a revised form to meet the objections expressed by the supreme court, will make an appearance through the medium of a bill by Congressman William R. Sirovich of New York. Congress also is expected to take up again the questions of block booking and blind selling.

A list of the state legislatures scheduled to convene and a general discussion of the legislation problem is found on page 33.

Sales Meetings

To assure continuance of the upward swing which has raised sales and box office records to new high marks this year, several companies held mid-season sales meetings this week. Columbia held the first of a series of district meetings in San Francisco, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives met in Chicago and Warner Brothers sales managers and executives gathered, also in Chicago.

The meetings are reported on page 94.

Projectionists' Peace

A survey board appointed by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York met on Monday in the office of Howard S. Cullman at the Roxy theatre and discussed progress made thus far toward carrying out the mayorial mandate calling for peace among the projectionists' unions.

Mexican Quota Delayed

A committee of six appointed by the Mexican government to consider a proposed exhibition quota is delaying decision pending study of conflicting opinions received from industry advisors canvassed.

The proposed quota is described on page 68.

Saint John Exchange

A new and specially constructed building is being erected in Saint John, New Brunswick, to accommodate four of the city's ten film exchanges. The structure will be completed on April 1st and will accommodate the 20th Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, Empire and Universal exchanges.

NBC Expanding Field

The National Broadcasting Company announced Tuesday that it was expanding its operations in the South and Central American field to compete with its dominant European programs.

As the first step in the new policy, John F. Royal, vice-president, announced the company is arranging for an extensive series of broadcasts from the Pan-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires, which President Roosevelt is expected to attend. Later the company plans short-wave broacasts of special material from New York and exchanges of typical programs.

Zukor Jubilee Plans

Plans for the celebration by Paramount of Adolf Zukor's silver jubilee begin with a dinner to be given on January 7th, the producer's birthday, by the Paramount Studio Club. According to another announcement all exhibitors in the country who played "Queen Elizabeth," Mr. Zukor's initial feature production, when it first was released in 1912, will be presented with silver medallions as part of the celebration.

Jubilee news is on page 58.

Early and Paramount

The New York Times on Wednesday reported in a "special" dispatch from Washington that "rumors of the impending resignation of Stephen Early, assistant secretary to President Roosevelt, gained impetus today."

"It has been understood," continued the Times, "that Mr. Early had received several offers of positions outside the government service and it was reported today that he was seriously considering an offer from Paramount Pictures, effective after January 1."

Mr. Early, now 47, was associated with Paramount Pictures before joining Mr. Roosevelt's official family, serving as Washington representative both of Paramount-Publix Corporation and Paramount Newsreel from 1927 to 1933.

The Paramount home office denied, however, that any offer had been made to Mr. Early. Nor did an independent investigation in Washington bring any confirmation. There have been, however, at the capital, recurrent rumors of Mr. Early's intention to resign for a more remunerative business association.

It is expected in Washington that there will be a number of changes in the President's immediate staff, now that the election is over. The first was the resignation on Tuesday of Rexford Tugwell, the "brain truster."

The President's second secretary, Marvin McIntyre, also a former newsreel contact in Washington, for Pathe, has also been the subject of recurrent newspaper reports that he, too, was resigning.

Paramount once before took a Presidential secretary for a job at the home office, in the person of George Akerson, secretary to President Hoover. Mr. Akerson was introduced by Paramount to the film business at an impressive social function, but little or nothing was heard of him after that in the line of duty until Sidney Kent, leaving Paramount, took the ex-Hooverite with him when he became president of Fox in January, 1932. Mr. Akerson eventually resigned from Fox and has been out of the news filmwise, since.

WPA in Film Theatres

The new Federal Theatre of the Air, sponsored by the Works Progress Administration and the National Broadcasting Company, was to make its debut over the Blue Network of the NBC system Wednesday night and at the same time it was made known that traveling stage units composed of the radio performers would use motion picture theatres on their tours. The program has no sponsor, as yet, and the tours will be handled by the NBC Artists' Bureau since the WPA is merely interested in finding employment for idle actors and actresses, and not in monetary gains that might accrue.

G-B Financial Details

The trade in Great Britain is awaiting with interest the consolidated statement of assets and liabilities of Gaumont-British Corporation following the annual meeting which was adjourned by a vote hostile to the directors. The next session is not expected before next month. The shareholders required that the figures be produced on or before the adjourned meeting.

Further details in this and other matters before the British cinema industry are recorded on page 92.

Goldsmith on Television

Public attention has been focussed on television by recent public tests and demonstrations in this country and in England. Predictions, statements, and announcements of what is wrong and what is right with television at the present moment have been numerous. Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting industrial engineer, in an address before the Radio Manufacturers Association in Rochester, pointed out the present and future needs of commercial television.

Dr. Goldsmith's ideas and a summary of other news about television are given on page 67.

More Action, Less Talk

More action and less talk is what pictures need, in the opinion of Leo J. McCarthy, Republic production assistant, who cites exhibitor experience as authority.

Mr. McCarthy is quoted on page 45.

Boycott

All pictures distributed by Tobis-America, subsidiary of Tobis International, Dutch producing and distributing company, will be boycotted by members of and sympathizers with the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights unless the company agrees to "cooperate" with it and stops importing pictures made by the Tobis German subsidiary. Withdrawal of two Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer short subjects on the Winter Olympic Games, sold to MGM by Tobis, after a protest made by the League, was followed this week by announcement of a campaign of protest by the American League against War and Fascism on the proposed production of "The Siege of Alcazar" by Twentieth Century-Fox.

The story is on page 43.

Book Week Films

Theatre owners have at their disposal a selection of some 168 feature motion pictures which directly lend themselves to exploitation tieups with schools, libraries and publishers during "National Book Week," now under way.

The list appears on page 77.

RKO Plan Near

A plan of reorganization for RKO may be completed in time to be filed with the United States district court in New York on Friday, it was said on good authority Tuesday.

"While we cannot be certain that the plan will be completed within the time set," the spokesman for the reorganizing factors said, "our aim today is to file a plan with the court on Friday."

Leo Spitz, president of RKO, who returned from Hollywood Monday, is understood to have spent considerable time at conferences with reorganization factors in Wall Street to expedite completion of the plan. The Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers interests are the proponents of the plan, with the law firm of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett acting as counsel.

Peace Pictures

The peace propagandists comprise the latest group to engage in a wholesale use of the motion picture to spread its doctrine, sending traveling projection units throughout the country in this behalf.

The movement is described on page 56.

This Week in Pictures

HOWDYING N'YAWK. After a lengthy stay in England. Grace Bradley, is she, whose sojourning included a featured role in GB's new Raoul Walsh production, as yet untitled.

BACK TO WORK. Lew Ayres, Paramount player and director, arriving on the Normandie from a vacation in Europe. He left immediately for the Paramount studio, where he is scheduled to begin a new picture soon.

PREVIEWING PRODUCT. Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, greeted by Adolph Zukor, production chief, on his arrival in Los Angeles, having come, with Stanton Griffis, executive board chairman, to study product.

NEW HAT FOR PAT. That is to say, for Patricia Ellis, Warner star. It's a felt turban with dashing grosgrain ribbon bow. Cute, eh? She certainly is.

TO ADVISE. Joseph Ermolieff, European director, arriving on the Normandie en route to the RKO Radio studio, where he will assist in the production of "Michael Strogoff."

AND MORE HAT! Something nifty, here, for a one-eyed gal. And yet, look who's under it! Warners' very sightly Jean Muir! Must be an optical exclusion.

ANNOUNCE DISTRIBUTION. Representatives of foreign press at luncheon given by Jack Barnstyn, foreign department head of Grand National, at which he announced arrangements for Japanese distribution of 34 films, with Ed Finney, Grand National advertising director (third from left, rear row).

EARS — AND HOW! Betty Jane Rhodes, youthful Universal featured player, now in "Jungle Jim," helps Dutchess, Springer spaniel, show off her prodigious ears. Twelve and a half inches from tip to tip, insists Betty.

ALUMNAE OF MUSICAL SERIES. Three classes of "Gold Diggers," which in this case means girls who have been in several issues of Warners' "Gold Digger" musicals and are together in the 1937 edition. Front row is 1933: Mildred Dixon, Dorothy O'Connell, Bee Stephens and Gloria Fayth. Second row, 1935: Lorraine Grey, Helen Seamen, Eleanor Bayley and Lois Lindsay. In the back row are the "Gold Diggers" added to the roster with the 1937 edition: Beth Renner, Ruth Eddings, Loretta Andrews and Jean Golo.

NORTH WOODS KITTEN. George Brent and Beverly Roberts very palsy-walsy with a curious striped animal native to the region where they have been on location for Warner's "God's Country and the Woman." They found out first that it was too young to have any sense.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE. A notable scene in RKO Radio's production of "Winterset," adapted from Maxwell Anderson's stage play. The players shown are Burgess Meredith and Margo, who as Mio and Miriamne, have the leads. Here they trudge across Brooklyn Bridge, as dawn breaks over the great city that has engulfed them.

SCREEN INTERVIEW. In production as Eddie Cantor arrives in New York from the West Coast. The comedian, now making "Saratoga Chips" for 20th Century-Fox, is being questioned by Ed Sullivan, Movietone editor, while A. A. Brown of Fox Movietone, looks on.

THEATRE AND EXCHANGE GET SECURITY TAX BLANKS

Methods of Procedure under Federal Tax Are Outlined for Employer and Employee in Motion Picture Business

Each Branch Office, Individual Theatre of a Circuit and Exchange Must Fill Out Forms, and Return Them by Saturday

Employers and employees in motion picture production, distribution and exhibition, as in most other American businesses, this week are receiving from the United States Government the forms and instructions under which they will be compelled, starting January 1st, to contribute under the new Social Security Act. Hundreds of thousands of workers in thousands of motion picture theatres, studios, exchanges and other film places are affected.

With the aid of 45,000 post offices, the Social Security Board at Washington on Monday put into action the plan that will set up for 26,000,000 working men and women Social Security accounts—compulsory "annuity insurance," which provides for retirement at age 65 with a monthly income, the amount of the income being based on the employe's previous wage records.

The only workers not affected are those engaged in agriculture, domestic service in private homes, government service, and in a few other excluded occupations.

Plans have been laid for delivery of the necessary forms and instructions to all employers and employees affected within the next few days. The Board is urging both employers and employees to refrain from making inquiries either of the Board or at their local post offices, concerning their respective parts in the plan, until after receipt of the official forms and instructions.

After that, the Board said, postal authorities and Social Security Board representatives will be available to answer all questions.

Beginning Monday, the post offices are distributing to employers a form known as "Employer's Application for Identification Number." This form will ask of the employer seven questions, answers to which will enable the Post Office Department to determine how many employes' application forms to deliver to each employer.

Forms for Employees

Then, beginning on November 24th, post offices will distribute to employees, through their employers, forms known as "Application for Social Security Account Number." These employees' application forms will be distributed to all work places and will also be available, after such distribution, at all post offices. Local postmasters will announce when these forms are available in the post offices. The employees' application asks such questions as name and address of the worker, name and address of his employer, the date and place of birth, and father's and mother's name. When the worker has provided this information on the application he may return it, without paying any postage, in any of five ways: (1) By handing it back to the employer; (2) By handing it to any labor organization of which the worker is a member; (3) By handing it to a letter-carrier; (4) By delivering it personally to any local post office, or (5) By mailing it—without postage—in a sealed envelope addressed simply: "Postmaster, Local."

REQUEST SHOWING OF SECURITY PICTURES

The Bureau of Informational Service of the Social Security Board in Washington is preparing and distributing throughout the United States for screening in theatres a short "newsreel" or "trailer" explaining in a graphic manner the purposes and provisions of the Social Security Act. The pictures also attempt to advise the 26,000,000 citizens affected by the act how to secure the benefits which it provides.

Theatre owners throughout the country have been advised by mail by the bureau of the availability of the shorts and urge them to put them on their screens as a real service to their respective communities and a patriotic service to the government.

Two new pictures, "Youthful Old Age" and "Applications for Happiness," are now ready for distribution. These and subsequent films will deal with specific parts of the act. Already released, the first picture, "We the People, and Social Security," has played some 2,000 theatres.

New York headquarters of the Social Security Board are piqued, however, over inability to obtain time on the screens of three national circuits for their pictures. Spokesmen for the circuits, on the other hand, said they had rejected the pictures solely because, in their opinion, they lacked sufficient entertainment merit to remove them from the advertising or propaganda class.

On the return of this information to the post office a Social Security account will be set up for each person eligible and he or she will be given a card, comparable to an insurance identification card, certifying that an account has been set up and bearing the number of the employees' Social Security account.

Regardless of the announcement by the Board that forms are being sent to employers, under a decision of the Treasury Department it is the responsibility of the employer to secure, fill out and return the appropriate employer's form, not later than November 21, and it is the responsibility of the employee to obtain, fill out and return the employee's application form not later than December 5th. It is necessary that each space on the blanks be filled out.

Each separate business establishment, branch office, individual theatre of a circuit or individual exchange of a national motion picture distributor must fill out individual forms and return them, likewise not later than November 21st, in the case of the employers' forms.

Employers with more than one business establishment are specifically required to authorize their representatives at each branch or each individual theatre, plant or other subsidiary establishment to furnish the information called for on "Form SS4" (the employers' application for identification number), and to return this promptly to the local postmaster in the community in which the branch is located.

"This does not necessarily mean multiple identification numbers," the Board said. "On the other hand, the return of Form SS4 by each business establishment will be for the mutual convenience of employers and employees."

The Board quoted Treasury Decision 4704, which defines "employer" as follows:

"Every person who is an employer on November 16, 1936, shall file an employer's application for identification number on Form SS4. The application shall be filed, in accordance with instructions on the form, with the postmaster from whose post office the business mail of the employer's establishment is delivered. If the employer has more than one establishment on November 16, 1936, the employer shall file a separate application for each establishment. The employer shall file each application under this paragraph on or before November 21, 1936. The term 'establishment' as used in this article means each separate place of employment. For example: If X Company has two retail stores and a manufacturing plant in New York, and a general office in Chicago, then it has four establishments. That is, each of the two retail stores, the manufacturing plant, and the general office is a separate establishment."

In the employers' forms, each business establishment is called upon to give its business name, a description of the nature of the business, the address, and the approximate number of persons now employed. Manufacturing concerns are asked to state the principal products, and other concerns are asked what the principal goods or services are that are sold or furnished. Each is also asked to state if the establishment is a branch or a subsidiary.

1,072 Typing Centers

When the application forms are received at the local post office they will be sent to the "typing center" serving the particular area. There will be 1,072 such typing centers in the country. At these centers, the permanent office record card and the card which certifies to the employee that a Social Security account number has been assigned to him will be prepared. The employee's account number card will be returned to him through the same channel by which his application reached the post office—that is, either through his employer, local union or otherwise. The employee's office record card will then be forwarded to the Records Division of the Social Security Board at Baltimore, where his ledger record card will be set up in his name.

PROCEDURE IN SOCIAL SECURITY LAW

Compared to Insurance

The Board explained that the federal old-age benefits are best understood when they are compared to insurance. They apply to wage and salary earners. Under the act, old age benefits are assured these men and women for life after 65. This income will be paid to them by the United States Government in monthly checks—like the installments on annuities from an insurance company. Or the cash value will be paid to the worker's family if he dies. "Whatever happens, the worker or his family gets back more money than he pays in," added the Board.

Like an insurance company, the worker's old age benefit from the Government must be paid for in advance. However, instead of weekly, monthly, quarterly, or yearly premiums the Government will collect through the employer weekly or monthly payments which are called taxes. These payments are to be shared equally by the employers and the workers and will be used by the government "only to pay cash benefits to the workers."

The size of the benefits will depend entirely upon how much the worker earns between January 1, 1937, and his 65th birthday. The maximum benefit is $85 a month for life after age 65. The smallest monthly benefit any worker can get who comes under these provisions is $10.

Rate of Payment Into Fund

During the next three years the employer and the employee will each pay at the rate of one cent on each dollar of the worker's earnings up to earnings of $3,000 a year. After the first three years the worker and the employer will each pay 1½ cents on each dollar of the worker's earnings up to earnings of $3,000 a year. The full scale of taxation to be paid each by the employer and the employee runs as follows:

Years	Per Cent of Worker's Earnings Up to Earnings of $3,000
1937, 1938, 1939....	1
1940, 1941, 1942....	1½
1943, 1944, 1945....	2
1946, 1947, 1948....	2½
1949 and subsequent years	3

The Government, under the compulsory aspects of the tax, will collect both the employer's and the employee's contributions to the tax directly from the employer, who will make deductions from his employees' salary checks.

Workers will receive the protection of the plan regardless of whether they change employers, so long as their position remains in the lines of business whose workers are eligible under the plan.

If an employer already has in operation an old age retirement plan for his employees the Government old age benefit program need not interfere with that. The employer can fit his plan into the Government program, the Government program, however, being compulsory under the law.

By November 24th, it is expected, the post office department will have delivered to each employer the proper quantity of blank applications for employee's account numbers. One copy of the application blank is to be distributed by the employer to each of his employes. If the quantity supplied by the post office is not sufficient, the employer is to notify his local postmaster for an additional supply.

The Social Security Act and its effect on theatres and other employers in motion pictures was explained in full in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last January 18th, pages 65 and 66.

It is anticipated that the extent to which the employer cooperates beyond the distribution of applications and instructions to his employees will vary, depending upon the facilities at his disposal and the character of his organization.

Many employers will desire to provide the local postmaster with facilities on their premises for completion of their employees' applications for account numbers. Such an arrangement may be made with the local postmaster.

Many employers who do not have the space or facilities necessary to provide for this work on the premises will want to collect the completed applications from their employees and transmit them to the postmaster. Such an arrangement may be made with the postmaster.

Certain employers will prefer merely to distribute the applications and allow the employees to deliver them to the postmaster, either personally, through the letter carrier, or by mail. Arrangements have been made by the postmaster to handle cases of that character.

Filing Through Other Channels

Some employees may prefer to file their applications through some other channel than their employer. In all such cases they should be permitted to do so, even though the employer is offering to perform this service for them. In no case may employees be refused permission to deliver or forward their own completed applications to the postmaster.

If the post office is cooperating to the extent of providing facilities for completion of employees' applications or is collecting the applications for transmission, the card certifying that an account has been set up in his name will be turned over to the post office for distribution to each employee whose application was transmitted through such post office.

If the employee elects to return his own application to the postmaster through some other channel, his account number card will be sent to him through the same channel.

The account number appearing on the employee account number card must in any case be entered in the post office records.

Responsibilities of Agencies

The Social Security Board has the responsibility of maintaining the wage records under the law, and the Treasury Department has the responsibility of collecting the taxes from employers and employees.

Fifty-six field offices of the Social Security Board will be established immediately to cooperate with the post office department in assignment of Social Security accounts. These offices will be under the direct supervision of the board, and will cooperate closely with the central accounting post offices in the districts where they will be located. The actual work of obtaining from employers and employees the information required to assign the Social Security accounts will be done by the post office department. The Board's new offices will work with postmasters, employers and employees in the assembling of this information and the setting up of the workers' employment records. The field office personnel will be drawn from civil-service lists.

The new field offices will be located as follows:

REGION I—Portland, Me.; Concord, N. H.; Burlington, Vt.; Boston, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; New Haven, Conn.

REGION II—New York, N. Y.

REGION III—Newark, N. J.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Wilmington, Del.

"THE only way to make money in my kind of house," says the boss of the Princess Theatre, "is to keep your prices down and give 'em the kind of pictures they want. Most of my trade are farmers. There's not much manufacturing here. They're just simple folks and they want pictures they can understand. And, boy, they can understand 'Rhythm on the Range', 'The Texas Rangers', and 'The Big Broadcast of 1937'. Every one of them packed the house for me. Why, 'The Big Broadcast' could have run a week. Yes, sir, Paramount sure knows how to hand us small town exhibitors the kind of grossers we want."

Irene Hileman, Rushville's ace waitress says give her Gary Cooper in "The Plainsman".

Johnny Graves, one of Rushville's leading "Hopalong Cassidy" fans.

Grocer Irv Miller, only Martha Raye can make him smile.

Money on the line from the townfolk, marching in to see Fred MacMurray in "The Texas Rangers".

Figures prove Roy Harrold's experience typical:

Here is the actual box-office record of recent Paramount releases in towns of under ten thousand population as estimated by a Nationwide check of exhibitors' grosses:

(Normal business is 100% in the tabulation below)

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE	(Released July 31)	165%
MY AMERICAN WIFE	(Released August 7)	120%
THE TEXAS RANGERS	(Released August 28)	160%
THE GENERAL DIED AT DAWN	(Released Sept. 4)	140%
THE BIG BROADCAST OF 1937	(Released October 9)	180%
WEDDING PRESENT	(Released October 16)	115%

(These figures show that Paramount has released Six top money makers in a period of under Ninety days, a record that speaks for itself.)

No wonder these pictures have been sell outs.

Look at 'em!

Francis Lederer and Ann Sothern in

"MY AMERICAN WIFE"

with Fred Stone, Billie Burke, Ernest Cossart, Grant Mitchell. Directed by Harold Young

One of the best light comedies of the year . . . Francis Lederer in his swellest role . . . a new and even more exciting Ann Sothern, plus the grandest bunch of laugh-getters in the business . . . Fred Stone, Billie Burke, Ernest Cossart, and Grant Mitchell. That's what every exhibitor who's played "My American Wife" has told us. It has the good salty flavor of true American humor. It's another "Ruggles of Red Gap." No smart exhibitor can afford to miss it.

Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll in

"THE GENERAL DIED AT DAWN"

with William Frawley, Dudley Digges, Akim Tamiroff, Porter Hall, J. M. Kerrigan. Screen play by Clifford Odets. Based on a story by Charles G. Booth. Directed by Lewis Milestone

A real big-time thriller . . . with a cast that lifts it into the top brackets, as the returns from theatres all over the country prove . . . Gary Cooper and beautiful Madeleine Carroll head a cast which includes such box-office names as William Frawley, Dudley Digges, Akim Tamiroff, Porter Hall and J. M. Kerrigan. Lewis Milestone, one of the top directors of A-1 adventure pictures directed this story of love and war. It started breaking records in New York and has been breaking them all over the country.

"THE TEXAS RANGERS"

with Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker, Lloyd Nolan, Edward Ellis, Bennie Bartlett. Produced and Directed by King Vidor

"THE BIG BROADCAST OF 1937"

with Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Benny Goodman and his Orchestra, Shirley Ross, Ray Milland, Frank Forest, Benny Fields, Leopold Stokowski and his Symphony Orchestra, Eleanore Whitney. Directed by Mitchell Leisen

As Variety says, "'THE BIG BROADCAST OF 1937' is one of the big pictures of 1936". . . And all we can say is look at the cast list and you'll see why. Here it is: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Benny Goodman and his Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski and his Symphony Orchestra, Shirley Ross, Ray Milland, Frank Forest, Benny Fields, Louis DaPron, Eleanore Whitney, Larry Adler, Virginia Weidler, David Holt and Billy Lee. You double your average gross with this picture, and want extra playing time.

Joan Bennett and Cary Grant in

"WEDDING PRESENT"

with George Bancroft, Conrad Nagel, Gene Lockhart. A B. P. Schulberg Production. Based on the Story by Paul Gallico. Directed by Richard Wallace

This is the Saturday Evening Post yarn with Joan Bennett and Cary Grant, in the lead roles, which has been clicking everywhere it's played. When that combination did so well in "Big Brown Eyes", it was naturally expected an even better story would set them on top of the world. By the looks of the returns coming in, they've sure lived up to expectations. This is another "must" picture for your theatre. It's a light comedy-romance special, you can't afford to pass up.

. . . and here's what the small town exhibitors of America can look forward to from PARAMOUNT in the next few months . . . A Series of Down to Earth Pictures which will continue to prove that it pays to play a Paramount Picture in your town!

Paramount Pictures

I can't wait to see Gladys George in "Valiant". I saw it advertised in all the women's magazines.

"VALIANT is the WORD for CARRIE" with Gladys George, Arline Judge, John Howard, Dudley Digges, Harry Carey, Isabel Jewell. Directed by Wesley Ruggles

"Valiant" has already proved itself a major box-office picture. At the Four Star Theatre in Los Angeles it broke all records. And similar reports are coming in from cities from coast to coast. Gladys George, a newcomer to the screen, but one of the most famous actresses on Broadway, has received rave notices everywhere the picture has played. This picture has tremendous woman appeal. Your fans have read the ads in The Ladies Home Journal, The Woman's Home Companion, and McCall's. They're waiting to see the Barry Bennefield best seller on your screen. So go to it!

"HIDEAWAY GIRL"

with Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Robert Cummings. Directed by George Archainbaud

Here's what the fans want . . . Martha Raye again, singing, dancing, clowning through a fast-paced comedy-romance with music. Beautiful Shirley Ross, fresh from her smash debut in "The Big Broadcast of 1937", sings a bunch of new songs that are radio hit tunes. The story is a swell yarn taken from one of the popular magazines. This is one of those light, laughing, musical pictures which you are always begging the exchange for.

"COLLEGE HOLIDAY"

with Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Mary Boland, Martha Raye, Marsha Hunt, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs. Directed by Frank Tuttle

This is the Paramount Christmas Holiday Special . . . and what a special . . . It's another "Big Broadcast of 1937". Jack Benny leads a cast including George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye and Bob Burns, Mary Boland and a bunch more of top name draws. Remember what "Collegiate" did last year? Well, watch this beat those figures. We suggest you take a tip from the women folk and do your Christmas shopping early. With "College Holiday" on your list, you can be sure of a holiday business that'll break all records.

Dorothy Lamour in
"THE JUNGLE PRINCESS"

with Ray Milland, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman
Directed by William Thiele

For years you've been asking us for another good hard-hitting jungle-adventure picture like "King of the Jungle". Well, we've had a swell jungle yarn in our possession for months and months, waiting to find the right kind of a girl to play the lead. And, boys, we've found her. Dorothy Lamour, beautiful radio singer, has a screen personality that's something to write home about. She has allure, looks, and she fits the role of "The Jungle Princess" to perfection. E. Lloyd Sheldon, who produced "King of the Jungle", has surrounded her with a swell cast and there's enough excitement for a couple of jungle thrillers.

MAE WEST in "Go West Young Man" with Warren William, Randolph Scott

Alice Brady, Elizabeth Patterson, Lyle Talbot, Isabel
Jewell, Margaret Perry. An Emanuel Cohen Production.
Dialogue by Mae West. Directed by Henry Hathaway

Here's the picture you're going to label "The Best of the Wests". We went out and bought "Personal Appearance" which ran for a year and a half on the Main Stem, because every single movie-minded person who saw the show called it a natural for Mae. In addition we have given Miss West the strongest supporting cast she has ever had, including such marquee names as Warren William, Randolph Scott, and Alice Brady. And to top it all, no less a director than Henry Hathaway, who gave you "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine", is at the reins. When we tell you this is Mae West Down on the Farm . . . well, write your own ticket.

Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur in
CECIL B. DEMILLE'S "THE PLAINSMAN" with James Ellison, Charles Bickford, Helen Burgess,

Porter Hall. Produced and Directed by Cecil B. De Mille

Remember Gary Cooper in "The Virginian". Remember "The Covered Wagon". . . We don't have to ask you about "The Texas Rangers". . . the figures are right in front of you. Well, add those three and you'll get some idea of what to expect in "The Plainsman". For we've teamed Gary Cooper with Jean Arthur, the girl who helped him break records with "Mr. Deeds". We've taken one of the swellest stories in the history of the Old West . . . the fighting romance between Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane . . . and we've given the whole thing one of those super-productions which only Cecil B. DeMille can turn out. The battle scenes alone would put this in the big money class. Get an early booking. It'll be out in January.

Edward Arnold and Francine Larrimore in
"JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN"

with Gail Patrick, George Bancroft. a B. P. Schulberg Production.
Directed by Richard Wallace

Here is a picture every small town in America is going to go for. We've taken the biggest news story in years—the great drought—and turned it into one of the most dynamic dramas of this or any other year. Edward Arnold plays the lead; Francine Larrimore, a grand actress, and Gail Patrick, a big draw after "My Man Godfrey", share the feminine honors. We sincerely believe this will be a major picture on your schedule . . . and we don't mean artistically . . . . we mean box-office.

Gee, I know you—
you got a crush on
Fred MacMurray!

Gladys Swarthout and Fred MacMurray in

"CHAMPAGNE WALTZ"

with Jack Oakie, Veloz and Yolanda, Herman Bing, Vivienne Osborne, Frank Forest, Benny Baker, Ernest Cossart. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland

This is the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee picture. Mr. Zukor chose it himself. And when you see it screened, you're going to take your hat off to the Dean of Motion Picture showmen. For "The Champagne Waltz" is one of those pictures that just has everything. Gladys Swarthout has a part that is going to make her one of the truly great stars. Fred MacMurray hits a new high in smart, smooth romantic comedy. And the supporting cast headed by Jack Oakie and including Benny Baker, Herman Bing, and Vivienne Osborne hit a new high for comedy . . . and don't forget the biggest drawing dance team in America, Veloz and Yolanda.

Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray in

FRANK LLOYD'S PRODUCTION

"MAID OF SALEM" with

Harvey Stephens, Gale Sondergaard, Louise Dresser, Edward Ellis, Virginia Weidler, Bonita Granville. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Produced by Howard Estabrook

You've all been asking what Frank Lloyd, director of "Mutiny on the Bounty", "Under Two Flags" and "Cavalcade" was going to turn out for Paramount. Here it is . . . Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray in "Maid of Salem". The story has all the drive, the mob effects, the big time punch for which Lloyd is famous. And above all . . . it has heart interest . . . Lloyd chose it himself from a couple of hundred scripts. And we've spared no expense to help him put this in the top rank of box-office pictures.

Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray in

"SWING HIGH, SWING LOW"

with Charles Butterworth, Dorothy Lamour,
Harvey Stephens. Directed by Mitchell Leisen

This picture gives you Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, the team who put over "Hands Across the Table", at the very peak of their popularity. The story? It's one of those fast-stepping, wise-cracking, light comedies you are always asking for . . . plus. The story is laid in the Panama Canal Zone with Carole and Fred getting into more jams a minute than a cockeyed marine in a Cristobal night club. Fred, who's been holding out on us ever since he left the band circuits, trots out his old sax and goes to town . . . Need we suggest you keep an eye out for the release date?

Gary Cooper in

"SOULS AT SEA"

with Frances Dee, Helen Burgess, Robert Cummings, Porter Hall, Fay Holden, Anthony Nace, Sir Guy Standing, Colin Tapley, Virginia Weidler, Harvey Stephens. Produced by Grover Jones and Henry Hathaway. Directed by Henry Hathaway

Whenever a picture company gets a big time sea story . . . that's news! In "Souls at Sea" we honestly believe we've got the best sea picture in a whale's age. And here's why: the story has power, drive, emotional appeal, all the elements of "Mutiny on the Bounty". The cast is tops . . . Gary Cooper heads the list. And those two lads who built "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" for you are co-producers . . . Henry Hathaway, ace action director, and Grover Jones, the top script writer in Hollywood.

Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott in

"HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME"

with Dorothy Lamour, William Frawley, Elizabeth Patterson, Akim Tamiroff. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian

Memorize these facts! A story with the sweep, the power of "Cimarron". . . the thrilling discovery of oil in the Pennsylvania hills . . . America's Black Gold Rush. A cast which would put over any picture: Irene Dunne, glorious singing star of "Show Boat", Randolph Scott, Dorothy Lamour, Paramount's proudest find in months . . . and a list of box-office favorites. Music: the one and only Jerome Kern, composer of "Show Boat" and a hundred hit scores, collaborating with Oscar Hammerstein II. Direction: Rouben Mamoulian. We'll say Paramount went "High, Wide and Handsome" on this one.

Well, sister, guess we'll have to get down to the pictures tonight. I kinda like this Bing Crosby fella.

"WAIKIKI WEDDING"

with Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, George Barbier. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland

Imagine Bing Crosby and Shirley Ross singing an Hawaiian love song! Imagine Martha Raye doing a swing-hula. Imagine Bob Burns among the pineapple orchards of the old Pacific! No, don't bother to imagine them. Just plan to show 'em all to your fans when Paramount releases the "Rhythm on the Range" of the South Seas . . . Bing Crosby's next big-time musical comedy box-office winner. Edward Sutherland, who's turned out plenty of ace musical pictures, will direct "Waikiki Wedding". And we don't need to tell you there'll be another bunch of typical Paramount hit tunes.

Claudette Colbert in

"SHE MET HIM IN PARIS"

Produced and Directed by Wesley Ruggles

"The Gilded Lily". . ."The Bride Comes Home". . . red letter days in your calendar . . . all right, here's another one coming up . . . The same director-star combine that made those smart, light comedies goes to town for you again . . . Wesley Ruggles directs Claudette Colbert in a swift moving, laugh-a-minute romance of the kind they know how to turn out to perfection. Don't miss up on it.

Sylvia Sidney and Fred MacMurray in

"THAT'S WHAT GIRLS ARE MADE OF"

a B. P. Schulberg Production

The successful combination of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine". . . Sylvia Sidney and Fred MacMurray together again in another hard-boiled romance of a couple of youngsters who prefer to fight their way to the altar. The picture is still in the scripting stage. But we can promise you it's being built to the Sidney-MacMurray specifications . . . and that means money in the till for you.

SIX "HOP-A-LONG CASSIDYS"

Produced by Harry Sherman

For a year now "Hop-A-Long Cassidy" has meant box-office wherever Westerns are popular. (You tell us where they aren't?) Here is Harry Sherman with six more of them, even smoother, bigger productions than the first successful series. William Boyd, of course, continues in the name role. That bright new star Jimmy Ellison is teamed with him. And there's plenty of zip-bang, knock 'em down action . . . plus the thing which takes these pictures out of the ordinary Western bracket . . . production! Better get in and rope 'em all.

"My advice to any exhibitor who wants to enjoy life in a small town is to keep your prices down and play good down to earth pictures . . . the kind Paramount is turning out these days."

Roy Harrold is from Indiana. Maybe you're from Missouri. All right. Come into the Paramount exchange and see for yourself some of this new Paramount product. Ask to see the figures. They'll prove to you that what we've said in these pages is as right as rain . . . that no small town exhibitor can go wrong if he joins the thousands of successful moving picture theatre owners who insist

It Pays to Play a Paramount Picture!

20TH-FOX WILL FOLLOW UNIVERSAL IN ACCEPTING SELF-REGULATION

Universal Makes Its Concessions Under MPTOA's 10-Point Program Retroactive to Beginning of 1936-37 Season

Allied Attacks MPTOA Program as "Maneuver" to Circumvent Neely-Pettengill Bill to Bar Block Booking

The motion picture industry this week witnessed several significant developments involving trade practices, virtually all pointing to eventual trade practice regulation, voluntary or otherwise. Highlights of the marked activity follow:

Twentieth Century-Fox will be the second large distributor to adopt the MPTOA's trade practice program.

Universal's acceptance, last week, which began the voluntary adoption by distributors of industry self-regulation, was made retroactive to the beginning of the 1936-37 season.

Announcements of acceptance by other companies, while still awaited, were expected to embody industry-wide approval of local conciliation boards for adjusting distributor-exhibitor differences.

The national Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors branded the MPTOA program a "maneuver" to circumvent an anti-block booking bill in Congress, and promised it would continue "with the utmost vigor" its campaign to force fair trade practices through legislation.

The National Council for Industrial Progress formally invited the motion picture industry to Washington on December 10th and 11th to consider reports on industrial policy, hours, wages and trade practices.

The MPTO of Maryland, the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, and the MPTO of Nebraska and Iowa asked relief from certain trade practices.

RKO's test action on the constitutionality of Ohio's anti-playdate law will be tried Friday.

A final draft of Twentieth Century-Fox's response to the 10-point trade practice program was completed Tuesday and forwarded for approval to Sidney R. Kent, president, now in Hollywood. Indications are that the statement will not be returned to New York to be made public before the first of next week.

The company's statement of policy on the exhibitor proposals has been delayed due to the absence from the city of various officials who had to be consulted both on the decisions involved and the drafting of the statement. These included Sidney R. Kent, John D. Clark, W. C. Michel and Felix Jenkins. Mr. Jenkins returned from the coast Tuesday and is understood to have given the statement a final inspection from the distributor's legal viewpoint.

Policy statements from RKO, MGM and Paramount are expected in the near future.

ALLIED CITES VOTES OF BLOCK SALES FOES

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, from its national headquarters in Washington, this week, warned its membership, in a bulletin, that:

"Both Senator Neely and Congressman Pettengill came through the election with flying colors, as did all of the other avowed supporters of the bill to prohibit compulsory block booking and blind selling. In addition, the Motion Picture Research Council, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and other national and regional organizations favoring this legislation are preparing to fight for it again this year.

"Not only are these efforts being made in behalf of the legislation, but legislators and members of the public are being apprised of the methods employed by certain spokesmen for the producer-distributors last winter so that those spokesmen may be properly dealt with if they attempt to repeat their tactics at the forthcoming session of Congress."

The Columbia statement will be delayed until the return of company officials from the coast. United Artists is reported not to have made its final decision as yet.

The concessions announced last week by Universal under the MPTOA 10-point program are effective immediately and apply to contracts already closed for the current season, irrespective of the provisions of those contracts, as well as to all deals to be made in the future, R. H. Cochrane, president of the company, said.

The announcement referred specifically to the 10 per cent elimination privilege about which a question had been raised. While the company cannot reprint its contracts for the current season, measures will be taken to make the new cancellation provisions effective at once, the statement said.

"Any exhibitor who has contracted for 100 per cent of Universal's 1936-37 feature product," the announcement read, "and whose contract is in good standing on the date of his application for elimination, will be entitled to exercise his elimination privilege irrespective of whether the average rental was more or less than $250. We will also accept notice of elimination of any picture within 10 days after notice of its availability to the particular exhibitor instead of within 14 days after the release date as formerly provided. We have not as yet had an opportunity to confer with exhibitors as to a provision which will insure against too many pictures being eliminated during the early part of the contract, but for the present we will permit two cancellations out of the first 20 pictures in any case where the exhibitor is otherwise entitled to elimination."

Ed Kuykendall, president of the M. P. T. O. A., in a letter to Mr. Cochrane, Tuesday, asked Universal to reconsider its stipulation that a 10 per cent cancellation will apply only to exhibitors contracting for the company's entire lineup, and to ask further consideration for the proposal that distributors make available an optional short form of contract.

Universal rejected this proposal, citing legal objections and the company's experience with former unsuccessful attempts within the industry to draft such a contract.

Mr. Kuykendall's letter suggesed that such a contract as that proposed may have been misunderstood by the distributor. He said that while the contract form suggested by the exhibitors "does not simplify the terms and conditions of the contract itself," it would have the effect of facilitating the "physical and mechanical handling of the contract."

The points on which Universal and the MPTOA are in agreement as to the need for corrective action, but which the exhibitor organization hopes to regulate by means of the local conciliation boards, are: unreasonable clearance, overbuying to deprive a competitor of product; cut-rate competition between theatres and designated playdates. Non-theatrical competition also is suggested as a problem for the boards.

Universal was the first company to state publicly its policy in relation to the trade practice reforms sought by the MPTOA. In addition to the liberalized 10 per cent cancellation referred to in Mr. Cochrane's statement, the company also pledged itself to refrain from attempts to collect the score charge and offered its cooperation in establishment of local conciliation boards through which the exhibitor sponsors hope to achieve solutions for the remaining problems covered in the program.

Formation of these boards, it was indicated, will be approved by virtually all large distributors. The cooperation of only four companies would be sufficient to assure their establishment, exhibitor spokesmen said.

Would Be Organized Locally

The organization of the boards would be undertaken locally with nominated exhibitor and branch manager representation, according to present plans. The number of members, their selection and the type of complaint which would fall under their jurisdiction, would be determined in individual cases. Their functions, findings and effectiveness would be completely dependent on voluntary action.

The MPTOA expects that complaints of overbuying or inability to obtain sufficient

THREE EXHIBITOR UNITS ASK HELP

Secretary Roper Believes NRA Objectives Inevitable

The Federal Government and Congress will be required to take steps to attain the objectives of the National Recovery Act, unless business, industry, labor and the consumer cooperate in achieving these ends, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper said in an address prepared for delivery over a national radio network Monday night.

Mr. Roper, looking into the future and especially at President Franklin D. Roosevelt's program for the next four years, listed other needs as follows:

A Federal unemployment census; resumption by state and local governmental agencies of their normal obligations, taken over during the years of the depression by the national government; a taxation study covering local, state and national fields looking to the proper distribution of tax revenues among all political units; sufficient government regulation of business to prevent competition from destroying itself without impeding fair and legitimate competition.

"This," Secretary Roper said, "is my interpretation of the goals and objectives of the Roosevelt Administration."

product will be the most numerous to be presented to the boards for action. Unreasonable clearance, unfair competitive tactics and non-theatrical competition also are expected to be brought before the arbiters for consideration. Many such complaints will involve grievances between exhibitors only, and, having no bearing on contractual terms, solutions could be attempted immediately, it is said.

The board's findings will not be enforceable and their utility and effectiveness will depend largely upon the ability of the members to bring together the principals involved in a dispute and assist in the adjustment of their differences. The extent to which branch and home office cooperation is forthcoming, once solutions have been agreed upon between the parties to a complaint, particularly in the case of overbuying adjustments, also will go far toward spelling the success or failure of the boards.

Allied States Association, national independent exhibitor organization, in a bulletin to its members asserts that "the obvious purpose" of the MPTOA program is an attempt to "sidetrack the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking bill," which Allied again will try to have passed at the coming session of Congress.

The bulletin reviews the progress of the MPTOA program and charges that it was first proposed by C. C. Pettijohn of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, after the hearings on the Neely-Pettengill bill before the House and Senate committees last winter.

Says "Log Jam" Has Broken

"Now on the eve of a new Congress and the imminent resumption of efforts to pass the Neely-Pettengill bill," the account continues, "the log jam has broken and Universal has revealed its response to the MPTOA 'demands.' Paramount, Columbia, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, MGM and United Artists are expected to make separate responses to Kuykendall to be released at strategic intervals."

Allied has been skeptical of the negotiations, the bulletin declares, "because of the circumstances which gave birth to the idea. It seemed to us that the obvious purpose was merely to sidetrack the anti-block booking bill and that, in any case, the spectacle of Haysite exhibitors negotiating with Haysite distributors concerning the rights and interests of independent exhibitors did not inspire confidence."

The organization's campaign of legislation and litigation has been approved and "is in full swing" in New Jersey, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Indiana, the bulletin reports. The program now includes a bill to divorce production and distribution from exhibition and a proposed suit on behalf of an unnamed exhibitor "whose town has been invaded by an affiliated chain and whose product has been cut off as a result thereof."

A blanket invitation to attend the next meeting of the National Council for Industrial Progress has been extended to the motion picture industry by Major George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's coordinator for industrial cooperation. The meeting, to be held in Washington December 10th and 11th, will pass upon reports of committees set up last year to study industrial policies such as hours and wages, fair trade practices, anti-trust laws. It appears that the film industry will send representatives.

The council was created by Major Berry last year following a turbulent general session at which practically all the representatives of the important industries withdrew from further participation in protest against what were characterized as steam-roller methods. With only representatives of labor and a small group of independents from a few minor industries remaining, Major Berry set up the organization which was intended originally as a successor to the NRA. During the campaign the organization was dormant, but the reelection of President Rosevelt was taken as a basis for a new NRA drive.

Organized labor, which threw its support to the President during the campaign and is now a powerful influence with the Administration, is preparing to ask Congress to enact legislation reviving the principles of the NRA. This drive will be undertaken in the face of opposition in Administration ranks, where it is believed the country first should adopt a constitutional amendment redefining interstate commerce so as to give the Government control of hours and wages and other labor problems.

President Roosevelt is believed to be considering the proposal of a constitutional amendment, but he is represented as being opposed to any precipitate legislation reviving industrial control which might again run afoul of the courts.

Resolutions calling for 25 per cent cancellation privileges in the Maryland territory, "to prevent the unwholesome and uneconomic practice of double billing from gaining a foothold in this community," were passed at the last meeting of the MPTO of Maryland in Baltimore. The resolutions point out that many inexpensive films have been made for inclusion in duals and that the MPTO unit members feel they should have the privilege of refusing these in return for maintaining single features in Baltimore.

An attack on distributors who encourage opening of closed or new theatres as a means of getting higher film rentals from exhibitors already operating in a territory, was the chief feature of a meeting of the UMPTO in Philadelphia this week. The unit moved to ascertain whether national support could be obtained for the proposed 30-day "playdate strike." Selling policies were discussed and cooperation with Michael O'Toole of the Comerford circuit on a legislative program was taken up. Forty theatre men attended the session.

Asserting that their efforts to obtain justice from distributors have been futile, members of the MPTO of Nebraska and Iowa concluded their meeting at Omaha with resolutions stating in part:

"We will help to enact the Pettengill bill or any other national legislation which will assure us the operation of our theatres at a reasonable profit and make it possible to show desirable pictures.

"We hold that broadcasting by film stars is detrimental to theatre owners and ask that the practice be discontinued between the hours of 7 and 10 in the evening."

Playdate Law Fight Begun

Testimony before trial in the case to determine the constitutionality of the Ohio law barring preferred playing time sales agreements was heard this week in the office of Schwartz & Rocker, Cleveland, designated by Attorney General John Bricker to represent the state. Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board of Allied States, assisted Ben Schwartz in the taking of testimony.

Lester A. Jaffe of Paxton & Seasongood, Cincinnati, represented RKO, which is attacking the constitutionality of the law.

A hearing in circuit court, Columbus, was set for Friday.

INDUSTRY "FASCISTIC AND INFANTILE," WESTERN WRITERS' LEFT WING SAYS

Viola Brothers Shore Attacks Industry's Own Censorship; Coast Writers Say Film Standards Rise with Public Demand

by WALTER BARUSCH

in San Francisco

The motion picture industry in general, and "liberal" Hollywood scenarists in particular, came in for a sharp attack at the motion picture session of the Western Writers Congress in San Francisco Sunday.

Speaking from the floor, a few excited "left wing intellectuals" told Chairman Donald Ogden Stewart, Hollywood screen writer and humorist, that the industry was "Fascistic, infantile and anti-social," and that the scenarists of Hollywood themselves were "literary prostitutes engaged in passing the buck."

"Passing what buck and to whom?" was Mr. Stewart's prompt query. Mr. Stewart reiterated the general theme of papers read by the Hollywood folk, which was that the industry would provide films with higher artistic and more honest social standards whenever they were demanded by the public. Pictures glorifying fascism, sex pictures and every other type of picture were ultimately a question of consumer demand, he said.

Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell, Paramount dialogue writers, were on the platform, but did not speak. Miss Parker, however, rose to support Mr. Stewart with the single statement that "whether or not the public got more honest pictures, there was no question of the Hollywood writers ever quitting fighting for them."

Motley Views Represented

The Western Writers Congress, a three-day conference of Pacific Coast authors to consider the subject of "the writer in relation to contemporary social problems," drew some 50 nationally known figures of the novel, non-fiction, screen, play and radio fields. Others of the 400 in attendance were "leftwing intellectuals," "would-be" or "amateur writers," "liberal political journalists" and PWA Project writers. The prevailing political tone was pink rather than red.

Papers by John Bright, Paramount adoptor, and Viola Brothers Shore, free-lance scenarist, were read.

Mr. Bright's topic was "Fascism," Miss Shore's "Censorship." Mr. Bright was not present.

"Hollywood will give the public what it wants; Hollywood is not a factory for Fascism," said Mr. Bright's paper, which was read to the group by one of the individuals who later attacked it most strongly.

Mr. Bright pointed out that the reading public and the movie-going public were by no means the same.

"Of 3,000 individuals who attended one performance of the screen's 'Anthony Adverse,' a survey showed that only 160 had ever started to read the book, and only 14 had finished it," his paper said.

"Motion pictures are the richest medium ever known for the transmission of thought and emotion," the paper concluded. "While the public demands films which dilute and distort life, Hollywood will continue to do just that; but when the public demands mature pictures, Hollywood will give such pictures to the public."

Starting with a few ironic comments directed at censorship in general, the industry's self-imposed censorship, and a studio "Don't" list for writers from which she read excerpts, Viola Brothers Shore had the audience chuckling contentedly for some minutes before she grew serious.

"These elements are amusing," she said, "but it is only a short step from 'don't do this' to 'do this.' We must not forget that the history of American life is the history of the struggle against censorship. Today the fight against censorship is the fight against world fascism."

Contradiction Charged

An unidentified speaker from the floor called out for attention to the "illogic" of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in banning Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" from film production while the same organization approved the recent decision of Twentieth Century-Fox to make "Siege of the Alcazar," which, it was declared, will "glorify the revolt of an insurgent minority against the legally constituted government of Spain."

Such a contradiction, it was declared, was an example of the fascism against which the Hollywood screen writers should fight.

A number of papers by screen writers, previously announced to be read at the meeting, were not given, nor did their authors attend. Among these were "Hollywood and Fascism," by Guy Endore; "Makers of Mass Neuroses," by Nathaniel West, and "Motion Pictures and the Left Critics," by Budd Shulberg, editor of the Dartmouth College paper and son of B. P. Shulberg, producer in whose studio scenario department he worked during the summer.

"Boycott" Alliance Announced

Inauguration in New York of the Motion Picture Patrons Alliance was announced from the floor of the Congress by Michael Gold, radical writer and editor, and author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," scheduled for forthcoming production by the WPA Theatre Project in several cities.

Five million members would be sought, Mr. Gold said, with the object of boycotting "socially undesirable" films throughout the country. "We will fight fascism in the motion pictures," he declared, "where the producers will feel it most—at the boxoffice."

Schlank Succeeds Lotz

Irving Schlank, United Artists manager at Salt Lake City, has been transferred to Chicago to take the managerial post of Harry Lotz, who died last week.

Hays Discusses Films with Pope

Pope Pius XI on Tuesday received Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., at Vatican City and granted him a half-hour audience during which motion pictures were discussed, according to the Associated Press. Mr. Hays was said to have described the interview as the "apex" of his 15 years as motion picture "supervisor," and that he found himself in accord with the Pontiff's views on the morals of modern motion pictures, adding that he was "greatly impressed with the energy and freshness" displayed by the Pope, said the dispatch. Mr. Hays also asserted he admired the support the Pope has given to every step in human progress.

Mr. Hays reached Italy this week on the first leg of his vacation tour of Europe, which will take him up through France and to London, where he will be honored on December 1 by a luncheon or dinner by the Federation of British Industries Film Group. Mrs. Hays is accompanying him.

The Holy Father expressed to Mr. Hays his approval and appreciation of the progress of American motion pictures and the hope that this would continue. Mr. Hays said he was happy to assure him of the American producers' purpose to that end.

As for the complaints that American distributors proffer against the Italian government over the inability to take out of Italy more than 13,000,000 lire of their annual turnover of between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 lire, the New York Times reports that Mr. Hays is not dealing with them directly. The newspaper reports that the matter is now in the hands of William Phillips, the United States Ambassador, who will take it up within the next few days with Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister.

Officers of Selznick Board Are Reelected

All officers of Selznick International were reelected at the meeting of the board of directors in Hollywood Monday night.

Following the meeting, David O. Selznick refused to affirm or deny reports that the company will increase its production to 12 or 15 pictures annually, but he said that considerably more money has been placed at the company's disposal for production purposes.

Musicians' Union Will Parade

The New York Musicians' Union, Local 802, is planning a parade of members and sympathizers Saturday to further its campaign to bring back actors and actresses as well as musicians to motion picture theatres in Manhattan. The parade will start at union headquarters in Times Square and move down Broadway to the City Hall.

Pioneer Claims Radio Kills Small Towns

J. J. Newcomb at Hutchinson, Kan., Protests Use of Stars

by KENNETH FORCE
in Kansas City

Radio is preventing the small town motion picture theatre owner from making a living out of exhibition, in the opinion of J. J. Newcomb, a pioneer exhibitor for 30 years. "There are too many picture stars appearing on radio," he declares. "They ought to take the picture stars off the radio and keep them there—and vice versa with radio stars."

Mr. "Newk" Newcomb was on Kansas City's Film Row the other day, on one of his very few film buying expeditions, greeting friends. He doesn't get in very often from Burlington, Kan. In that town of 2,500 for more than 30 years he has operated Newk's, the only motion picture theatre.

Mr. Newcomb also operates Newk's hotel, Newk's bill poster plant, and used to operate Newk's cigar factory, "but cigarets put us out of that business."

Ever since the theatre opened it has been housed in the same building, which Mr. Newcomb owns.

Newk recalls that when he started they were putting out film from Artcraft in half-reel lengths. There got to be 15 or 20 companies and the film increased to the prodigious length of two reels. All the companies quit, and exhibitors came to town, laid down their money on General Film's counter, and that was all there was to it.

"That put the traveling man out of business."

"In the little town no picture ought to be sold on percentage," he believes. "Our people save up to see the big pictures, so we lose on the small ones. We've got to make it up on the big ones.

"But I'm glad they send out checkers, even so. These film companies wouldn't believe how little business we do unless they saw it for themselves.

"All the cheap places they open up, they hurt the show business. They cut prices, and then give away a lot of merchandise. No bank night for me." Newk has reseated the theatre in the past year and has remodeled and redecorated frequently in the three decades he has been an exhibitor.

Newk has used two operators in his booth since he started in business, and he's still using them. He wouldn't let one man operate his equipment—"It isn't safe." He hasn't had a fire since he started. His two operators have been with him 26 years.

With 350 seats, Newk charges 10 and 25 cents, every night in the week, every week in the year. The price always has been that, and will never be less, so long as he's running the house. "No family nights, none of those things."

They say Newk has been operating a theatre continuously longer than any other exhibitor in Kansas.

Complaint Against Erpi And A.T.&T. Upheld

Federal Judge John C. Knox in New York last Saturday refused to dismiss a bill of complaint filed by Stanley K. Oldder, as assignee for creditors of Pacent Electric Company, Inc., against American Telephone & Telegraph and Electrical Research Products, Inc., for $6,000,000, charging violation of the anti-trust law.

Judge Knox, in an opinion, said: "The complaint, which must be taken as true, discloses a vast scheme to prevent or diminish competition in a field of sound recording and sound reproducing."

As a result, the case must go to trial. The plaintiff was organized in 1928 and manufactured, distributed and sold sound equipment. The defendants had asked a dismissal on the grounds the complaint failed to show a cause of action.

Ukranian Films Planned

Wasile Avramenko has formed Avramenko Film Products, Inc., for production of six musical features in the Ukranian langauge, to be distributed by Roman Rembush of Kinotrade.

Schumann-Heink Dies on Coast

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, opera star and concert singer and more recently a featured motion picture player, died at her home in Hollywood Tuesday night. She was 75 years old. The singer lapsed into a coma three hours before she died following a renewed attack of an ailment which caused hemorrhages of the throat and lungs and which necessitated several blood transfusions.

At the bedside when the end came were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schumann-Heink and their two daughters, Barbara and Kathryn; Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Schumann-Heink, Mrs. Charles Fox of San Diego, a daughter, and two of the diva's other grandchildren.

Born in Prague, Czechoslovakia, she first began singing in an Ursuline Convent and made her operatic debut as Azucena in "Il Trovatore" on October 13, 1878, at Dresden. Later she received an engagement in Hamburg and in 1887 she sang her first role in Berlin. Her first American appearance was on November 7, 1898, singing Ortrud in a "Lohengrin" at the Auditorium theatre in Chicago and from that point she gained additional fame until she was termed by critics to be the greatest Wagnerian contralto. She later won an immense following after engagements in vaudeville, radio and motion pictures. One of her last New York appearances was as one of the guest stars at the opening of the Radio City Music Hall.

Last year, Madame Schumann-Heink signed a three-year contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and before that she appeared in "Here's to Romance," produced by Jesse Lasky and starring Nino Martini.

UA Takes Foreign Films

United Artists has signed contracts in Mexico and Argentina for distribution of Spanish-language pictures produced in those countries. The Mexican company is Exito, U.C.P.R.S., which will deliver six in 18 months, starting last month. The Argentina company is Fortena Films, headed by Adolfo Z. Wilson, which make six in 12 months. The distribution will be made in all Spanish-speaking countries as well as to Spanish theatres in various sections of this country.

RCA Moves St. Louis Office

The RCA Manufacturing Company has moved its district offices from St. Louis to Kansas City and Kansas City offices will be combined with them in large quarters. H. T. Stockholm, district manager, will have his headquarters in the new offices after November 15th. Harry A. Sommerville is district service manager for the Kansas City area and Don Davis is district sales manager.

Distribution Deal Signed

Wholesome Films in Boston has taken over the New England distribution of Century Pictures, formerly handled by Cameo, which is leaving its Melrose Street offices for a building on Piedmont Street.

Shea Heads Dallas Office

J. Frank Shea this week was appointed branch manager of the United Artists office in Dallas to succeed Doak Roberts, resigned.

Forty-four state legislatures are to be the scenes of potential motion picture legislative battles starting in January. The usual amount of "spite legislation," "trick legislation" and "nuisance legislation" is expected. In addition, the motion picture industry undoubtedly will be called upon to bear a share of new taxes proposed for unemployment and social security which practically every state now shows indications of levying.

Censorship measures, however, for a long time thorns in the side of the industry, are absent from the new calendars. This is attributed to the higher standards of production under the industry's voluntary regulation through the Production Code Administration.

The trend of film legislation in the coming Congress and the program of President Franklin D. Roosevelt are expected to be influenced markedly by the tremendous vote given him in the recent election.

Almost without exception, the members of Congress most prominent in pushing motion picture legislation were returned to office. Thus, it may be expected that block booking and copyright legislation again will be a feature of the session. At the same time, political writers for the most part predict at least a lessening of "must" legislation next session, with more opportunity for discussion of motion picture legislation on the floor of the Senate and the House.

Evaluation of the results of the election upon legislation has led political observers in Washington to the following conclusions:

The President may seek a constitutional amendment redefining interstate and intrastate commerce so as to give the Government a measure of the control over hours and wages of labor, child labor and other labor questions that was sought under the National Recovery Act. This would be in return for the support given his re-election by organized labor.

He is not expected, however, in view of the supreme court's decision on the NRA last year, to seek direct legislation reviving the NRA, although Representative William R. Sirovich of New York, who also is leader of the fight for copyright legislation, has announced he will introduce an NRA bill which will meet the court's objections to the original measure.

30-Hour Week Bill Seen

Legislation will be introduced providing for general adoption of the 30-hour working week, backed by organized labor, now a more powerful influence in the Administration than ever before.

Continuance of the Social Security Act is assured, and if the present law is declared invalid by the courts new legislation will be sought continuing its major purposes of providing unemployment insurance and old-age pensions.

The Wagner labor relations act will be given the full support of the Administration, and if not declared unconstitutional is expected to lead to a material increase in union organizing activities in all trades and industries.

The tariff act, under which reciprocal trade agreements have been made with a number of countries, expires next year. Rumor had said that it might be abandoned in view of widespread opposition, but word now is that it may be continued.

Legislation continuing the Presidential authority to deal with the gold content of the dollar also is expected.

Tax on Undistributed Incomes Stays

The revenue act of 1936, imposing a tax on the undistributed income of corporations, may be amended to take care of technical problems which have arisen, but the underlying principle will not be altered.

The Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination act and the Walsh-Healey Government-contracts act may also be amended, but only to make them more effective, and they will not be abandoned. On the contrary, the anti-price discrimination law may be further strengthened by the enactment of new legislation divorcing production from retail distribution in all commodities, including motion pictures, and the Walsh-Healey act may be used as the basis for general NRA legislation if the proposed constitutional amendment on interstate commerce is adopted.

The consensus is that much emphasis will be laid upon legislation to improve the condition of labor, the small merchant and the little manufacturer. The relief program of the Administration will be continued, but with the possibility that "security" wages now paid on work projects may be increased. There will be no reduction in the rate of tax on admissions to theatres, although it is not expected there will be any advance. Lower income taxes will not be asked; on the contrary, it is possible that higher rates may be sought if Congress undertakes any general consideration of the tax question.

In the States

Exhibitor organizations, meanwhile, fully cognizant of the legislative problems that shortly will confront them, both nationally and in their respective state jurisdictions, are planning meetings for appointment of active legislative committees and discussions of problems. Allied Theatres of Connecticut, in line with this, already has announced a meeting of its membership at headquarters in the Kilfeather Building in New Haven on November 24th.

While there have been rumors in Richmond of a proposed special session of the

SCREEN AND STATE LEGISLATURES

Virginia legislature, there is no suggestion of a possible tax on theatre admissions, in the light of the several fights for a 10 per cent levy that have been lost to theatre operators in recent years. The principal reason for the special session, which, it is felt, will be called within the first two months of the new year, will be an attempt to have adopted an unemployment insurance bill to conform to provisions of the social security act of the national Congress. Governor George C. Peery thus far has not yielded to appeals to convene the houses, but has asked whence the money for this measure will be forthcoming.

Colorado Tax-Bound

In Colorado, however, the state legislature is expected to go wild on the subject of taxation, at the regular session which starts January 6th.

The voters at the recent election approved what is estimated to be a $10,000,000 burden in the form of a $45 per month pension for persons over 60. A constitutional amendment also was passed authorizing the legislature to levy a state tax. The income from the tax is expected to take care of half of the old age pension demands.

Experienced politicians in Virginia expect bills to tax everything the legislators can possibly think of, and especially admissions to motion picture theatres. Proposals for amusement taxes have been presented to most of the legislatures in recent years, but theatre men have convinced legislators the business was standing all the taxes it possibly could.

New York Sales Tax Appeal

In New York, the court of appeals at Albany has set December 3d for a hearing of the industry's arguments against application of the New York City two per cent sales tax on film rentals. The case has been hanging fire for almost two years and the accumulated liability of the industry in that city up to the present is estimated to be in excess of $3,500,000.

The city initiated the current action to test the application of the tax to film rentals by assessing the revenues of the United Artists New York exchange in 1935. The assessment was challenged by the distributor at hearings before the city comptroller, who ruled that the levy against film rentals was proper. The case went to the appellate division of the New York supreme court on appeal and resulted in a decision upholding the taxability of film rentals derived from theatres within the city limits, but exempting rentals originating in theatres located outside that area even though they obtain their service from the New York exchanges.

The distributors immediately moved to appeal from the first part of the decision and the city corporation counsel followed with notice of appeal from the second part. The arguments of both will be heard by the state's highest tribunal on December 3d. Frederick H. Wood of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood, who successfully argued the unconstitutionality of the NRA before the United States supreme court, has been retained by distributors jointly to present the industry's case before the court at Albany.

SEATTLE CENSOR BOARD FINDS ITSELF CENSURED

Seattle's board of theatre censors was itself roundly censured this week by the City Council, the rebuke coming in connection with the recent showing of "Ecstasy" at John Danz's Winter Garden theatre.

A council investigation disclosed that the film was booked into the Winter Garden only after it had been approved by the censors. After a three-day run the council requested that it be discontinued because of the many protests received. At its regular session this week, the council went on record publicly censuring the board for passing the picture and advised them to be more discriminating.

U. S. Statutory Court judges in New York on Tuesday reserved decision on an application of Eureka Productions for an injunction against New York State, which, Eureka claims, has no censorship power over "Ecstasy" since it was admitted to the country by the federal government.

The industry's arguments against subjecting film rentals to a local sales tax embrace the federal copyright laws, federal laws governing interstate commerce and the contention that films, being leased rather than sold, exempts them from a sales tax.

Distributors, meanwhile, have been collecting the tax from all theatres served by the New York exchanges and segregating it to return to the exhibitors in the event the industry's appeal is successful.

Sunday Shows Indorsed

Sunday motion pictures at Lynchburg, Va., were given the indorsement of a jury in the corporation court this week when Willis Grist, Jr., manager of the Paramount theatre there, was found not guilty of violating the state's blue laws. The jury spent less than 15 minutes in coming to its decision. The matter went into the court on an appeal from the municipal court where Mr. Grist was fined for operating his theatre on Sunday. After the trial, Mr. Grist said that the Paramount would continue to be opened on Sundays, but he was undecided as to the Isis and Trenton, theatres also under his management.

The city council of Annapolis, Md., voted unanimously last week to ask the next session of the Maryland legislature to pass a law by which the citizens of that city will be allowed to vote in a referendum on Sunday shows.

Sutersville Borough, near Greensburg, Pa., rejected Sunday motion pictures in the vote held there in conjunction with the national election last week.

Pathe May Reenter Production Field

Pathe Exchange, Inc., may reenter the production field next year when a special one-year agreement with Grand National expires in June, it is said. For the present, the company is not interested in financing production, but indications are that a step in this direction may be taken in the next eight months.

Pathe received 400,000 shares of the stock from Grand National, in addition to a substantial interest held in the First Division pictures being liquidated by Grand National. It was estimated that the stock and film interest figured at around $1,000,000. Pathe distributed to its stockholders as dividends most of the 400,000 shares, and Grand National has completed liquidating the outstanding First Division contracts.

Frank F. Kolbe, a director and former president of Pathe, recently resigned as a director of Grand National.

Pathe last week issued a financial report for the 39 weeks ended September 26, which showed a net profit of $24,687, after taxes and other items. Net profit from its laboratory operations aggregated $92,950.81, while an additional revenue of $46,898.69 was returned from films rentals.

"Pirating" of News to U. S. Supreme Court

Alleged "pirating" of news dispatches was before the United States supreme court in Washington late last week when the court was asked to decide whether the Associated Press has an 18-hour protection on its dispatches.

The suit was pressed by the news service to restrain radio station, KVOS, Bellington, Wash., from broadcasting its news until 18 hours after publication. The injunction was granted, and upheld by the ninth circuit court of appeals, and the broadcaster brought the case to Washington.

Hirliman and Van Beuren Combine in Continental

Amedee H. Van Beuren and George Hirliman are bringing to a close negotiations for a combination of their interests in a new production company to be known as Continental Pictures. There will be a public sale of stock.

The present Hirliman activities, which include distribution contracts for a George O'Brien series through RKO and a second group Grand National, will be in no wise affected. Van Beuren will produce short subjects under the new company's banner, probably continuing to release through RKO. Mr. Hirliman arrived in New York from Hollywood but said that his trip was not connected with the Van Beuren deal.

Consolidated Adds Theatres

Consolidated Amusements has taken over the buying, booking and operation of the Village, Morningside and Chelsea theatres in New York from Abel Fanchi of the Elite Circuit.

"FAN CLUBS" COSTING AMERICAN PUBLIC OVER $1,000,000 A YEAR

Players Innocent Sponsors of Groups Formed by Promoters Who Pocket Dues and Fees for Portraits of Stars

Legitimate Clubs Cooperate with Producers; Studios Order Fan Mail Departments to Protect Stars and Public

Distributors in New York claim that the American public is being mulcted of $1,000,000 a year by "racketeering" fan clubs which, recognizing the success of the legitimate fan club, are cashing in on the public's gullibility.

With the launching of the new season's production schedule in Hollywood there also has arisen among studio executives an active antipathy toward the so-called "Fan Clubs," mushrooming the country which, ostensibly the work of conscientious groups of individuals interested primarily in furthering the cinematic career of their particular screen favorites, are in reality the schemes of petty racketeers and dishonest promoters.

Hollywood, this year, is finding itself the object of such a concentrated campaign of racketeering fan clubs that executives of all the large studios have ordered a strict "tightening down" in their fan mail departments in an effort to protect the names of stars and also to spare the unsuspecting public's pocketbook.

It is estimated by probably the best informed organization on the activities of the motion picture industry that more than $1,000,000 yearly finds its way into the pockets of individuals operating bogus fan club organizations which are functioning solely to bring a stream of quarters and fifty cent pieces into the pockets of unscrupulous operating officers charging these sums for monthly dues and for pictures of the club members' favorite players. All this is unknown to the screen figure whose name is adopted by the club.

Peyton Watkins, head of the Twentieth Century-Fox fan mail department in Hollywood, observed that Chicago appeared to be the headquarters for a great many of the racketeering clubs.

"I once discovered that a Chicago man simultaneously had written three different players on the lot asking approval for formation of a fan club in the name of each," Mr. Watkins said. "I investigated and found the man already had four other fan clubs flourishing, with the players of another lot being used as 'bait.' These cheap racketeers work on a wholesale basis, planning first to get around 10 cents from club members. It is extremely profitable for them, as an average club has at least 1,000 members.

Sells "Official" Photos

"The organizer sells his 'official' photographs to members about every three months, gets the members to subscribe to the fan club 'magazine' and then mulcts them out of small amounts in numerous other ways. When he has milked them dry he always can sell the membership list to cheap manufacturers and salesmen."

DANCING 'WORSE RIVAL' OF STAGE THAN FILMS

"I have no sympathy with the common tendency to blame pictures for all the misfortunes which have befallen the legitimate theatre," said Taylor Holmes, appearing in "Tobacco Road" at the Cox theatre in Cincinnati this week.

"Long before we had pictures, the drama suffered serious declines through all similar depressions. Whatever is wrong with our theatre today is not so much the fault of the theatre itself or the competition of pictures as the social habits of the times. The dance craze among our young people is a far more serious rival of the theatre than are the movies."

Mr. Watkins explained that the player permitting the use of his name does not know what is in store for the public.

"The player, of course, is unaware the public is being bilked," he said. "He is not asked to contribute anything but an occasional letter addressed to the club as a whole. Hence it is up to the studios to see that their players' names are used only in connection with legitimate clubs."

The legitimate clubs, Mr. Watkins declared, are just as numerous, but operate in an entirely different manner and on a non-profit basis. Members of such groups hold frequent meetings, exchange photographs, discuss their favorites and write numerous letters, both to each other and to the sponsoring player.

Exhibitors Aid Legitimate Clubs

Exhibitors, in some instances, have been responsible for the formation and sponsorship of fan clubs for stars popular in their communities, and have exerted considerable pressure on studio publicity and fan mail department heads to cooperate with the fans. Cartoon characters, however, have been the greatest medium of exhibitor activity in this field, their patrons chiefly children and the objective solely to attract them to the box office.

During the past eleven years, literally hundreds of fan clubs have come into existence with the rise of stars, disbanding when the players' place in the sun has dimmed. It is estimated that these memberships have totaled three-quarters of the population. Cowboy stars have enlisted memberships equal to almost all boys between 10 and 20 years of age.

Somewhat fewer in proportion, but still high in the thousands, are clubs made up of fans from 16 to 45, most of them women.

Fan club members resent any suggestion that they are hero worshipers, and protest that their outpoured enthusiasm is not "gush" but sincere expression of feeling. They have banded to further their particular star's career and they pursue their prescribed course until their star either fades or their interests find another outlet. Sometimes their fervor leads them along strange paths, as witness the members of a Missouri Jean Harlow club who had all "gone platinum" and now are changing their hair as rapidly as possible to "brownette," her new mode.

And When They Protest—

But the worship of the fan club members is nothing compared with their energy once their ire is aroused. They have been known to protest by letter, thousands strong, when a producing company has not renewed a contract. And should an "honorary" star (one to whom a club is dedicated and who pays the dues of an ordinary member is an "honorary") make known that a certain role in a coming film would be welcome, the fans write to the studio, demanding that part for their shining light. Studios also have found that organizations similar to these, but entirely commercial, have, for a certain sum, flooded their Hollywood offices with mail demanding a renewed contract and higher salary for a player. Closer investigation has proved that the player paid for every letter mailed. His contract has not been renewed.

There are 384 Shirley Temple clubs in as many American cities, with 3,800,000 members, Mr. Watkins said. During production of her latest, a Chicago newspaper organized a club with a membership of 50,000. In addition to these in the United States she has 489 organizations in 43 foreign countries with 5,000,000 members, he said.

Federation Aids Studios

The Fan Club Federation, under the direction of President Irene Brettman, of New York, has been more than helpful to the studios in weeding out racketeering and undesirable fan clubs. Her organization publishes a mimeographed magazine, with articles on sponsored Hollywood personalities, and many of these have been exposes of spurious organizations. Miss Brettman has now shifted her activities from New York to Hollywood.

Another nationally known and legitimate publication is "The Movie Fan," headed by E. M. Orowitz, New York, who announced the first issue of his magazine with the following letter:

" 'The Movie Fan' is not for sale anywhere. It is prepared solely for its 40,000 movie fan members who pay dues monthly and have since July 1, 1935. In 81 cities in the United States and in Canada, millions of movie fans listen to the club broadcasts, presented regularly at specific dates and times. The club's information answers, conservatively figuring, ten thousand movie queries each week, through the various radio stations."

Drama

A prison picture, this follows the dramatic theme of such films as "The Big House" and "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing." It is a story of desperate men condemned to an existence behind the gray stone walls and steel bars of California's widely known penitentiary. In that phase it tells a grim story that erupts into a dynamic situation. Running along with it is a romance drama, menaced not only by the dangerous activities of the convicts, but the machinations of a dishonest and deposed yard captain. It also tells the story of a man who seeks to introduce humane and reconstruction conditions in an institution where previously only the law of force and rigid fear provoking discipline have prevailed.

The story is an original by Robert Tasker, whose novel, "Grim Haven," first attracted attention to him after which he had participated in the preparation of "Hell's Highway" and other dramatic prison pictures, and by John Bright, whose most recent story was made by Paramount as "The Acusing Finger." The screen play is by Peter Milne and Humphrey Cobb, author of the sensational war story "Paths of Glory." It is being directed by Lloyd Bacon, maker of "Cain and Mabel" and the military service pictures featuring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien.

Principal players are Pat O'Brien as the captain who sought to be humane to his charges, Humphrey Bogart as the composite of all caged criminals, Ann Sheridan, who as Bogart's brother and, not knowing who O'Brien is, falls in love with him, and Barton McLane, a prison official of the old rule-by-iron school.

As this quartet carries the brunt of the story, a good part of which actually was photographed within the walls of San Quentin, the supporting cast, all of whom appear either as guards or prison inmates, consist of Joseph Sawyer, Garry Owen, Joseph King, Marc Lawrence, Gordon Oliver, Emmett Vogan, Lee Phelps, Al Hill, Max Wagner, Herman Marks and Ernie Adams.

Rainbow on the River

(RKO Radio - Sol Lesser)

Comedy-Drama with Music

For Bobby Breen's second feature, Sol Lesser has chosen a comedy drama story that is rich and warm in human interest. It is the story of a little orphan boy living in old New Orleans immediately after the Civil War, who is happy in the unswerving devotion of an old colored mammy and his pickaniny playmates. Taken north to live a cold, dead life in his ancestral home, he yearns only for the happiness of the South. In the climax he wins the heart and affections of his testy but honest paternal grandmother.

As worthy as story content promises to be, the musical accompaniment with which it is to be embellished is certain to be an entertainment and commercial quality of superior value. The half dozen or more specialty numbers, as well as the score, run the range from the theme song "Rainbow on the River" through Stephen Foster's folk songs to cathedral music.

To bring the full value of both to realization on the screen, Lesser has selected what looks to be an exceptional cast for the type of story, and is producing the picture on a scope that surpasses any of his previous efforts. As practically all the players supporting Breen are principals, the roster includes May Robson, Charles Butterworth, Benita Hume, Alan Mowbray, Henry O'Neill, Louise Beavers, Marilyn Knowlden, Lillian Yarbo and Stymie Beard, a little colored boy. Additionally, the famous Hall Johnson Negro choir will be heard.

The story is adapted from Mrs. C. B. Jamison's spiritually atmosphered "Toinette's Phillip." The screen play is credited to Earle Snell and William Hurlburt, with added dialogue by Clarence Marks. Direction is by Kurt Neumann, who made Breen's initial picture, "Let's Sing Again.."

Men in Exile

(Warner)

Drama and Romance

Wrapped in the plot of "Men in Exile" are four separate themes that are being welded into one consistent whole. They include the drama of an attempted South American Revolution; the mystery of an island paradise, haven for fleeing criminals or criminal suspects in the Caribbean; the thrill of a vast arms and ammunition smuggling plot, and the tenderness of a love story that has its inception amidst the intrigues of crafty minds and the activities of desperate men seeking to control a government. It consists of elements, dramatic and romantic, that in previous but not similar pictures have been enthusiastically received by mass patronage.

Essentially an exciting romantic adventure, held together and made more powerful by the inclusion of a vein of tense suspense, the yarn told is adapted from several stories penned by Houston Branch and Marie Baumer. The screen play is by Roy Chanslor. Dramatic at all times, it is not at all like any of the themes of the O. Henry short stories. It is being directed by John Farrow, better known as a writer because of his association with such productions as "Mala," "Tarsan Returns" and "Last of the Pagans."

The cast is small, and while it includes no names of particular marquee value, it features Dick Purcell, June Travis, Margaret Irving, Alan Baxter, Norman Wills, Victor Varconi, Oline Howland and John Alexander.

Beware of Ladies

(Republic)

Dramatic Romance

Since the time of "The Man of the Hour" and other early political-newspaper themes, such entertainment has proved popular. The idea has been the subject of innumerable motion pictures. And, although the title hardly would indicate it, "Beware of Ladies" is exactly that kind of story. It is legitimate to assume that its producers had in mind both the entertainment and commercial values of the idea when they decided to make the film.

There are divergences from anything that has gone before. In this case rival factions advance candidates for the post of district attorney. A newspaper sponsors one and a group of political racketeers, specializing in character smirching, oppose him. A girl reporter is assigned to the task of publicizing her paper's candidate in high showmanship style. The association of candidate and press agent obviously provokes romance. But, fortunately, for the racketeers and for the dramatic entertainment quality of the story, the girl happens to be married. To wreck the newspaper's candidate the opposition indulges in scandal mongering, but when the boss racketeer attempts to play both ends against the middle, he creates a situation that clears the character of both the candidate and girl, and defeats his own purposes.

The production, which is being directed by Irving Pichel, familiar to showmen as both an actor and director, is based on an original screen play by L. C. Dublin. It features Donald Cook, as the candidate, and Judith Allen as the reporting publicity girl. To support these players and build the dramatic content of the story to its full worth, a cast of players all adapted in personality and talent to their several roles has been chosen. George Meeker, Russell Hopton, Robert Emmett Keane and Phil Dunham are featured principals, as is Robert Strange. In atmospheric and character roles are Goodee Montgomery, William Newell, Dwight Frye, Thomas Jackson, Josephine Whittell, William Crowell and Eric Wilton.

Ready, Willing and Able

(Warner)

Comedy with Music

Comedy, the result of a mistaken identity situation, and the colorful musical, dancing and spectacular production features that go with a back stage show, are the entertainment ingredients of this film. Those qualities, together with the value of cast and production credits, combine to create its showmanship availability.

The production is based on a Richard Macaulay story which ran recently in Saturday Evening Post. Macauley's recent screen credits include participation in the preparation of "Earthworm Tractors" and "Polo Joe." Jerry Wald, Sig Herzig and Warren Duff collaborated on the screen play. Ray Enright, whose credits cover many of the Joe E. Brown and Joan Blondell-Glenda Farrell pictures, is directing. Accomplishments of this group indicate their ability to inject comedy in a desirable manner.

The cast teams Ross Alexander and Ruby Keeler as the show's leads. Miss Keeler in addition to the principal feminine assignment, will be seen in a number of dances and handsomely mounted musical numbers which are being counted upon to add greatly to film's production films. Featured comedians are Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins and Teddy Hart, together with the new dancing discovery, Lee Dixon, Carrol Hughes and Winifred Shaw. Others players are Addison Richards, Hugh O'Connell, Jane Wyman, E. E. Clive, May Boley, Adrian Rosley and Shaw and Lee.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

Federal-NBC Unit To Use Film Houses

Motion picture theatres for the most part will be used to house the stage units to be developed as an outgrowth of the new Works Progress Administration—National Broadcasting Company radio hour which was to begin an indefinite period of weekly broadcasts over the NBC-Blue Network Wednesday night.

Months in development, the program, one hour in length, will be called the Federal Theatre of the Air. Completely cast and ready for presentation, the program is going through its final rehearsals and if for any reason it should not be ready for the microphones Wednesday it will make its bow the following week.

The first stage unit is expected to be ready to take to the road shortly after the first broadcast. Following that, according to present plans, a new stage unit will be devised out of each weekly broadcast, each air program to be different and include different performers.

NBC is donating the station time and broadcasting the program as a sustaining feature. It is anticipated that a sponsor will be obtained for the program in the near future, since it is understood three different companies are considering the sponsorship of the air show now.

The program is a cooperative effort of the WPA Radio Division and the NBC Artists' Bureau. The broadcasting company will derive its revenue on the program from the booking of the stage units, in which the WPA will have no hand. The Federal project is interested in merely providing work for unemployed actors and actresses.

Saint John to Have Exchange Building

The position of Saint John, N. B., as the film distributing center for Canada's Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland was assured with the beginning of construction of a modern building for long term rental to four of the city's ten film exchanges.

Two others already are housed in a building erected exclusively for them, while two more are accommodated in quarters which were modernized recently for them under an arrangement for long term occupancy.

The new structure will be completed by April 1 and will accommodate the Saint John film exchanges of 20th Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and First National, Empire and Universal.

Exchanges for Paramount and Regal already are housed in a modern building exclusively theirs, while those for RKO Radio and United Artists are located in one recently modernized for their use.

The building, planned by H. C. Mott, architect and engineer, will be modern and of special design throughout to meet all the requirements of film exchange work. The Acme Construction Company, Ltd., are the builders and owners.

ANTI-NAZIS THREATEN TOBIS FILM BOYCOTT

Accept Claim Company Is Dutch Owned but Protest Imports from German Subsidiary

Tobis-America, subsidiary of Tobis International, Dutch producing and distributing company, will be placed on the "unfair" list of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, unless it "cooperates with the League by agreeing to stop importing pictures made in Germany," Leo Spanglett of the motion picture division of the League, said this week.

Threat of a possible boycott of all Tobis pictures was made after a conference between officials of the League and counsel for Tobis. The league accepted the Tobis claim that it is entirely Dutch owned but insisted that as long as the company imports pictures made by its German subsidiary, thus taking credits out of Germany, it should be placed on the "unfair" list.

Spokesmen for the League drew a parallel between Tobis and a retail merchandising company, explaining that if a store sells pins made in Germany it is placed on the list even though the pins are only one of a thousand articles sold in the store. Pictures made by the German subsidiary of Tobis are brought to this country occasionally for release, but according to officials of the company the market for them here is very small. Revenue from exhibition here goes to the parent company in Amsterdam, it is claimed, but the League contends that the sale here of German made pictures, in effect, benefits Germany.

Signs Resolution Pledge

W. E. Van Beverin, president of Tobis-America, at a meeting of distributors and exhibitors of German pictures called by the League, said that he would not object to a boycott on German pictures brought here by his company. He was one of the signers of a resolution, passed at the meeting under which distributors pledged themselves not to release any foreign picture unless it carries a title showing the country of origin.

Mr. Van Beverin repeatedly has said that the parent Tobis company is Dutch owned and backed by Dutch capital and that the company is in the same position as any other corporation with a German subsidiary. Operation of the branch in Germany yields little or no profit to the parent company, he said, because of the Nazi restrictions governing withdrawal of money from the country.

Protest "Alcazar" Production

A reel of Olympia Games pictures, sold to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Tobis, was dropped from the MGM schedule last week after the League had sent a telegram of protest to Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM and of Loew's, Inc. One of two shorts made from the reel, "Olympic Ski Champions," was showing at first-run houses when the telegram was sent, and the second was ready for early release.

Withdrawal of the shorts by MGM was followed closely this week by an announcement from the American League against War and Fascism that a telegram and letter campaign has been started against the proposed production of "The Siege of Alcazar," by 20th Centruy-Fox. The League has instructed its city committees and branches to wire and write to Darryl Zanuck, executive vice president in charge of production, protesting the production. A telegram to Mr. Zanuck from the national office of the American League in New York was to the effect that the "people of the United States are not interested in seeing Fascist pictures."

Mr. Zanuck, in a reply, said, "Our picture is neither Fascist nor Communistic. We shall take no sides."

Officers of the anti-Fascist group are listed as Harry F. Ward, chairman; Mrs. Victor L. Berger, Earl Browder, Max S. Hayes, Robert Morss Lovett and Jacob Mirsky, vice-chairman; and William B. Mangold, treasurer.

Consolidated Plan Faces Injunction

Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in chancery court in Wilmington, Del., has under advisement a petition for a preliminary injunction against Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., to restrain the company from filing with the Delaware secretary of state an amendment to a certificate of incorporation.

The action was taken on a bill of complaint filed by Norman Johnson of New York, a preferred stockholder, who alleges that 150,000 of the issued 524,973 shares of the common stock of the company are owned by Setay Corporation, which, it is claimed, is controlled by Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated. Mr. Yates and directors of Consolidated are largely interested in the common stock and the amendment was proposed to improve the position of common stockholders at the expense of preferred stockholders, the complaint charges.

The company denied the allegations in an answer filed recently.

Consolidated this week withdrew its request to the New York Stock Exchange for a listing of a new series of stock to supplant its former capitalization, under its plan of reorganization.

Cestari Heads Brazil Office

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution for United Artists, this week appointed Marino Cestari manager of the Porto Alegre branch office in Brazil. He will replace Joao Friere, and will assist Enrique Baez, sales manager for the company in Brazil.

Rathner Closes a Deal

Harry Rathner, general sales representative for Burroughs-Rice Productions in Boston, has closed a deal with Specialty Films, Inc., whereby the latter will handle the Tarzan pictures in that territory.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Mercer and Richard Whiting, the modernly timed story is localed in New York. A musical comedy playwright is given backing on the condition that a famous English actress be signed for the leading role. A similarity in names lands the part for a charming and talented American girl. Comedy and light dramatic complications ensuing, as the spectacle features are brought in during rehearsal, the English miss is revealed as a onetime member of a trained seal act. Rather than face publicity of this humble beginning of her artistic career, she steps aside for the American girl, who develops as a star of first magnitude.

I Promise to Pay

(Columbia)

Drama

Three qualities, story content, cast strength, and topical production details are being counted upon by the producers to make this picture a subject of more than usual interest. In plot it is a racket exposure, this time of the unscrupulous and terroristic activities of the salary loan business. A problem that regularly makes front page headlines in almost every city and town in the country, it is one in which the public should be more than ordinarily interested.

The story tells of a young clerk who, disappointed because a bonus has not been forthcoming from his employers, is forced into the clutches of the loan sharks. His inability to meet their extortionate demands results in one beating after another until he finally brings his plight to the attention of the authorities. Ensue sequences of terror and mental and physical fright that builds to a dynamic climax.

The story used in the photoplay is an original by Lionel Houser, in which has been included atmospheric treatment of many incidents made familiar to the public. The screen play is by Mary C. McCall, Jr., and Houser. Direction is by D. Ross Lederman.

Three wellknown players are featured. Chester Morris is the hapless victim of the loan sharks and Helen Mack is his wife. The menace is Leo Carrillo, currently appearing in "The Gay Desperado." The part returns Carrillo to the type of role in which he scored some of his best successes. Others in the cast are Patsy O'Connor, John Gallaudet, Thomas Mitchell, Crawford Weaver and Thurston Hall.

College Holiday

(Paramount)

Musical Comedy

Some years ago Paramount produced "College Humor" and followed it up with "College Rhythm." Now comes "College Holiday," immediate successor to "Collegiate." About the only thing this one has to do with college is the use of the word in the title. Entirely a musical comedy, based on a ridiculous premise, the story concerns itself with the antics of a couple of daffy old persons who decide to do away with the age old way of letting love take its natural course and substitute a scientific, eugenic method of permitting ardent swains to pick their mates.

About the only college material in the piece are the college boys and girls who make themselves the guinea pigs for the faddists' experiments. It may not have any college but the picture will have Jack Benny, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Mary Boland, Martha Raye, Ben Blue and Etienne Girardot, definitely established laugh provokers. It will have Eleanore Whitney, Marsha Hunt, Johnny Downs, Leif Ericson, Louis Da Pron and Olympe Bradna and Nick Lukats and a large majority of Paramount's budding hopefuls, for romantic interest. There is a large bevy of LeRoy Prinz's streamlined dancing girls for the benefit of tired and jaded eyes.

Writers and constructionists who contributed to the concoction of mirth and merriment include J. P. McEvoy, Walter DeLeon, Harlan Ware, Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, Henry Myers, Jay Gorney, Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin, James Seymour and Bobby Vernon. The music supervised by Boris Morros, was contributed by two song writing teams, Ralph Rainger and Leo Robbing and Bert Lane and Ralph Freed. The six or seven solo and chorus numbers were directed by Arthur Franklin.

The sets and backgrounds are lavish to a high degree. The action that takes place in front of them is pure and simple nonsense, which the producers are counting on to provide exhibitors with opportunity for a showman's holiday.

The Singing Buckaroo

(Spectrum)

Action, Romance, Drama

The second picture to be produced by this newly formed company, this story seems to be of an entertainment and potential exploitation quality that should arouse the interest of those whose audiences favor the outdoor adventure type of feature.

Based on a popular form of entertainment, localed in the west, the story is romantic drama against a background of skullduggery and thrill action. It deals with the experiences of a girl and her father who loot a bank to protect the interest of depositors. Their flight to a mountain refuge and resistance to a siege of the hideout, directed by a thieving bank director, who planned to steal the funds for himself, brings a singing cowboy into the picture. As the yarn builds to the customary thrill finale, topped off by an exciting chase and general melee, it is embellished by solo and chorus western music.

From a standpoint of unique exploitation idea, the film will present Howard Hill, world's champion archer, in a specialized performance that is also a part of the story. His bow and arrow match the outlaws' guns.

Fred Scott and Victoria Vinton are featured in the leading roles. The supporting cast includes William Faversham, Cliff Nazarro, Hill, Charles Kaley, Roger Williams, Rosa Caprino and Lawrence LaBaron.

The story is an original screen play by Tom Gibson, who is directing also. Jed Buell and George H. Callaghan are the producers.

General Elects Stevenson

Edward F. (Ned) Stevenson, founder and president for 10 years of Vitagraphic Pictures, Inc., commercial talking pictures, has been elected vice-president and a member of the board of directors of General Business Films, Inc., New York.

Arthur Lee to Canada

Arthur A. Lee, vice-president of Gaumont British, left New York Tuesday on a business trip to Buffalo, from where he will go to Toronto. Mr. Lee will return directly to New York on the completion of his business in Canada.

Minneapolis Projectionists Celebrate 25th Anniversary

The Motion Picture Projectionists of Minneapolis, Local 219, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, celebrated their 25th anniversary recently with a dinner in the Gold Room of the Radisson Hotel. George F. Klund is president of the union and Horace J. Evans is vice-president.

Among those invited were Thomas E. Latimer, Mayor of Minneapolis; Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; George E. Browne, international president of the IATSE; Theodore L. Hays, Minnesota Amusement Company; W. A. Steffes, Allied Theatre Owners; William C. Sears, Mort Singer Circuit; T. E. Cunningham, Minnesota Federation of Labor; A. H. Urtubees, Central Labor Union; R. D. Cramer, Minneapolis Labor Review; Germain Quinn, past international organizer, and F. H. Richardson, Technical Editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

"Gold Diggers" Plane Completes Half of Tour

The Warner Brothers "Gold Diggers of 1937" exploitation plane, which is carrying several of the dancers who appeared in the picture as well as some of the featured players, has completed approximately half of its air tour of the country as an exploitation stunt to advertise the film.

The company landed at El Paso and Fort Worth last Saturday after leaving Hollywood and at the second stop the party was honored by a celebration arranged by the Chamber of Commerce. At Dallas, the Variety Club acted as hosts the next day and at Memphis, the next stop, the mayor declared a holiday and the Junior Chamber of Commerce acted as hosts.

The plane is scheduled to arrive in Chicago Thursday where the home office executives, headed by Albert Warner, vice-president, and Gradwell Sears, general sales manager, are presiding at a district managers meeting, and from there they will fly to New York and New England.

To Appeal Argentine Distributor Verdict

An appeal is expected to be taken from the decision of the Argentine federal court in Buenos Aires by which the Argentine Association of Film Distributors was found guilty last week of "coercive measures," in an anti-trust action, it was indicated this week in distributor circles in New York. The association is composed of representatives of all major American distributors in Buenos Aires and two Argentine distributors.

The suit was instituted by Hector J. Bini, an exhibitor, who charged that the defendants fixed rentals and admission prices and that they refused to supply films to certain theatres.

Addresses Philadelphia Club

The motion picture industry would prefer to follow its own regulations rather than those imposed by a board of censors, Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator, told members of the Cahill Club in Philadelphia last Friday. Mr. Breen was formerly an active member of the club, which is an alumni organization of Roman Catholic High Schools.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Camera Cleanup

Thirteen pictures came from the cameras this week while a mere seven took their places upon the stages. Warners led the cleanup with three films finished. The first, "Mountain Justice," will present Josephine Hutchinson, George Brent, Robert Barrat, Mona Barrie, Guy Kibbee, Marcia May Jones, Elizabeth Risdon, Edward Pawley, Margaret Hamilton, Granville Bates, Robert McWade, Fuzzy Knight, Guy Wilkerson and Russell Simpson. Michael Curtiz directed. In "San Quentin," a penitentiary melodrama, Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, Barton MacLane, Joseph Sawyer, Garry Owen, Joseph King, Marc Lawrence, Gordon Oliver, Emmett Vogan, Edward Keene, Lee Phelps, James Robins, Al Hill, Max Wagner, George Lloyd and Joseph Stone will be seen. Lloyd Bacon directed. The third picture, "Men In Exile," features Dick Purcell, June Travis, Alan Baxter, Margaret Irving, Norman Willis, Victor Varconi, Olin Howland and John Alexander. John Farrow directed.

Radio finished two pictures. "The Girl From Paris," stars Lily Pons, Gene Raymond, Jack Oakie and Mischa Auer, with Frank Jenks, Herman Bing, Lucille Ball, Patricia Wilder, Harry Jans, Oscar Apfel, Joseph de Stephani and Michael Mark. Leigh Jason directed. The second picture, "Criminal Lawyer," lists Lee Tracy, Margot Grahame, Eduard Ciannelli, Betty Lawford, Erik Rhodes, Frank M. Thomas, Theodore von Eltz, Claire McDowell, Wilfred Lucas, Aileen Pringle, Lita Chevret and Francis MacDonald in its cast. Christy Cabanne directed.

"With Love and Kisses" was finished by Melody. It features Pinky Tomlin and Toby Wing supported by Kane Richmond, Russell Hopton, G. Pat Collins, Arthur Housman and Kenneth Thompson. Leslie Goodwins directed.

Columbia completed "A Slug For Cleopatra," with a cast headed by Charles Quigley and Rosalind Keith and including Henry Mollison, Rita LaRoy, James Conlon and Arthur Loft. David Selman directed.

At Grand National the Edward Finney production, "Arizona Days," finished. Directed by Jack English, it will present Tex Ritter, Eleanor Stewart, Ethelind Terry, William Faversham, Warner Richmond, Snub Pollard, William Desmond, Sid Saylor, Forrest Taylor and Charles King.

MGM's contribution to the completed work is "After The Thin Man," sequel to "The Thin Man." William Powell and Myrna Loy again are teamed. The support lists Elissa Landi, James Stewart, Paul Fix, William Benedict, Mabel Colcord, Murray Alper, Wade Boteler, Farina, Sam Levine, Jessie Ralph, Norman Phillips, Jr., John Kelly and Dorothy McNulty. W. S. Van Dyke directed.

"Trail Dust," a Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy production for Paramount, is included in the completed list. The cast is headed by the familiar trio, William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and George Hayes, with Stephen Morris, Gwynne Shipman, Britt Wood, John Beach and Al St. John. Nate Watt directed.

Major Productions checked in "Mind Your Own Business." Charlie Ruggles, Alice Brady, Lyle Talbot, Jack LaRue and Bennie Baker play the leads. The support includes Frankie Darro, Robert Baldwin, Lloyd Crane, Horace Stewart, Bill Demarest, Gene Lockhart, Charles Wilson, William Davidson, Paul Harvey, Duke York, Theodore von Eltz and David Sharp. Emmanuel Cohen produced and Norman McLeod directed.

MORGAN NOMINATED AS SMPE CHAIRMAN

Kenneth E. Morgan has been nominated for chairman of the Pacific Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to succeed Rerald F. Rackett, retiring chairman.

C. W. Handley and Gordon A. Chambers have been nominated for secretary.

Voting is by mail, ballots to be counted December 1.

At Roach Studio the pretentiously mounted musical comedy, "Nobody's Baby," was completed. The cast includes Patsy Kelly, Lyda Roberti, Robert Armstrong, Lynne Overman, Don Alvarado, Rosina Lawrence, The Avalon Four, Jimmy Grier's Orchestra, Herbert Rawlinson, Chick Chandler, Lois Wilde, Boyd Irwin, Joan Woodbury and Raphael Storm. Gus Meins directed.

A Buck Jones production, "Sand Flow," was finished for Universal. Jones is starred with Lita Chevret, Robert Terry, Arthur Aylesworth, Robert Kortman, Enrique de Rosas, Joseph Swickhard, Tom Chatterton, Malcolm Graham and Arthur Van Slyke. Les Selander directed.

Three pictures in the list of new work are credited to Twentieth Century-Fox. "The Jones Family At The County Fair" features Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Slim Summerville, Ann Gillis, Spring Byington, June Carlson, George Ernest, Florence Roberts, Betty Mahan and Russell Gleason. Frank Strayer is directing. "Secret Valley," a Sol Lesser drama, will present Richard Arlen, Virginia Grey, Jack Mulhall, Sid Saylor, Willie Fung, Norman Willis and Maude Allen. Howard Bretherton is directing. The third number is "Love Is News," in which Loretta Young, Don Ameche and Tyrone Power have been assigned to leading roles. The featured principals are Miles Mander, Jane Darwell, Gavin Muir, Walter Catlett, Slim Summerville, Stephin Fetchit, Shirley Deane and Julius Tannen. Tay Garnett is directing.

At MGM the long deferred "Parnell" finally got going. The lengthy cast includes Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Edna Mae Oliver, Billie Burke, Edmund Gwenn, Montagu Love, Donald Crisp, Alan Marshal, Berton Churchill, Brandon Tynan, Neil Fitzgerald, Phyllis Coghlan, Pat Moriarty and Byron Russell. John M. Stahl is directing.

Republic started "Round Up Time In Texas," an incident in the "Three Mesquiteers" series. It features the trio, Jean Autry, Smiley Burnette and Max Terhune with Maxine Doyle, Earle Hodgins, Leroy Mason, Dick Wessell, Buddy Williams and Elmer Fain. Direction is by Joseph Kane.

"Love Begins" started at Warners. With Louis King directing, Tom Brown, Mary McGuire and Hugh Herbert are featured.

At Radio "We, The Jury" started. In the cast are Helen Broderick, Victor Moore, Philip Huston, Louise Latimer, Colleen Clare, Vinton Haworth, Frank M. Thomas, Earle Fox, Maxine Jennings, Billy Gilbert, Robert McWade, Charles Middleton, Sarah Edwards, George Irving, Leonid Kinsk, Charles Lane, Roy James, Jean Howard, Hal K. Dawson and Georgette Rhodes. Ben Holmes is the director.

McCarthy Method

Leo J. McCarthy, former theatre man now acting as production assistant to Nat Levine at Republic, is for more action and less dialogue in film, citing his exhibitor experience as authority for the assertion that pictures which subordinate dialogue to action outscore the opposite kind on box office points.

"With talking pictures," according to Mr. McCarthy, "the situation is not unlike that of the legitimate stage. Good playwrights learned long ago that the best part of a play is expressed in pantomime. Of course the screen has a much wider scope than the stage, and in pictures it is not necessary to condense action to the same extent. However, the old theatrical adage, never give your audience a chance to relax, still holds good.

"If you give them a chance to slump in their seats, while your actors are making long speeches, it's hard to get them up again."

Mr. McCarthy believes that most pictures could cut ten per cent of the dialogue used and be improved.

Singles Only

Albert A. Galston is to breast the stream, dare the current, defy the lightning, etc., and dedicate the new Colony theatre here to a policy of single feature bills exclusively.

Mr. Galston believes 80 per cent of the theatre public wants a program composed of a substantial feature picture supported by selected short product.

In offering such a program as a matter of established policy Mr. Galston is going to seek the cooperation of the Parent-Teachers Association, which recently condemned the double feature policy, as well as the aid of business organizations, clubs, and family heads individually.

To publicize his objective Mr. Galston is conducting a campaign predicated on the current jest referring to the children of today who enter the cinema as tiny tots and come out of it, after a double-decker picture program, tottering old men and women.

Radio Expands

Warner Brothers expansion into the radio field has gained added momentum in Hollywood with the acquisition of a new 5-C, RCA high fidelity transmitter with a 450-foot vertical radio tower, the whole plant to be ready for the air on November 30. The transmitter is nearing completion on a 10-acre site in the Baldwin Hills. It is powered for 5,000-kilowatts for day operation and 1,000-kilowatts for night use. A projection room and screen will be installed.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Reunion

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy, Romance, Drama

Two things most desirable in a film are provided here, pleasing entertainment of several varieties for theatre-goers and a vast amount of showmanship matter for exhibitors. The story is one that runs the full scale of entertainment. It contains comedy aplenty, conflicting love interest, pathos-tinged drama, and a wealth of topical material for its quintuplet stars. As the elements move to appealing human interest, all are exceptionally well blended to produce a picture which is, first, of more than usual importance to family audiences and, second, one to engage and satisfy the attention of either specialized or general patronage. "Reunion" is a new and distinct picture; by no means should it be considered a sequel to "The Country Doctor," even though its locale is the same and several players who were in that show are again featured in their original character roles.

Naturally the film's biggest exploitation factor rests in the Dionne Quintuplets. One of the present day's greatest attractions, the full sequence that is diverted to their play antics is one that means happy moments for all who see it. Important as are the youngsters from an entertainment and commercial standpoint, they are not, however, the entire show. Even were they eliminated, the actual story told in the film would be a subject of audience and exhibitor interest.

Motivation follows a uniquely appealing idea. The children come on the screen immediately. But the first object of interest is a renewal of rivalry between Jim Ogden and Asa Wyatt for large paternity honors. The scene shifts to show Mrs. Sheridan attempting to win the affections of Dr. Tony Luke, son of Dr. John, who is in love with Mary MacKenzie. Back in Moosetown, the editor and the head of the chamber of commerce, Renard, convince Dr. John that he should hold a reunion of all the persons he has brought into the world. Thousands accept the invitations. There's his first child, Governor Crandall, with his wife, Janet Fair, a brokendown screen actress, hoping the publicity will do her some good. Then come Dr. Tony, to resume his romance with Mary, only to have Mrs. Sheridan follow; a criminal, and a wide assortment of humanity from every walk of life. As Dr. John tended them in their first great moment in life, he tends them now. He places Mrs. MacKenzie on the right track to reestablish her as a devoted wife and thus make the path clear for Mary and Dr. Tony. He saves Janet from suicide and marries her to Renard. To the Governor and his wife he gives a little boy, Rusty, to call their own in place of the child they longed for but never had. He almost succeeds in making an honest man out of Jake, paroled pickpocket. Dr. John's success in ministering to the human needs of his flock calls for a great celebration. The Dionnes provide it in a way that should delight all who witness their cavortings.

It is sound entertainment in every phase, and it already has been widely publicized, but this does not constitute a reason for anyone taking anything for granted. The better the picture is sold, the higher grosses may be expected to rise.

Winterset

(RKO Radio)

Drama

Persons who appreciate the value of fine things exceptionally well done have here a production to which they may well respond. Likewise those to whom commendable histrionic, photographic and directorial quality have any significance will find much to engage their attention in "Winterset." However, how it is going to be accepted by mass audiences is a question that will test the showmanship abilities and astuteness of the most aggressive exhibitors.

"Winterset" is modernly conceived and powerful human interest drama. It tells its story in forceful, direct style. Photography, production detail and directorial technique depart measurably and noticeably from formula. Though there are a few occasions in which either dialogue or situations give cause for comedy, the film essentially is a grim, emotion-stirring production. While it is unusual in many ways, its plot is an old and well tested theatrical property. It is played by actors who are either unknown to the great mass of theatre-goers or whose name value is not of important rank, but they play it in a manner that undoubtedly will win much commendation from critics and public.

The somber mood of the story is established immediately. An innocent man is convicted of murder, sentenced and railroaded to the electric chair. His son grows to manhood determined that the disgrace attached to his father's memory shall be wiped out. In New York, under the Brooklyn Bridge, the boy meets and falls in love with a girl. Her brother was a member of the gang in the holdup in which a watchman was killed and for which crime the boy's father was condemned. Into this situation come the now mentally deranged judge and the killer for whose crime another man paid with his life. Ensues a dynamic and suspense-laden mental conflict. The girl is fearful for her brother and the boy who is determined on vengeance. The coldly vicious killer is determined that all menaces to his liberty and life shall be removed. Those are the circumstances which build to a climax in which justice balances her own scales.

Sold as an intense drama, exceptionally well presented, it is entirely possible that "Winterset" will create an interest for itself as worthy screen entertainment that will compensate for the handicap of unfamiliar names. Word of mouth advertising probably will serve as an effective medium in interesting the rank and file. Exhibitors who play to specialized audiences or to any considerable percentage of socalled highbrows or little theatre followers in their patronage might find it wise to direct a personally recommended invitation to that class, informing it of the show's unusual interest to its members.

Love on the Run

(MGM)

Comedy Romance

Lively fun from first to last, "Love on the Run" is farce comedy romance that travels along at a gay and giddy clip. Built of popular stuff, the kind that goes over with almost any kind of audience, the picture presents a pair of high-ranking players and a supporting cast of high quality.

Localed in Europe, the yarn is uptodate. The original premise is intriguing and permits the development of much that is amusing entertainment. Reneging at marrying Igor, American heiress Sally Parker entrusts herself to the protection of Michael Anthony, who promises to keep her out of the clutches of reporters. This brings in a rival reporter, Barnabas, to set the stage for much gay and airy romantic conflict. Eventually, while Michael is aiding Sally to escape, they are mistaken for a pair of stratosphere flyers. In the excitement Sally discovers that Michael is a hated reporter. Events involve the pair with a team of international spies, Baron and Baroness Spanderman. Though Michael has provoked her exceedingly, Sally cannot help but fall in love Story content, production quality and the prestige of Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone in the leading roles endow the film with entertainment and commercial worth that promises much to both audiences and exhibitors. Capitalizing on the combined name value and emphasizing the pleasing amusement merit of the story should be about all that is needed to whip up quite a bit of patron interest.

Born to Dance

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Musical Comedy Romance

Subjected to any kind of recapitulation, "Born to Dance" has all it takes, and more, to satisfy patrons and exhibitors mightily. A customers' show in every sense of the term, it's also a showman's exploitation feature of superior caliber. A musical comedy romance, it's brightly unique. It spins along to the pitch of peppy music, flashing dancing, gay comedy, hilarious specialties, plenty of girl glamour for tired eyes and sumptuous production effects. Not a revue by any means, it's a zippy picturization of a bunch of sailor boys, a country girl who has ambitions to become a great stage dancer and her girl friend adventuring in the realm of modern life and romance. Amplified by incidental color, it's a real story that moves to the tune of clever dialogue and situations. Always it is wholesome amusement of the most desirable type.

Bare plot of the play has James Stewart, bashful non-commissioned officer in Uncle Sam's navy, meeting dancing Eleanor Powell in a Lonely Hearts Club and falling in love with her. The pleasing human love story of a couple of kids all wrapped up in each other is complicated by the antics of producer Alan Dinehart, who for publicity purposes fakes up a romance between his temperamental star, Virginia Bruce, and the attractive gob in brass buttons. But the gag backfires for both Dinehart and Miss Bruce as Miss Powell steps into the spot out of which the stage notable walked when Stewart did a little legitimate double-crossing to make his sweetheart the reigning singing and dancing sensation of Broadway.

That's only the outline. Space without end would be required to list all the effective contributions that the featured support makes to the film. A few of them, however, are Frances Langford's singing; the fun that Raymond Walburn, the strangest captain ever to wear a navy uniform, chucks in, and the antics of dancing Buddy Ebsen as a member of the crew who can't find the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The preview audience howled in glee. The experiences encountered by Sid Silvers, who joins the fleet two days after his marriage to Una Merkel and then strives manfully to get her to recognize him as her husband and as father of their child, add to the merriment. Reginald Gardiner's orchestra leading specialty left the patrons as limp as his gyrations exhausted him. Furniture seller Barnett Parker contributed to the gayety; the bed-testing episode particularly is farce comedy to a high degree. The substantiating spectacle, aboard the submarine, on the deck of a cruiser, in the Lonely Hearts club and in the finale stage show number where scores of streamlined beauties sing, dance and cavort, is an eyeful for anybody.

Put all the assets together, add to them the high quality music in vocal solo and chorus form and with naval band accompaniment, don't overlook Miss Powell's dextrous dancing or the classical Georges and Jalna feature, the worthy production support and the high class manner in which stars and support enact their parts, and the show can't help be a knockout at the box office. It's a show that reflects credit on all who had a part in its making.

Previewed in Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood, in an unusual manner. The showing was held in the afternoon. Advertised to the public which also was promised the added attraction of witnessing the star-bedecked radio broadcast of Hollywood Hotel from the stage, it brought out a host of legitimate paying customers. In the picture alone, all got more than their money's worth.—G. M.

The Plot Thickens

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

Oscar Piper and Hildegarde Withers again go adventuring in the field of crime solution, and there's much comedy, with quite a bit of melodrama mystery, a few killings and a little comparatively unnecessary romancing. The brunt of the production, either as an entertainment or commercial feature, is carried by James Gleason in his familiar role as the cocksure detective, and by Zasu Pitts, who essays the Hildegarde part for the first time. From the fun angle, the team delivers all that is expected.

For obvious purposes, principally that comedy might predominate, the motivating plot is highly complicated. Rather cleverly, the story does not plunge into its basic premise immediately. In the early sequences, Oscar, with the unwelcome assistance of Hildegarde, is investigating a routine mystery murder in which there is a multitude of suspects, all of whom have legitimate motives. Eventually, the story gets down to cases and involves the efforts of a band of international crooks to loot a famous museum of its most valued exhibit. As the treasure is well protected, suspense is built up in strong style. The prospective thieves outwit police and museum officials, but as usual in the Stuart Palmer stories, they have not paid very much attention to the whimsical Hildegarde. Finally it is her ability to get at the bottom of things that enables Oscar to prevent the robbery and nab the killer.

The character of story, the title and the lead roles lend themselves readily to effective interest creating exploitation of a picture that is an average feature.

Rembrandt

(London Films-United Artists)

Costume Romance

Classification of this picture is not easy; a period piece, and pictorially a very beautiful one, it is not strictly a story, though both romantic and tragic elements are strong in it. Nor is it exactly a screen biography, though the chief actor is a historical figure, and the main incidents of his life are accurately depicted. To call it a portrait, or the study of a temperament, is perhaps to get as near as possible to identification of a production which certainly offers the exhibitor, and the public, rather unusual entertainment values.

There are two obvious points of exploitation; the personal direction of Alexander Korda—it is declared to be the last picture to be so handled by him—and the personality of Charles Laughton, who in the character of Rembrandt certainly found one of the most difficult tasks of his career and has approached it in a manner again demonstrating his virtuosity. Laughton's picture of the improvident, independent, tragic and inspired painter is the asset which the theatre man has to offer, and Laughton's fine elocution is a further point for the discriminating audiences to whom the picture is chiefly directed.

The story, or rather the continuity, introduces Rembrandt on the eve of his loss of an idolized wife. A very fine scene shows him painting her face from memory, before it fades, heedless of the bell which summons him to her funeral—and of the scandal which his apparent lack of feeling causes. The keynote of character so struck is heard again in the episode of the criticism of the picture now known as "The Night Watch," when Rembrandt metaphorically throws in the face of the Syndics the money they have paid for portraits while he has provided a masterpiece.

Parallel is his love affair with a woman who, resenting his unworldly devotion to his painting, becomes a shrew and the thorn in his side. Her he leaves for a country serving maid, and when this idyllic episode is ended by death, the transition to the old Rembrandt, penniless but spending a charitable gift on paint instead of food, is natural and moving. The fadeout is on the old man engaged on a self portrait and murmuring "All is vanity."

It is a series of very finely produced scenes, background to a personal interpretation of a hasty and lovable genius by an actor whose own great skill, surmounting a rather obvious un-likeness to the historical Rembrandt, is also superior for the most part to the fact that the picture provides few of the conventional values demanded by the picturegoer. Laughton's delivery of two Biblical passages is a magnificent example of elocution; less happy is a long monologue on woman, to an enthralled tavern audience. There is brilliant acting from Elsa Lanchester as the maid Hendrickje, and Gertrude Lawrence as the shrew is also an outstanding character. The art direction of Vincent Korda and the camera work of Georges Perinal are brilliant.

A preview audience in London obviously appreciated the subtleties of Laughton's acting and the brilliant pictorial qualities of the film, but there seemed to be general agreement that the more obvious box office qualities were more doubtful.—Bruce Allan.

End of the Trail

(Columbia)

Western Drama

Romance and drama in the West with an interlude of a campaign with the Rough Riders of Colonel Roosevelt, this is primarily a story of the friendship of two men and their love for a girl. A capable story, ably directed by Erle C. Kenton, who also impersonates Colonel Roosevelt, the picture is replete with action and comedy. It tells of two men, of widely separated interests, whose friendship is firmly cemented but unavailing when the one sends the other to his death for his debt to society.

With the exception of the scenes of the battle of San Juan Hill during the war with Spain, which are introduced to show how firmly this friendship of the two men is entrenched, the setting is laid in a small mid-western town. The story is based on Zane Grey's "Outlaws of Palouse." Jack Holt, Guinn Williams, Louise Henry and Douglass Dumbrille are the principal members of the cast.

Holt, an adventurer with an exaggerated sense of humor, kids Williams into enlisting in the Army when volunteers are called. Holt at the last minute volunteers also. Holt saves Williams' life and in doing so loses the sight of one eye. On returning to the West after the war, Williams, who was a deputy sheriff, is made chief deputy and is generally feted, but Holt is ignored and refused his old job. Bitter, Holt takes to rustling cattle and makes a large amount of money, but incurs the enmity of Dumbrille, who is also a rustler. Holt buys the town's saloon and makes John McGuire, the brother of Miss Henry, the manager. Dumbrille kidnaps McQuire but Holt rescues him, killing one of Dumbrille's guards. Williams, who has been raised to sheriff, sees the murder, but fails to report it. Dumbrille kills McGuire. Holt retaliates by killing Dumbrille. Williams captures Holt. The picture ends with Holt, on his way to be hanged, with his arms about Williams and Miss Henry.

The Accusing Finger

(Paramount)

Sociological Drama

This photoplay presents the case against capital punishment as championed by a character in the story and proved by the plot development. The conclusion drawn is that legislation should be drafted to bring about abolition of punishment by death of convicted murderers.

The theme has been used before and no doubt will be used again. It is serviceable. Here it is logically worked out and sincerely treated. Naturally, the case used in demonstration is that of an innocent man. These facts appear to indicate the type of audience for which the picture may be regarded as suitable and the type of exploitation qualified to apprise such audiences of its availability.

The story pertains to one Douglas Goodwin, a prosecutor famous for obtaining convictions in murder cases, who is innocently convicted of the murder of his wife and sentenced to death. His secretary and a detective ultimately find the actual murderer and effect Goodwin's release. Meanwhile a state senator interested in the abolition of capital punishment uses the Goodwin case as an example in his plea to fellow senators for passage of his bill.

Paul Kelly gives a straight, convincing portrayal of the principal character. Harry Carey forcefully presents the senatorial argument. Marsha Hunt is the secretary and Kent Taylor is the detective. DeWitt Jennings and Fred Kohler are among the experienced supporting players.

Reviewed at the Globe theatre, New York, a Broadway house, which advertised the film as a sensational gangster picture, where a midday, drop-in audience appeared favorably impressed with what it saw and heard.—William R. Weaver.

Produced by A. M. Botsford. Distributed by Paramount. Directed by James Hogan. Screen play by Madeleine Ruthven, Brian Marlow, John Bright and Robert Trasker. It's You I Want

(British Lion, England)

Farce

Seymour Hicks is seen in one of those farces with a French atmosphere and a freedom of innuendo which at least make for bright entertainment for audiences not too censorious in such matters. It is essentially stage material—the original played very successfully at Daly's here.

Hicks is a gay bachelor of fifty who gives keys to his flat to all the ladies who are temporarily objects of his admiration. Then he lets the flat to a friend of similar habits and the film becomes the stock farce in which husbands and wives are hidden in separate rooms, lovers are escorted or thrown down the fire-escape, and much more of that sort of thing.

Marie Lohr, Hugh Wakefield, Jane Carr and Leslie Wareing are the other leading players and do their bits to make it an amusing light feature for those who like their entertainment mildly spiced.

It sums up as "French" farce with a British star famous for his impersonation of the philanderer.

At the London trade show, Piccadilly Theatre, it was received in a manner indicating that a very large percentage of the British public likes the same material in its talkies as has amused it on the stage for a generation.—B. A.

Our Relations

(MGM-Roach)

Character Comedy

The relations named in the title are twin brothers of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, known as Alf and Bert, who are played, as are themselves, by Messrs. Laurel and Hardy in a manner less confusing than this paragraph and more reasonably, logically and effectively than is commonly the case when identical twinship is used pictorially for comic or other purposes. As if in realization that twin portrayal has ever been a production pitfall, the sponsors appear to have taken extraordinary precautions against the occurrence of confusion, and the hearty reaction of a by no means handpicked audience present at the screening covered in this report is evidence that they have been extraordinarily successful. Hilarious is the word for that audience's response to the production.

The story presents Messrs. Laurel and Hardy as themselves and simultaneously as their twin brothers, whom they believe to have been executed at sea for mutiny. Circumstance brings their seagoing twins to the city of their residence and during a day and night in which the paths of the quartet cross repeatedly without bringing the brothers face to face (until the end), complications entangle all hands in comic, dangerous and otherwise stimulating situations.

Double exposure is used sparingly and identities are preserved, as far as the audience is concerned, by intelligently handled alternation of sequences. In addition to the comedy of gesture, grimace and pantomime which is characteristic of the comedians, is to be observed, in this appearance, the use of comedy dialogue on a plane more nearly approaching the Charles Butterworth, Roland Young type of humor than anything these players have employed previously.

Exploitation based on the twin phase of the story may be used without stint, as the picture warrants forthright mention of it. As to advertising phraseology, the stronger words and promises suitable for the promotion of comedies would seem, on the basis of the New York experience, to be fully justified.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre, New York, where laugh machines and other spectacular lobby exploitation were employed to attract passerby in Times Square and where widely assorted members of a capacity matinee crowd laughed long, lustily and often as the picture ran its course.—W. R. W.

Produced by Hal Roach. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Directed by Harry Lachman. A Stan Laurel production. Story by W. W. Jacobs. Screen play by Richard Connell and Felix Adler. This item in the "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman" series is composed wholly of scenes showing the tryouts for and many final events of the Olympic Games. Sports covered are widely varied. Eleanor Holm Jarrett's qualification swim is included. Jesse Owens' record-breaking performances are shown in detail. Narration, by Ed Thorgersen, is swift, lucid and well managed as to content and import. Herr Hitler is photographed from several angles, as are other notables, not including Avery Brundage. The subject is presented strictly as a sports item and is decidedly stimulating as such.—10½ minutes.

Mother Pluto

(United Artists)

Very Good

While Pluto is out foraging for a bone a hen invades Pluto's doghouse and awaits the arrival of a score of chicks. Covering the eggs with straw, the hen leaves the doghouse. In the hen's absence Pluto returns. Pluto is frightened when the eggs begin to pop all around him and little chickens emerge. He tries to escape them but the chickens follow him, so Pluto adopts them. When the hen returns the chickens refuse to leave Pluto. Mother hen tells father rooster, who engages Pluto in conflict. Pluto is victorious and the chicks stay with him. Running time, 9 minutes.

Oh, Duchess

(Columbia)

Slapstick Comedy

Rough and ready Polly Moran again provides her robust brand of humor in this rowdy and slapstick short subject. A fish peddler by trade, Polly is familiarly known to her customers by the royal title of "the Duchess." When her daughter's fiance uses this sobriquet to win his rich and snooty father's consent, the father becomes so enthusiastic that he insists on giving a luncheon in honor of Miss Moran. Forced to carry out the impersonation, Polly arrives bedecked in grand style only to discover that her daughter's future father-in-law, Vernon Dent, is the very gentleman whose eternal hate she previously incurred as a result of a hectic automobile argument. But so fetching is the new Polly that her deception is not discovered until the piscatorial Duchess, deep in her cups, inadvertently blows a party horn and going atavistic begins to bellow her sales call of "fish." But by that time the two youngsters have slipped away and married. Arriving too late to prevent the ceremony, Dent and Moran engage in a heated verbal bombardment and in the midst of it are also married. The comedy's brand of humor, never subtle or refined, nevertheless should draw many a hearty and prolonged guffaw from the spectator. Running time, 20 minutes.

Am I Having Fun

(Columbia)

Clyde Comedy

The Scotch comedian this time is pictured as a masquerading maharajah in what turns out to be an amusing and rapidly paced comedy. Clyde is a taxi driver whose fare, Arthur Houseman, induces him to impersonate an Indian potentate for the purposes of a publicity story. Along with the real maharajah, Clyde's hard headed as well as hard fisted spouse supplies the comic complications. In the traditional style of this genre of comedy, there is much wild chase and merry mayhem. But it is all committed in the name of good fun, which is just what this short subject is. Running time, 20 minutes.

Robin Hood in an Arrow Escape

Amusing

Into brisk action, and without undue violence to the verities of the tradition, is crammed the story of Robin Hood's courtship of the princess, the jousting of the knights for her hand in marriage, the vanquishment of the winner by the hero and, of course, the pursuit and the triumphant repulse. The subject is beneficiary here and there of effective silhouette and there's a dash of song. It's better than most cartoon efforts in kind.—6 minutes.

The Sporting Quiz

(Paramount)

Sport Short

Ted Husing plays teacher and pops some puzzling sport queries at his audience for it to answer. A moment is given the spectator to ransack his memory and then, in his customary style of breezy repartee, Mr. Husing supplies the correct bit of information with a picturized explanation following. Some of the quizz questions put up for consideration are the meaning of the expression "catching a crab," definition of a half gainor, of a game invented 40 years ago by an American, a "charlie horse," the identification of famous sports personalities, and the naming of various breeds of dog. It all adds up to a good short subject and a good time. Running time, 10 minutes.

Kiko the Kangaroo in a Battle Royal Routine

The mortgage on the farmer's home is foreclosed and Kiko the Kangaroo retrieves it for him with money won by knocking out the boxer who challenges all comers. There's nothing in the subject to distinguish it above others in the series.—6½ minutes.

The Star Reporter

(Paramount)

Fair

Acting as a sort of Major Bowes, Ted Husing reveals some of his latest talent discoveries along film row. Listed as finds are Bennie Bartlett, the child actor seen recently in "13 Hours by Air" and "The Texas Rangers," who reveals an unknown talent as a song writer and singer; some glimpses of the screen test of Dorothy Lamour, which won for the young lady a picture contract and the title role in "The Jungle Princess"; Joer Rardin, a one-man edition of an orchestra, and finally Louis Da Pron, who with the graceful Vera Marshe as his partner displays the dancing work that made him a feature attraction of "Three Cheers for Love." Running time, 10 minutes.

Straight as an Arrow

(Paramount)

Interesting

Presented in this short subject is an exhibition of superb skill with bow and arrow as practiced by George Hill, who carries the enviable reputation of being the world's greatest archer. Displaying the same splendid technique that he showed in the feature picture "The Last Wilderness" of several years ago, Hill performs the difficult trick of bringing down clay pigeons, spearing fish and shooting an apple off the cranium of a courageous and trustful human subject. Slow motion camera work increases the audience's appreciation of the art of this bowman. Running time, 10 minutes.

Rah, Rah, Rhythm

Refreshing

Persons given to prediction might do worse than to post a modest wager that Herman Timburg, Jr., and Pat Rooney, Jr., given a bit of cooperation, as here, by the story and production departments, and time for reports from the provinces to trickle in, will develop into a screen comedy team of the first order. Gifted sons of gifted fathers, and both schooled in vaudeville under proficient parental sponsorship, these young men bring to the short subject field confidence, assurance and ability readily translated into entertainment. In this pairing, their second, they are collegiate rivals for the romantic interest of the dean's daughter and the lead in the college show. This not unfamiliar pattern serves surprisingly well as an outline into which they manage to fit their respective talents. Both boys show much improvement over their initial performance and the comedy is well above average.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Screen Snapshots, No. 2

(Columbia)

Newsy

Newsy shots of cinema celebrities include a visit to the ranch house of Joel McCrea and Frances Dee, a glimpse of Edward Everett Horton and his prize canines, a look into the new home of Anna Sten and for the pièce de resistance a tour of inspection through one of the huge Hollywood motion picture studios. The items, well chosen and edited, make this short interesting entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Country Cousin

(United Artists)

Excellent

Humor and pathos form a rare combination in an animated cartoon but consider the case of the poor country relation of the big town's dude. The country mouse is overjoyed when the opportunity to visit his cousin in the city presents itself. He is welcomed by his cousin mouse but almost immediately the visit begins to pall on the country mouse as he repeatedly is cautioned to be quiet. A visit to the banquet table means more trouble, as he laps up some champagne and in a wavering state knocks over glasses and dishes. When the house cat becomes menacing the country mouse calls it a night and thankfully wends his way back to the country. Running time, 9 minutes.

Trial Starts in Infringement Suit

The Wheeler volume control patent, the purpose of which is to control the volume of sound in a radio receiver within a narrow range instead of the wide range of variation of input signal, was explained by five witnesses called to the stand in the first week of the patent infringement suit in which the Hazeltine Corporation of Hoboken charges RCA Manufacturing Company and the RCA Victor Company with infringement of automatic volume control patent before Judge John F. Nields in the United States District court at Wilmington, Del. The original and reissue Wheeler patent is involved in the action.

RCA rested its case Tuesday.

Frank N. Waterman, of Summit, N. J., consultant engineer; Virgie M. Graham, director of the tube application department of the Hygrade Sylvania Corporation, manufacturers of tubes and lamps; Frederick E. Johnson, chief engineer of the Crosley Radio Corporation, Cincinnati; Leslie F. Curtis, chief engineer of the radio division of the United American Bosch Corporation, Springfield, Mass., and William L. Dunn, chief engineer of the Belmont Radio Corporation, Chicago, testified concerning the operation and purpose of the patent and the introduction of the control to the radio industry.

P. H. Betts, Herbert Fischer, Edward L. Nelson and Henry F. Scarr gave depositions for RCA.

Waterman testified that in the defendants' sets the anode of the two-electrode rectifiers upon which the controlling voltage is built up is connected back to the grid of the amplifier tube to be controlled. He said that in the defendants' systems and in the Wheeler system the entire signal, the carrier with its modulation, is impressed on the rectifier. In all the defendants' systems and in the patent, he continued, the voice frequencies are subsequently separated from the rectifier signal and passed on to the amplifier.

Graham, in charge of the radio engineering laboratory of the Stromberg-Carlson Telephone Manufacturing Company of Rochester in 1926, told of having learned of the patent from Harold A. Wheeler. Wheeler on Aug. 2, 1926, he said, disclosed to him such a circuit, at the time called an audiostat.

Johnson, a former Hazeltine employee, denied having ever heard of the volume control patent prior to 1925. In 1926, while in the employ of the Hazeltine company, Johnson admitted hearing of the control at a meeting of I. R. M. Engineers at which time a paper on automatic volume control was read by Wheeler.

Curtis said he first heard of the control in 1927. The control, he said, seemed to offer a practical solution of the problem of fading and blasting in receivers. The diode detector, he continued, prior to 1926, was generally considered to be inefficiently sensitive for use in receivers.

Dunn, who designed radios for the Freshman Company, now bankrupt, 1926 to 1928, denied knowledge of the control prior to 1926. He first learned of the control through one of his radio engineers who attended the Wheeler meeting in 1927.

Peace Advocates Now Using Films To Spread Propaganda Over U. S.

Peace propagandists of America are embracing the motion picture on a wholesale scale to spread their doctrine from coast to coast. This method of peace education that brings home "the horror and futility of war" to people living in isolated and remote areas is being carried on under the auspices of the Emergency Peace Campaign. Traveling film units, complete with screens, 16 mm. projectors, usable indoors or out, and films, mounted on automobiles, now are touring the nation. Wending their way into out-of-the-way places, along back-country roads, into the mountains, and across the farm lands, these "peacemobiles" are presenting a picture program, selected and supervised by Dr. Francis Onderdonk, formerly of the school of architecture at the University of Michigan.

The pictures are shown at night, sometimes along some mountain creek where a giant backdrop of fir trees provides the setting; or again, in a crowded city in some deserted lot; or out in the farm areas with interested watchers squatting on the ground, intently gazing on the screen. They provide not only an educational opportunity, but are bringing a motion picture form of entertainment for the first time for toil-bound folks of the backwoods regions.

Three of these cars are operated from general headquarters of the Emergency Peace Campaign in Philadelphia, speakers interspersing the showing of the films with comments. One is still on the road, carrying on through the deep South, with Dr. Onderdonk showing the films to thousands of folks who have never seen a motion picture before.

Feature pictures and shorts make up the free show in the interests of peace. The most significant of them all is "Drums of Doom," a talking picture drama based on E. Johannsen's novel, "The Four from the Industry." This picture was banned by Adolph Hitler from Germany, and its director, G. W. Pabst, a German, was said to have been forced to flee to Paris. Hollywood products used include "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," Claude Rains' picture for Universal, and "Broken Lullaby," Ernst Lubitsch's production of the Rostand novel.

Shorts include "Dealers in Death," a compilation of newsreels about the international munitions industry; George Seldes' "Toward Unity," a one-reeler concerning the customs of different races, and "Why?", an animated cartoon which has a fox as a munitioneer and two monkeys portraying the armament race.

"Seth" Brown of Audit Bureau Dies

Funeral services were held in New York on Wednesday for Charles S. Brown, known in the advertising world as Seth Brown. Mr. Brown was a founder and a former secretary of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America and was one of the founders of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Born in Oberlin, Ohio, 73 years ago, Mr. Brown taught advertising to private classes in Chicago and later moved to Cleveland, where he became president of the Cleveland Advertising Club. From 1912 to 1916 he published Standard Advertising, a trade magazine, in Chicago. After 30 years in the advertising busines, he retired five years ago.

Marks New Stock Ready

New securities provided for in the reorganization plan for Marks Brothers Theatres, Inc., of Chicago, are ready for distribution. The plan was approved by the United States district court there under Section 77-B and the Federal bankruptcy act and affects three theatres, the Marbro and Granada, operated by Balaban and Katz, and the Broadway Strand, operated by Essaness on the lease from B. and K.

Academy Units Seek Standard

As part of a general program to improve the quality of product reaching the screen, two committees of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will study and make recommendations for standardization of sound and picture projection equipment characteristics, according to William Koenig, chairman of the Research Council.

The work of both the committees will be under the general supervision of Carl Dreher. The sound committee will be under the direct chairmanship of John Hilliard and will comprise John Aalberg, Lawrence Aicholtz, Harry Jones, E. A. McClintock, Gordon Sawyer, William Thayer, Ralph Townsend, and S. J. Twinig. The picture committee, under the chairman of Byron Haskin, will comprise John Aalberg, George Crane, Elmer Dyer, Arthur Edeson, Harris Ensign, and Henry Goldfarb.

Syndicate Gets Serials

Robert Mintz, president of Stage and Screen Productions, has closed with Syndicate Exchanges, Inc., for the New York distribution of three Weiss-Mintz 15-episode serials. They are "Custer's Last Stand," "The Clutching Hand," and "The Black Coin."

FRENCH INDUSTRY'S REALIGNMENT ANSWERS LEGAL CONTROL THREAT

Four Groups—Production, Distribution, Exhibition and Technics — Have Own Leaders, But All Under One Chief

Educational and Moral Aspects of Industry to be Advanced; Home and Export Markets to Be Furthered in Latest Move

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The French cinema industry at last has gathered in a single organization, the Confederation Generale du Cinema (General Confederation of the Cinema), which groups all the employers' branches.

In previous articles it had been pointed out that such an organization was necessary, the present French Government having threatened to organize it by law and maybe nationalize it, if it did not do so itself.

Two Definite Earlier Groups

There were two definite groups in the business: 1) The old Syndical Chamber, presided over by Charles Delac, a year ago became the Federation of the Cinema Industry, its principal objective being defense of French production against foreign pictures, especially American. This Federation grouped a certain number of producers and distributors of French films, a few exhibitors, and the main technical companies, such as printing and developing laboratories.

2) The other group, the main one, was the Comité du Film (Film Committee), at the head of which was the manager of the French branch of Tobis, George Lourau. This Committee grouped many French producers, all foreign distributors, including the American companies, and many French distributors.

The Exhibitors Association, presided by Raymond Lussiez and comprising most of the French exhibitors, was connected with the Comité du Film.

About ten months ago an Independent Syndical Chamber of the Technical Industries, grouping all printers, laboratories and studios, was formed in addition to the organizations already existing. Mr. Chollat presided over this Independent Chamber.

Crisis Brought by Strike

When the employers had to answer, last June, to the pressing demands of their staffs for social improvements and wage increases, demands which were strengthened by a general strike, Mr. Chollat and the other groups of the Comité du Film recognized the importance of the problem and went to work on it.

They called upon all employers in the industry, organized meetings, and at last arrived at an agreement with the trade unions.

The organizations in the Comité du Film thus proved their authority. Apart from a small number of independents, who refused to be members of any organization or remained in the former Chambre Syndicale, the organizations of the Comité combined the large majority of the active members of the industry.

The Syndical groups frequently were asked to stop their private quarrels and form a central organization, as much to impose discipline as to oppose interventions of Parliament, State, or official commissions.

A solution of taxation problems, a return to strict rules of commercial honesty, a balancing of production to the need of films, and enlarging of the national market were the most important problems.

Following principles laid down by the Economic National Committee, the leaders of the Comité du Film decided to establish fundamental units concentrating the four leading branches of the industry. They are:

AUSTRIANS MAKE ARYAN FILMS TO SAVE MARKET

In order to assure themselves of the German market for their pictures, without which they could not continue in operation, Austrian producers in Vienna this week have been forced to confine their activities to the production of so-called Aryan films exclusively.

Several Viennese producers attempted to produce German-speaking films without regard to the Aryan stipulation maintaining in Germany, hoping that they could obtain sufficient revenue in other countries, but found themselves mistaken.

Syndical Chamber of the Film Technical Industries, presided over by Mr. Chollat.

French Syndical Chamber of Film Production, headed by Felix Gandéra.

French Syndical Chamber of Film Distributors, Georges Lourau.

Union of the French Syndical Chambers of Motion Picture Theatres, Raymond Lussiez.

These four units have constituted the so-called Confederation Generale de la Cinematographie (General Confederation of the Cinema Industry).

The president of this Confederation, named for one year, is Jules Demaria, manager of a technical company, and one of the veterans of the industry.

As soon as the Confederation had been formed, the three first-named Syndical units changed their boards of directors. Only the Exhibitors Association was not affected.

The new boards are as follows:

Syndical Chamber of Technical Industries:

President: Mr. Chollat (Technical Industrial).

Vice-Presidents: Leopold Maurice and Mr. Trarieux.

Treasurer: Mr. Mathot (Eclair Studios and Laboratories).

Film Production

President: Felix Gandera (independent producer).

Vice-President: Edmond Ratisbonne (independent producer).

General Secretary: Henri Ullmann (independent producer).

Treasurer: J. B. Chassaing.

Film Distributors

President: Louis Metayer (Pathé Consortium).

Vice-Presidents: Henry Klarsfeld (Paramount) and Marcel Spreicher.

General Secretary: Alexandre Stein (MGM).

The Confederation was established on simple principles:

Each Syndical Chamber will have four representatives on the board of directors of the Confederation. They must each actively represent a specialty and all must belong to different companies.

Decisions will be effective only on unanimous advice of the 16 delegates.

Formation of this General Confederation seems to reply exactly to what was asked by the Government. The Confederation has jurisdiction over each of the Chambers.

With Mr. Demaria as president, the Confederation has as vice-presidents Messrs. Chollat, Gandera and Lussiez. The treasurer is Leopold Maurice.

Other members of the board are Marc Lauer, Louis Didiée (Technical Industries), Edmond Ratisbonne, Henri Ullmann, Messrs. Harispiru, Klarsfeld, Sprecher, Bernheim, Dodrumez, Fougeret (producers, distributors and exhibitors).

Objectives of the Confederation

Constitution of the Confederation sets the registered office headquarters as 39 Avenue Victor Hugo.

The objectives of the Confederation are defined as follows:

1) To aid the moral and material progress of the industry.

2) To assure defense of the moral, artistic, technical and economic interests of the confederated associations.

3) To represent the whole of the industry.

4) To develop the educational influence of the cinema.

5) To look after the morality of the industry.

6) To bring the help of the industry to establishment of financial credit.

A seventh objective, to act as the medium for execution of all official regulations affecting the industry, is amplified as follows:

a) To coordinate efforts and effect complete agreement in defense of the industry and its development in France.

b) To organize the common study of commercial and technical matters relating to the general interests, moral and artistic as well as material.

c) To organize and develop the home market and the export market.

d) To insure representation of the whole of the industry with the public authorities, administrations and national economic councils.

e) To assure representation with the professional associations: authors, actors, technical staff; artisans, employees, workmen.

f) To develop the social work of the Cinema.

Arbitration Committees

g) To organize committees of arbitration.

h) To apply all standard contracts.

i) To establish general statistics concerning the industry, particularly on film distribution, theatre decentralizing, and the composition of the programs.

j) To establish and administer all units handling the statistics, to assure control of receipts, and to effectuate distribution of these receipts to renters or creditors.

k) To prevent all disloyal maneuvers among the different branches.

l) To intervene on relations with authors, actors, technicians and workers.

m) To represent the French cinema in international organizations.

n) To organize the participation of the French cinema at exhibitions and congresses.

AFL Convenes As N.Y. Unions Study Merger

While motion picture labor circles were speculating over what film union problems, if any, might come before the American Federation of Labor in annual convention this week in Tampa, Mayor LaGuardia of New York was issuing a stern ultimatum to metropolitan projectionists' unions to immediately end their long dispute which has been blamed for scores of outrages on New York theatres and patrons, film unions elsewhere, too, were engaged in an adjustment of their problems and in electing new executive personnel for 1937.

Among those with motion picture affiliations who were to attend the A. F. of L. convention are Sol A. Rosenblatt, who was to speak, Pat Casey, labor representative of major film companies, George E. Browne, IATSE president, and Kenneth Thompson, head of the Screen Actors Guild. Mr. Browne was elected an AFL vice-president, giving strength in AFL management to the projectionists' unions.

A closed meeting of Mayor LaGuardia's survey board, which is seeking settlement of union difficulties in New York, was held on Monday in the office of Howard S. Cullman at the Roxy theatre. Sam A. Lewisohn, chairman, Mr. Cullman, board member, and Ben Golden and Harry Lurie, technical advisors, were present. William Collins, third member, was absent. Discussion was reported limited to progress thus far made toward complying with the mayoral mandate. Another session was set later in the week.

The completed draft of the agreement brought about by the Mayor's committee, by which the Allied Union will be merged with Local 306, is not expected to be completed for about two weeks. The basic principles of the agreement call for the absorption by Local 306 of the membership of Allied, and the granting to Allied projectionists of a wage increase of 25 per cent by theatre members of the I. T. O. A.

Circuit Judge John W. Joynt fixed Wednesday as the date of a hearing in St. Louis which was to determine whether he would make permanent a temporary order restraining members of Electrical Workers' Union No. 1 from picketing the Missouri and St. Louis theatres as a part of its jurisdictional controversy with the IATSE. Manager Ralph McGowan of the St. Louis had protested the picketing in a telegram to William Green, president of the A. F. of L.

Nominations for the election of officers of Hollywood's IATSE Local No. 150 were completed with Earl Hamilton, president, M. G. Sands, secretary-treasurer, and R. L. Hayward, business manager, up for reelection and unopposed. T. W. Armentrout, encumbent, and J. H. McDonald are opponents for the post of assistant business manager. The election will be held December 7th, with installation of officers January 1st.

Foreign Films for Seattle

Herbert Rosener, operator of cinemas in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland devoted to the exhibition of foreign language films, has acquired the Montlake in Seattle for like purposes.

MGM Will Open Three Theatres Abroad in 1937

Three new foreign theatres will be opened by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer next June. Two new structures were opened by the company last month, one in Montevideo and another in Rio de Janeiro.

Last week, construction was started on a new 1,800-seat theatre in Durban, South Africa, and it is thought the house will be completed by June 19. Building will start at once on a 1,500-seat theatre in Bombay, to be opened to the public June 1, and a 1,200-seat house will be started next week in Brisbane, Australia. This also is due to be opened on June 1.

Initial Plans Made For Zukor Jubilee

Plans to date for the celebration of Adolf Zukor's silver jubilee by Paramount include the opening of the 17 week anniversary observance with a dinner on January 7th, the producer's birthday, to be sponsored by the Paramount Studio Club, and the presentation of silver medallions to exhibitors throughout the country who played "Queen Elizabeth," Mr. Zukor's first feature release.

Names of the various exhibitors who booked "Queen Elizabeth" when it was released in 1912 are now being listed by exchanges from coast to coast and each medallion will be engraved with the name of the recipient.

The original film will be shown at the dinner to be given by the Studio Club which will be held on the largest available stage in the studio. Entertainment will feature stars of the screen and radio, according to George Bagnell, president of the club. The guest list will include stars and executives associated with Mr. Zukor during the last quarter of a century.

The Paramount producer was host at an informal dinner to Barney Balaban and Stanton Griffis at the Ambassador Hotel in Hollywood last week. The two executives were in Hollywood on their first visit since becoming associated with the company.

The company will release 12 feature productions during the silver jubilee celebration according to William LeBaron. The pictures will be "Champagne Waltz," "The Plainsman," "Maid of Salem," "College Holiday," "Souls at Sea,' "High, Wide and Handsome," "Waikiki Wedding," "Swing High, Swing Low," "John Meade's Woman," "I Met Him in Paris," "That's What Girls Are Made Of," and a new untitled Harold Lloyd picture.

William A. Wellman and Albert Lewin have joined the production ranks of Paramount. Mr. Wellman has signed a contract calling for three pictures annually and will start work upon completion of "A Star Is Born," which he is now producing for Selznick International. Mr. Lewin, whose contract does not call for any specified number of pictures, will sail on the Normandie on November 25th for a European vacation. He is due at the studio on March 1st.

Oscar Serlin, formerly head of Paramount's New York talent department, is in Hollywood to take up his new duties as an associate producer in the Paramount studio.

See Admission Increase After Decision on Tax

Increases in admission prices are expected to become general throughout the entire area of Greater New York as soon as the current legal test of the city's right to apply the two per cent municipal sales tax to film rentals has been decided by the court of appeals at Albany next month, it was reported Tuesday.

Numerous exhibitors have been prepared to make upwards adjustments of admissions for the past several months on the basis of increased attendance and the marked improvement in general business conditions with its assurance of better public buying power. Admission scale increases have been deferred, however, because of the uncertainty over the outcome of the court test of the sales tax on films.

New York City theatres pay one-tenth of one per cent of their grosses as an emergency unemployment tax, and with the social security tax to be added after next January 1, even those exhibitors whose admission scales do not come within the Federal admission tax brackets are agreed that an increase in prices will have to be made in the near future regardless of whether or not the sales tax is eliminated. A determination of the amount of increase required, however, hinges on whether or not the two per cent sales tax need or need not be figured in the new scales, exhibitors say. For this reason, action has been deferred in the hope that the issue will be decided before other tax overhead factors force the increases, it was said.

With no action on increased scales being taken now, the exhibitor will be free to mark up admissions in accordance with conditions prevailing when the sales tax issue has been decided. Judicious increases could be made at that time which not only would absorb the new costs whether the sales tax is upheld or not, but would also result in a net benefit to the exhibitor as well, it is pointed out. If increases were to be made now on the basis of the sales tax being upheld theatres taking such action would place themselves at a competitive disadvantage for the time being and might be forced to reduce scales later if the tax was declared invalid. On the other hand, if the increases were made now on the theory that the sales tax will not be upheld an inadvisable second increase might be necessary later in the event the tax was declared legal.

Two European Films Bought

George Kraska, director of the Fine Arts Theatre, Boston, has purchased American rights to two European pictures, "The Monastery," a French film dealing with the life of a community of monks, and "Der Weisse Rausch" (The Ski Chase), starring Hans Schneider, champion skiier.

Spectrum-Rosenbaum Deal

Distribution rights to Spectrum Pictures' six westerns have been acquired by Emil Rosenbaum, president of Advance Film Exchange in New York for that territory and Northern New Jersey.

Eleanor Powell in

"BORN TO DANCE"

with James Stewart, Virginia Bruce, Una Merkel, Frances Langford, Buddy Ebsen, Alan Dinehart

(HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW)

M-G-M 105 mins.

A MUSICAL ON A GRAND SCALE; SHOULD BE A WOW AT ANY BOX OFFICE.

This is one of the singingest, dancingest mammoth musicals ever made. And it sure is one grand show. As produced by Jack Cummings, and directed by Roy Del Ruth, it is a big production that should be a box-office wow. Everybody sings and everybody dances, but the topper of them all is Eleanor Powell. Her dances are many, and some of the routines are nothing short of sensational. The songs by Cole Porter are in the hit class, with "I've Got You Under My Skin", "Easy to Love", "I'm Nuts About You" and "Rap, Tap On Wood", standing out. James Stewart sings and dances, and he and Eleanor are splendid as the romantic interest. For comedy there are Una Merkel, Sid Silvers and Buddy Ebsen. Besides contributing a lot of laughs they are very important in the song and dance set-up. Raymond Walburn adds to the laugh footage. Virginia Bruce and Alan Dinehart have important roles, and Frances Langford sings in nice style. Special mention should go to Reginald Gardiner for a smash routine in which he directs a non-existent symphony orchestra. Georges and Jalna present a superlative ball-room number, Barnett Parker has an enjoyable bit, and Helen Troy's telephone skit is hilarious. Juanita Quigley is a clever and beautiful child, who gets her lines over well. The dance ensembles, as staged by Dave Gould, are gigantic numbers and are most important in the total lay-out. The story by Jack McGowan, Sid Silvers and B. G. De Sylva, with screenplay by the first two, furnishes a peach of a structure on which to use the songs and dances, and their dialogue is very clever. Ray June's photography gives scope to the numbers and his work on the individuals is noteworthy. Roy Del Ruth's direction gives the piece a swift pace, with entertainment every foot of the way, and Jack Cummings can be proud of a production of this calibre. While visiting his wife, Una Merkel, whom he has not seen during his four years in the navy, Sid Silvers introduces a fellow sailor, James Stewart, to Eleanor Powell, who is desirous of getting on the stage. Eleanor goes for James in a big way and he for her. A publicity gag involves him with Virginia Bruce, an actress, and Eleanor thinks it is on the level. Virginia falls for James, too, and he leads her on because of the opportunity it affords him to maneuver his Eleanor into Virginia's job, which the former is understudying. Jimmy's explanation, plus Eleanor's professional success, reunites them romantically.

RIOTOUS COMEDY PUT OVER IN GRAND STYLE BY BOX OFFICE BIG SHOTS.

One riot of a comedy is this "Love On the Run". It sparkles with clever dialogue that Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone put over in grand style. In such a swell piece of entertainment, this name cast should mean smash box-office returns. Every type and kind of audience should love its gay, breezy, laugh-loaded qualities. Tone deserves special mention for his performance. Crawford and Gable are splendid in this light type of comedy as they certainly know how to put over the lines. Reginald Owen makes a perfect suave spy, masquerading as a Baron with an accent, and Mona Barrie serves capably as his accomplice. Donald Meek is in for a dance with Joan that is a wow, and she and Gable do a routine that will rock the audience. The piece is filled with hilarious situations, and the lightning tempo that is maintained never allows for a dull moment. W. S. Van Dyke's expert direction is everywhere to be noted, and the screenplay with the praiseworthy dialogue was written by John Lee Mahin, Manuel Seff and Gladys Hurlbut. Franz Waxman contributed a very appropriate musical score. This production should do Joseph Mankiewicz, its producer, proud. Gable and Tone are a couple of double-crossing, fast - working reporters. Gable meets Joan, who is hot copy and befriends her while getting her story exclusively. In making a hurried getaway they take Owen's airplane, in which they discover a very important map. Joan and Gable proceed to fall for each other and when she learns his true identity, is off him momentarily. Tone always manages to be around somehow and he fortunately slips in when it seems as though Owen has got Crawford and Gable in his clutches. Joan forgives Gable, and the picture ends with both boys still trying to out-smart one another.

MGM's "Born to Dance" has one of the best openings and greatest finishes yet seen in one of those big, lavish and entertaining productions. The opening demands attention that holds for the full length of the picture, setting a pace that would seem impossible to follow, while the finish will send an audience out yelling its praises It's a big show

Submarine Locale

This big musical, assembled by MGM around the nimble feet and radiant smile of Eleanor Powell, is a super-galaxy of young dancing and singing talent in a coruscating collection of Cole Porter musical numbers and comedy interludes, with several specialties and two or three big production numbers added It is a generous order of breezy and tuneful entertainment and will give general satisfaction and register solidly at the boxoffice

Its frame is another navy story, located this time on a submarine, with a gob-meets-girl romance, and uses the dependable device of having the gob engineer the girl into an understudy spot in a big show and then engineer the leading woman out on the opening night There are some engaging variations along the way, but it is what the story frames that matters, and matters plenty

Eleanor Powell's dancing seems more magical each time one sees and hears it. She is credited with exhibiting 14 different styles in this show and is just about perfection in them all. Her good looks and unaffected charm continue to be winning assets.

The show opens with a male chorus, "Rolling Home," sung by the gobs in the heart of the submarine as it enters New York harbor, and the singing is led by James Stewart, who becomes Eleanor's romance and by Sid Silvers and Buddy Ebsen, his pals.

The boys, sent on an errand by Captain Raymond Walburn, the jovial but feeble-minded skipper, land in a boy-meet-girl social club, where Una Merkel is clerk, Frances Langford, a waitress, and Eleanor an out-of-town refugee. The dancing and singing, as well as the romancing, begin right there and it continues on into the show business, where Virginia Bruce is a singing star loaded with explosive temperament who walks out on the spectacular battleship finale.

An amusing story-variant has Sid Silvers married to Una Merkel and returning to her after a four-year absence, to find an addition to the family in little Juanita Quigley This situation is pie for Una and Sid and yields many of the best laughs of the piece.

Outstanding Songs

The outstanding songs are "Rap, Tap on Wood," for Eleanor, who has also a lilting waltz song, "I'm Nuts About You" and "Swingin' Away" for the big finale With Stewart she has "So Easy to Love," which is repeated by Frances Langford and Buddy Ebsen Virginia Bruce's best song is "I've Got You Under My Skin" and there is one for Raymond Waldron, "Miss Lucy James," with a male chorus.

One of the hit specialties is Reginald Gardiner's burlesque of a showy orchestra conductor, leading in a policeman's uniform in Central Park an invisible band in a fine orchestral interlude Another topnotch skit is Barnett Parker's floorwalker rave in a department store cottage and a third is a dance by Georges and Jalna.

The music throughout is admirably delivered under Alfred Newman's baton and rates credits to its arrangers, Roger Edens, Edward Powell and Leon Arnaud, with another to Dave Gould for his dance direction and to Merrill .Pye for musical number sets

Bright Dialogue

The authors of the piece, Jack McGowan, Sid Silvers and B. G. DeSylva, have decked their story frame out with a heavy sprinkling of laugh-lines and bright gags, and director Roy Del Ruth has adroitly swung the whole into breezy continuity, while Ray June at the camera has given it arresting pictorial value.

In the support James Stewart's bashful gob is amusingly different and engaging Virginia Bruce sings and looks better than ever in her ungrateful part. Frances Langford wins at every opportunity Alan Dinehart scores pleasantly as an enterprising press agent, Buddy Ebsen helps a lot in all departments and Helen Troy scores uproariously as a switchboard operator

The picture is a first producer assignment for Jack Cummings, who must get his share of the praise.

As suggested in the opening paragraph, MGM or any other company has not produced a finish to a picture that is as fast, as lavish and as entertaining as the big finale. The number reeks of heavy expenditure and, whatever the outlay, it is justified by the entertainment.

Exhibitors will welcome this new musical; audiences will do nip-ups over it. It's a cinch to add plenty to any theater boxoffice and that's why pictures are made.

GOLDSMITH WARNS OF TELEVISION PITFALLS AS COAST STARTS TESTS

Needs Constructive Governmental Attitude, Networks of Stations, Careful Engineering, Radio Manufacturers Told

Commercial television broadcasting, to win general public acceptance and to enjoy a healthy growth, must observe certain canons of careful planning, must avoid the pitfalls fallen into by the radio industry or other entertainment mediums, and cannot afford to make mistakes which would discredit it with the public. This was the thesis of a talk on "Commercial Television and Its Needs" made by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting industrial engineer, before the Radio Manufacturers Association in Rochester this week.

The necessary elements for proper commercial development of television, Dr. Goldsmith said, are "a constructive Governmental attitude implemented by corresponding regulation, an active group of television stations at least partly connected into national networks for program syndication, forward-looking program building organizations, careful engineering and manufacturing methods rendered effective by suitable merchandising practices and satisfactory servicing, an enthusiastic and numerous group of home-lookers, and finally a number of broadcast advertisers willing and able to secure the part-time attention of the home audience."

Emphasizing the importance of these elements, Dr. Goldsmith said that the day of widespread public acceptance of television broadcasting will be delayed and the success of the industry reduced by just the extent that any of them are missing from its development.

Constructive and wise Governmental regulation of television standards was viewed as important by the engineer particularly to avoid speedy obsolescence of early, quickly made receivers in the higher price ranges, with consequent general dissatisfaction and loss of confidence. Essential uniformity in standards for broadcasting and reception methods was advised "even at the cost of some inconvenience to individual groups."

Other future problems of the industry which Dr. Goldsmith recommended to the care of Government and for which he urged progressive regulation included allocation of wavelengths in crowded localities preferably to organizations which have shown responsibility and give the most promise of rendering the best public service; regulation and eventual elimination of interference on broadcast wavelengths; assignment of power classifications to stations, and decision on the length of tenure of broadcasting licenses.

The speaker urged extension into the television field of the present radio system of networks and outlet stations. Only on a basis of broad cooperation, he said, can television broadcasting achieve wide attention and success. Casual or careless transmitter production, likely to result if the field is dominated by individuals, would not be in the interest of the industry or of the public, he pointed out.

THEATRES DOOMED, SAYS DRINKWATER

A dire fate is foreseen for motion picture theatres by John Drinkwater, English dramatist. But even he admits it is some time in the future. There will be no motion picture theatres in 25 years, he says. Speaking on the place of drama in education he predicts that television will upset the cinema industry and that it will begin to make itself seriously felt within the next five years.

This same element of development of transmitting stations into networks would aid the recruiting and training of talent for the new medium, Dr. Goldsmith said. It is reasonable to assume, he added, that television programs will require an entirely new army of entertainers with special talent and that the industry will be compelled to develop this group largely without drawing on present fields of entertainment.

Speaking of the relationship of the industry to motion pictures Dr. Goldsmith said, "The motion picture field which, in our opinion, has little to fear from television broadcasting if it maintains a forward-looking attitude and is well guided, will have methods and outputs which can be somewhat adapted to the needs of a certain part of television procedure. Television can, in turn, place at the disposal of the motion picture industry certain new methods and devices which should be useful. Certainly the relationship between these sister arts could and should be pleasant and mutually helpful in the best interests of each."

Dr. Goldsmith warned the commercial leaders and engineers of the industry that every mistake or omission of the past should be carefully remembered and sedulously avoided in the future. "It is hardly possible," he said, "to devote too much care to the engineering design and tests of the first large group of television receivers which the public purchases. An unfavorable first impression at this point will take years to eradicate."

Pointing out that the public now is enjoying almost perfect technical production in allied fields of entertainment, he said that the brightest, sharpest and largest picture which can be economically produced is needed for the introduction. He warned against allowing "gadgets" to accumulate, and urged that testing and supervisory forces in the factories be enlarged to make sure that sets are the best possible.

First Scheduled Tests Start on Coast; British Programs Underway; Farnsworth Predicts American Broadcasting in '37

Recent tests and public demonstrations of television broadcasting, given wide attention in the press, have focused public interest upon the present status of this newest entertainment industry. Facts bearing on its present state of development and its possibilities include the following:

Don Lee Broadcasting Company this week began regularly scheduled tests in Hollywood through radio station KHJ and the television transmitter W6XOA.

The British Broadcasting Company has been transmitting regular television programs from Alexandra Palace, London, since November 2nd. Subjects have included a golf match, a boxing lesson and newsreels.

Philo T. Farnsworth, inventor and director of Farnsworth Television, Inc., Philadelphia, publicly predicted that television broadcasting will begin in the United States in 1937.

Latest technical steps include development of new screens for reception, made of multiple synthetic crystals, and a new vacuum tube for ultra high frequency waves.

Editorial comment on the demonstration last week given by Radio Corporation of America and National Broadcasting Company, for 250 representatives of the press, generally emphasized the opinion that television is not yet commercially practicable.

The lay press, commenting editorially on the RCA-NBC demonstration, pointed out the imperfections of present reception which include occasional blurring, the greenish tinge of the picture, and eyestrain induced after watching the program for any length of time. Most of the commentators, however, applauded the frankness of the radio executives in admitting these faults and credited them with sincerity in their desire to turn out for the public nothing but a finished product.

First tests of television on the West Coast were made this week by the Don Lee Broadcasting Company under the direction of Harry R. Lubcke. The broadcasts will be made every day during daylight hours and once a week in the evening. The transmitter uses the cathode ray system, geared to a definition of 300 lines, and is of 150 watt power, covering a ten-mile area which includes Glendale and parts of Pasadena. Newsreels and short film subjects have been used in the broadcasts.

Transmission of rgular television programs from Alexandra Palace, London, was inaugurated on November 2nd by R. C. Norman, chairman of British Broadcasting Company; Major G. C. Tryon, postmaster general, and Lord Selsdon, chairman of the television advisory committee. Following the inaugural speeches, a British Movietone newsreel and two variety acts were shown.

Broadcast first on the Baird system and shown on a Cossor receiver giving a picture approximately eight by ten inches, the whole ceremony was repeated on the Marconi-Electrical Musical Industries system. The Baird transmission is by means of an intermediate film and the EMI system is direct. The two systems will be used in alternate weeks on the regular schedule.

The keynote of the inaugural speeches was the emphasis placed upon the fact that Great Britain was ahead of all the rest of the world in establishing a regular television service. Mr. Norman spoke of "a flying start." Major Tryon made a claim of "leading the world." Lord Selsdon asserted that "technically, Britain leads today" and added that "today's simple ceremony will live in history."

Picture quality was reported to be very uneven but to compare favorably with early motion pictures. Newsreels and topical films dominate the programs and two outstanding features so far have been the televising of a golf match and of a boxing lesson. The television department of the BBC is scheduling special attractions of a topical nature calculated to build up a maximum viewing public for the Coronation transmission next spring, which, the leaders hope, will provide the service with its first spectacular success.

The tests, both here and in England, brought predictions concerning the future of television from two men who have been factors in its development. Mr. Farnsworth, speaking to reporters, said that public television will begin next year. He declined to set an approximate date, observing that the most important thing is that "the main obstacles have been sufficiently mastered."

Transatlantic Television Seen

A prediction that television soon would span the Atlantic ocean was made in a recent four-way short wave broadcast by Guglielmo Marconi, pioneer in wireless transmission. From his yacht in the Mediterranean he conversed during the broadcast with David Sarnoff, RCA president, and a group of foreign broadcasting executives in two cabin planes flying between Niagara Falls and Washington, D. C. Without elaborating on his statement, Signor Marconi said, "We will soon be able to see each other by trans-Atlantic television."

Advances in the delelopment of more efficient luminescent materials, until recently a major problem in the construction of television receivers, were revealed in a paper presented before a joint meeting of the American Physical Society and the Optical Society of America at the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York by H. W. Leverenz of the RCA electronic research laboratory. Mr. Leverenz said that laboratory workers have developed new crystalline structures by rearrangement of molecules which add much needed reflective properties to screens.

A new vacuum tube expected to have "far-reaching effects" in the development of television and other services on the ultra high frequency waves was described at a meeting of the Institute of Radio Engineers in New York by L. A. Samuel and N. E. Sowers of the Bell Telephone Laboratories. The new device generates ten watts of power at a wavelength of about one meter and is expected to solve the problem of how to obtain high stable power for commercial services on waves now almost entirely relegated to experimental work.

Investigation of the Television Corporation of America, headed by Oliver C. Harriman, has been started by Attorney General John J. Bennett of New York State. Mr. Bennett has obtained a court order requiring Mr. Harriman and eight other individuals to appear in supreme court on November 24th for an examination under the general business law. The company is a Maryland corporation, capitalized at 6,000,000 shares of $1 per value each.

Also named in the order were Jack N. Oppenheim, secretary; Harry Coley, treasurer; Ralph A. Clark, William Milne, Fred Knapp, Lewis G. Duell, Hamilton Hoge and William M. Brady.

Assistant attorney general Ambrose V. McCall, who is conducting the investigation, charged that Mr. Knapp and Mr. Duell have been selling the corporation stock in Dutchess County, New York, at prices ranging from $5 to $10 a share.

Say Statements Weren't Filed

The affidavit upon which the order for examination was granted charged that none of the defendants complied with the general business law which requires that security dealers file dealers' statements before engaging in business in the state, and also charged that Mr. Harriman and Mr. Oppenheim had made an oral agreement to sell their personally owned stock to William Milne, a security dealer of Albany, at 50 cents a share.

Mr. Harriman, commenting on the charges, said:

"The company expects to satisfy the attorney general of its bona-fideness, and to have the proceedings withdrawn. The proceedings, instituted by Mr. Bennett, apparently are the results of actions of persons not in any way associated with the company in reselling stocks they had purchased. We had no knowledge of their actions and entirely disapprove of them."

New London Theatre Planned

The old Alhambra theatre in Leicester Square, London, a landmark for 40 years, is to be torn down to make way for a modern motion picture theatre. The new house, to cost $1,500,000, will be a link in the Odeon circuit, controlled by Oscar Deutsch, in which United Artists bought an interest about six month ago.

Armand Joins Radio Station

Jean Armand, former trade paper and theatre exploitation man, has been signed as director of exploitation and publicity for KFWB, the Warner Brothers broadcasting station in Hollywood.

British Company Conforms to Code

British International Pictures, Ltd., of London, has finally conformed to all of the suggestions made by the Production Code Administration here on the contents of "Living Dangerously," and, accordingly, a certificate of approval has been issued to the New York office of BIP, where Budd Rogers is in charge of American sales.

Last September, British International's home office in England, headed by John Maxwell, asked and inspired the British news press to assail and ridicule the American Production Code Administration in the public prints on the charge of "banning" "Living Dangerously," which production not only had not been banned, but on which the Code Administration had spent decided cooperative effort in trying to make it marketable in this country under the same standards of social and moral decency which govern all pictures here.

After publication of these charges, Mr. Maxwell's company in England instructed its Mr. Rogers in New York to personally work with Vincent Hart, of the eastern Code Administration, with a view to correcting the objectionable parts of the production.

Mr. Rogers has not as yet decided on the manner and method of distributing the production in this country.

Mexico Delaying Quota Decision

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

No immediate decision is expected with respect to the proposed exhibition quota of one Mexican picture for each 5 or 6 foreign films, with which is linked limitation of imports, regulation of distributors and other measures. The Mexican Government's committee of six, appointed to consider the proposal, solicited industry opinion and is described as deluged by conflicting views.

The committee has been told by various advisors that the industry in this country is not at this time strong enough to bear up under the arrangement sought. It is counseled that, although governmental aid is of unquestionable value to the growing production interests here, it is imperative that caution be exercised in the matter of restrictions lest it be discovered that such aid has been obtained at the sacrifice of profits derived regularly from foreign production, chief among which is the American.

FILM STOCKS APPRECIATE $82,172,500 IN TWO WEEKS

Net Earnings of Distributors Reaching Pre-Depression Levels; Exhibitors Report Increased Box Office Returns

Film Dividend Activity Marked; Income on Admission Taxes Rises $1,732,778; Department of Commerce Notes Recovery

Motion picture stocks have appreciated $82,172,500 in two weeks.

Net earnings of distributors are touching pre-depression levels.

Exhibitors everywhere are reporting an upward movement in box office returns.

Film dividends are being poured out.

Income on admission taxes is up $1,732,778.

The United States Department of Commerce study of national income is reflecting the rapid recovery in motion pictures.

Optimistic notes struck this week further verified the gaining strength of the motion picture financial structure: Columbia Pictures reported a net profit of $129,258 for its third quarter; Twentieth Century-Fox announced cash dividends of 37½ cents and $1.00, respectively, for the preferred and common stocks; United Artists declared a dividend; the National Theatres Circuit of Fox-Chase ordered its first dividend, and indicated a second is coming shortly; financial circles awaited a 50-cent dividend from Paramount; Eastman Kodak declared extra dividends and salary bonus payments.

Other Earnings

In the previous few days, Twentieth Century-Fox announced a $4,451,851 net profit for 39 weeks; RCA and its radio-film subsidiaries reported a net of $1,083,604 for its third quarter; a net of $3,000,000 for Warner's fiscal year was indicated; Paramount's third quarter profits were estimated at $1,000,000; Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation reported a net profit of $666,080 for 39 weeks; B. F. Keith announced a net of $531,342 for a similar period, while Heywood-Wakefield, equipment manufacturer, announced a $472,796 profit for the nine months ended September 30th.

The financial press of Wall Street, and financial writers on inland newspapers everywhere have frequently in the last three weeks used headlines to tell of the motion picture's financial progress.

Sweeping Rise in Shares

An upswing in motion picture shares, as sweeping as the election at which it started, has taken place on the New York Stock Exchange since November 4th and shows no signs of early abatement.

In the short time since the nation gave its approval of the New Deal, the market value of motion picture shares listed on the stock exchange, in soaring $82,172,500, has risen to almost triple their appreciation for the entire first half of the year.

Outstripping the general market in the recovery movement that followed the elections, motion picture stocks have attained a new post-depression peak market valuation of $894,764,500. This compares with their listed value on November 2d, the day before election, of $812,592,000; with $721,668,250 on June 30, and with $692,897,500 in January, 1936.

THEATRE AIDS BUSINESS, ACTORS' EQUITY CLAIMS

In an appeal for the support of the legitimate theatre by the business men of New York, Equity Magazine, official publication of Actors' Equity, says editorially in its December issue that "exhaustive survey has shown by actual figures that the gain to the business of the City of New York alone, attracted by the legitimate theatre, is $331,000,000 annually."

"On this basis," the writer continued, "business should wake up to the fact that not only should they give their whole-hearted support to the theatre, as a matter of simple reciprocity, but they could well afford to subsidize it."

Improved Product a Factor

Motion picture stocks had been climbing steadily for more than a year because of an increasingly substantial rise in the national income. But behind the impetus that the advance received from the general business upswing is the assurance of an unusual supply of outstanding motion picture entertainment.

Already, in two short weeks, the country has witnessed the most notable outpouring of industrial and film stock dividends in its history, which, it is estimated, will bring this year's payments of that kind above even the year 1929.

In addition to this outgiving by corporations of surplus funds in the form of dividends, which, according to a survey by the United Press, will place approximately $3,000,000,000 in the pockets of industrial stockholders for 1936, there has been an exceptional succession of wage increases, bonuses and special payments to employees. These, too, are likely to surpass 1929, the peak year of industrial activity, and will give further revenue to theatre box offices.

Although the primary motive for the sudden avalanche of dividend, wage increase and bonus money has been avoidance of the New Deal's tax on piled-up reserves, some is due also to growing recognition that the greater part of this redistributed wealth goes directly into consumption channels, thus creating an ever-widening cycle of prosperity.

Business Indices Cited

Justification of this view is seen in current business indices. All indications are that Christmas trade this year will exceed the holiday seasons of 1928 and 1929. Industrial activity, including steel operations, automobile production, electricity output, and construction, is the greatest since 1929 and, in some lines, may shortly exceed that year.

Wall Street, convinced that a good share of the increasing national income will jingle in the cash registers of the motion picture box offices, is bidding avidly for film shares. The link of the consumer's welfare with that of the film industry has eloquently been illustrated in the rise of motion picture stocks since November 2.

In a market featured by a steady increase in public participation since the elections, motion picture stocks rose to the point where practically all sold at their best post-depression levels. Some were particularly buoyant, rising as much as 34 points because favorable individual outlooks enhanced them in the eyes of traders already enthusiastic over the general atmosphere of returning prosperity.

Paramount and Warner Brothers issues were the heaviest traded stocks on the board. With the company's net income for the third quarter estimated at between $1,500,000 and $1,700,000, Paramount 1st preferred soared 34 points from a close of 123 on November 2d to 157 on November 16th. The common rose more than five points to around 22 and the 2nd preferred more than four points to 20. Additional impetus was given the rise by expectations of a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common for the third quarter.

Warner has been advancing steadily, aided by rising earnings and increasingly favorable balance sheet showings. Gains of more than three points for the two-week period were shown by the common at around 18 and the preferred at 65¼. The spurt in the common added $13,650,000 to its market valuation since November 2d, bringing it to $70,200,000.

Other Shares Up

Eastman Kodak, which last week voted a wage dividend of $2,220,000 and an extra stock dividend of $1,688,000, ran up six points. Loew's was in heavy demand, gaining more than six points in two weeks to near 64 and bringing its market valuation to $95,437,500, largest, next, to Eastman Kodak, of all the film shares. Kodak's current market valuation is $442,500,000, compared with $427,500,000 on November 2nd.

Twentieth Century-Fox shares were among the most popular on the board, with demand spurred by a highly favorable earnings estimate for the current year. This placed probable net profit for the year ending December 26th at $7,500,000, against a net of $3,090,135 for the corresponding period of the preceding year. The common stock rose more than five points and the preferred more than seven to around 39 and 48, respectively.

Although showing comparatively little activity, the price of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred shares reflected the company's brisk gain in earnings for the current year. For the 39 weeks ended September 26th KAO and its subsidiaries reported a net profit of $666,080, against $172,114 for the corresponding period of 1935. B. F. Keith Corporation and subsidiaries reported for the same period a net of $531,842, against $176,753. Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred at the close November 16th was at 102, up two points from November 2nd.

RKO has added $5,937.500 to its market value since November 2nd, by rising more than two points to around 10. Universal preferred spurted seven points to 110 in the period. Although Universal reported a net loss of $812,476 for the 39 weeks ended August 1st, the company currently is in a greatly improved earnings position because of the write off of more than $500,000 of questionable assets.

The scope of the rise in film shares, as compared with other groups on the stock exchange, is shown in the fact that profit-taking sales which followed some of the more spectacular post-election market upswings, cut more deeply into general industrial, railroad and utility stocks. Thus, U. S. Steel, the prime industrial stock, showed for the November 2-16th period a net gain of only ⅝ of a point. General Motors was up 1¼, New York Central was off 1⅞, Consolidated-Edison was off 1¼ and American Telephone up 4⅜.

Only mercantile stocks were able to keep pace with picture stocks in activity and consistent strength, indicating that the rise reflected mostly the enhancement of average consumer purchasing power because of the elections.

Redistribution Factors

Among the most outstanding instances of wealth redistribution that recently have increased the earnings prospects of the motion picture industry were the following:

A dividend payment of $65,250,000 by the General Motors Corp., largest on record for the company. Of the total, $43,500,000 was in the form of an extra.

A wage increase by the same corporation equivalent to five cents an hour, or about $22,000,000 annually and a distribution of a $10,000,000 "appreciation fund" to its employes.

A dividend of $5.50 a capital share by the Chrysler Corp., representing a total disbursement of $24,662,000, largest in its history.

Distribution of $32,773,750 in dividends by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey in the form of a 75-cent extra and the regular quarterly of 50 cents a share.

An average 10 per cent wage increase by the steel industry, approximating $80,000,000 for 500,000 employes.

Similar action, on smaller scales, by hundreds of corporations in diversified lines of trade and industry.

Movement Increases Velocity

Meanwhile, the movement has gained increasing velocity and more extra dividends, wage increases and bonus payments are being announced daily.

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange has applied to the Securities and Exchange Commission for extension of unlisted trading privileges in Columbia Pictures Corporation voting trust certificates for common stock and also for the underlying common stock. According to the application, there are issued and outstanding 263,986 certificates.

In regard to public distribution in the vicinity of the exchange, the application says there are 108 stockholders in 11 western states and 88 in California. In replies of 55 members firms to a questionnaire issued by the exchange, transactions in 5,567 certificates were revealed for the period from Sept. 15, 1935, to Sept. 15, 1936.

Columbia Pictures' third-quarter net earnings of $129,258 were equal to 26 cents each on 296,649 common shares outstanding, after dividend requirements on $2.75 preferred stock. The earnings compared with $495,083, or $2.64 each on 182,383 common shares outstanding at the end of the September quarter in 1935, after $3 dividend requirements on the preferred. The consolidated balance sheet for the quarter ended Sept. 26, 1936, shows current assets of $10,328,761 and total current liabilities of $1,459,201. Earned surplus was $4,021,993.94 and working capital $8,869,550.98.

GOVERNMENT STUDIES RISE OF FILM STOCKS

Administration officials in Washington, who are watching the activities of the New York Stock Exchange to determine whether there is a trend toward a stock boom which might get out of hand, are understood to be studying the motion picture securities as a result of recent heavy trading.

While Treasury and Federal Reserve Board officials are known to be somewhat concerned about the recent boom in the stock market, which was especially pronounced following the reelection of President Roosevelt, officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission refused to divulge their views, other than to say that at all times they have about 100 stocks under scrutiny. Whether specific motion picture securities were among those under study could not be learned.

The board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox Film at its meeting on Monday morning announced the cash dividend of 37½ cents per share for the fourth quarter of 1936 on the outstanding preferred stock, payable December 12th to stockholders of record on November 27th. The board also declared a cash dividend of $1.00 per share on the outstanding common stock, payable likewise on December 12th to holders of record at the close of business November 27th.

Fox's common stock dividend is the second to be paid since the reorganization of the company. The first dividend, also $1.00, was paid for the fourth quarter.

U. A. Declaring Dividend

Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists, announced in Hollywood, last Friday, that the distributing company will declare a dividend, payable December 15th. The corporation is a closed one.

National Theatres, holding company for Fox West Coast Theatres, Fox Intermountain Theatres, Fox Midwest, Fox Wisconsin and Evergreen States Theatres, declared a dividend last Thursday, reported to be the first since the parent corporation was organized some two years ago. Chase National Bank and Twentieth Century-Fox are the sole stockholders, and it was reported that Fox's share alone from National's dividend approximated $1,500,000. The dividend was a 75-cent-per-share declaration, payable to the end of October.

Officials of Chase Bank in New York intimated a second dividend probably will be declared shortly by National Theatres.

Paramount Dividend Awaited

A dividend of 50 cents a share on Paramount's common stock for the third quarter is expected in financial circles, marking the first dividend payment to be made by the corporation since its emergence under reorganization last year. With the prior dividend requirements of $1.50 on the first preferred and 15 cents on the second preferred the company's indicated dividend disbursements would approximate $1,300,000 for the quarter.

Accumulated dividends on the first preferred will amount to $12 a share at the year's end and to $1.20 a share on the second preferred. Year-end action on clearing up the arrears on both issues, probably in line with moves to reduce the company's undistributed profits taxes, is also regarded as likely in financial quarters. If earnings are maintained at the same rate during 1937 as for the third and current quarter of this year, a dividend of $3 to $4 on the common would not be unlikely, according to financial sources.

Lehman Brothers, an integral investment factor in Paramount and currently identified with the marked activity in the company's issues, attributes the healthy financial position of the company to generally improved theatre business throughout the country. The basic improvement is noted, as a result, both in the earnings of the company's 1,100 theatres and in Paramount's distribution income.

The company's third-quarter report has not been issued yet but estimates place the net for the period at between $1,500,000 and $1,700,000.

$7,377,057 Eastman Distribution

Directors of Eastman Kodak Company in Rochester ordered a distribution of $7,377,057 to stockholders and employees.

Aggregating $1,688,190, an extra dividend of 75 cents a share will be paid December 10 to common stockholders of record November 20, bringing total payments on the common stock this year to $6.75 a share. In addition, the board declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 and the usual quarterly extra of 25 cents a common share, together with the regular $1.50 preferred dividend, all payable January 2 to stockholders of record December 5.

Kodak employees will receive a wage dividend of $2,220,000 on March 1, 1937, which is more than $1,000,000 in excess of the 1936 payment. In previous years the wage dividend has been paid July 1. Each employee who has completed five years' service on Dec. 26, 1936, and who is in the service of the company March 1, 1937, will receive a little more than four times his average weekly wage of the last five years, the company said.

Universal Loss, $812,475

Universal Pictures Company, Inc., reported a net loss of $812,475 for the 39 weeks ended August 1st. Because of a change in accounting policy for foreign subsidiaries the results of 30 weeks of foreign operations are included in this total. Also included are the results of 16 subsidiaries' activities for 34 weeks and a share of the revenue from English distribution for 37 weeks.

If the results of foreign operations had been included for the full 39-week period the consolidated loss for the period would have been $600,815, the company said.

Universal in October announced that more than $500,000 of questionable assets would be written off in order to place the company in a favorable position for earnings next year. The write-offs, announced by J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, were even then expected to result in a loss being shown for the fiscal year ending November 1st, but it was also said they would place the company in a more favorable earnings position for the new fiscal year. The write-offs follow a survey of Universal's domestic and foreign units made by the new management during the six months which it has been in control.

In addition to involving questionable assets, the wrote-offs included a number of employment contracts which were considered unwise by the new management and are being bought up, it was said.

Commerce Department's Study

That rapid recovery from the depression is being made by the motion picture industry was further indicated by the U. S. Department of Commerce's annual study of national income, made public November 16th.

Relatively late in feeling the full effects of the depression—1932 was said to be the bottom year for the industry—both production and exhibition showed sharp improvement in 1933 and 1934, the latest year for which the department has any estimates.

Valuable principally as showing the trend in the industry, since the Department is without any accurate figures on which to base its calculations, the study of the film industry shows that while employment in exhibition in 1932 dropped to 67.1 per cent of the 1929 level, by 1934 it had climbed to 72.8 per cent, while in production, after dropping to 77.7 per cent, it advanced to 107.9 per cent.

In recognition of trade criticisms of its former reports, the Department this year abandoned its previous method of computation and based its estimates on the number of theatres open, as reported by the Film Board of Trade, and has compromised those figures with various statistics of the Census Bureau to arrive at what may be considered a "fair" figure of the number of persons employed in exhibition.

Carrying this method back to 1929 to obtain a base for comparison, the Bureau reduced the number of persons employed in that year from 285,915, as carried in previous reports, to 129,600, which is felt to be considerably closer to the actual figure.

Payroll Increase Traced

With 129,600 as its base, the report shows that employment by years through the depression period was as follows: 1930, 129,600; 1931, 110,792; 1932, 86,937; 1933, 89,011; 1934, 94,298.

On the same basis, the Department revised its salary and wage payment figure for 1929 from $427,443,000 to $212,416,000, from which point it dropped to $211,419,000 in 1930, $175,876,000 in 1931, $121,188,000 in 1932, and $110,717,000 in 1933 and increased to $119,828,000 in 1934. On this basis, while employment during the worst of the depression dropped to 67.1 per cent of the 1929 level, salaries and wages dropped to 52.1 per cent, and whereas employment in 1934 was at 72.8 per cent of 1929, salaries and wages were only 56.4 per cent.

Of considerable significance, according to department officials, are the figures on corporate savings of motion picture theatres, represented by surplus and deficit figures obtained from the Internal Revenue Bureau. In 1929, it is shown, theatre corporations reporting showed a surplus of $4,219,000, which by 1932 had been turned into a deficit of $64,379,000. In 1933 the deficit was reduced to $33,155,000, however, and for 1934 it was but $6,656,000.

Production Employment Gains

Figures on film production, obtained mainly on the basis of census reports, show that employment dropped from 19,602 in 1929 to 15,224 in 1932, but had recovered by 1934 to 21,143. In the same period, salaries and wages, which amounted to $85,028,000 in 1929, dropped to $61,624,000 in 1932 but increased to $81,716,000 by 1934.

The corporate savings table for production shows that there was a surplus of $23,820,000 in 1929 which was converted into a deficit of $32,627,000 in 1932. In 1933, the deficit was but $16,136,000, and in 1934 a surplus was again shown, amounting to $6,804,000.

The latest report of the department on national income bulks the legitimate theatres with other amusements as a result of criticism of its earlier reports, in which it allocated 49,035 employees to the legitimate houses. That figure is practically wiped out in the current report, in which the number of persons employed in miscellaneous amusements, including the legitimate theatres, is given as 40,344, or about 50,000 under the number assigned to the same pursuits heretofore.

Of all the amusement industries, broadcasting has had the best experience, with employment on the increase every year except 1933. Starting at 9,322 in 1929, employment increased to 10,128 in 1930, 11,022 in 1931 and 11,354 in 1932, dropping back to 11,000 in 1933 but increasing to 11,699 in 1934. Salaries and wages, which stood at $18,569,000 in 1929, increased to $23,631,000 in 1931 and dropped during the next two years to $20,916,000 in 1933, increasing to $23,000,000 in 1934.

1935 Canvass Being Studied

In explaining the discrepancies in figures for exhibition between the current and previous reports, the department explained that adequate and accurate base figures for the industry never have been developed, pointing out that the 1933 canvass by the Census Bureau was so incomplete as to be worthless for the department's purposes. If the 1935 canvass, now being analyzed preparatory to the issuance of reports, is complete, the department will have a proper basis for its computations in future years.

Because of the lack of information, the report discussed the amusement industries only briefly,

Companies Vote Dividends, Stock Values Increase

"The entire field of entertainment," it was said, "is characterized by a high degree of business risk due to the varied acceptance by the public of amusement offerings. Motion picture exhibition has been the leading industry in this field. In recent years its change from 'silent' to 'sound' pictures and its encroachment upon the field of the legitimate theatre has given it a more predominant position. This field of activity has a characteristic worthy of note in that it represents a vertical industry, which manufactures, distributes and sells its product, utilizing to a large extent the chain type of business organization."

Doubt Tax Repeal Move

Administration officials this week in Washington scouted reports that the federal admission tax would be included in a group of levies to be recommended to Congress for repeal as being unproductive of adequate revenue.

Experts of the Treasury and the Congressional tax committees are studying the present revenue act and are expected to recommend the elimination of a number of taxes which cost almost as much to collect as they return in revenue.

While it has been suggested that the admission tax may come within this category, Administration officials do not believe that the experts will find that the cost of collecting the levy is unduly high.

During the last fiscal year the Government collected $17,112,175 from the admission tax, an increase of $1,732,778 over the receipts of the preceding year. Since July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year, receipts have continued above those of 1935, indicating that the total for the current year may be in the neighborhood of $20,000,000. Far from being unduly expensive of collection, the admission tax is paying the Government a nice profit on its effort.

Club Pays Out $60,000

The studio branch of the Warner Club in Hollywood has paid out more than $60,000 in benefits to members during the past two years and a half, according to a report just issued by Tennant C. Wright, president. Most of this sum was disbursed in sick benefits, with death, marriage and birth bonuses making up the balance. The studio division has a membership of 2,600 and was started 30 months ago.

Hutchinson Is Honored By Australian Minister

A notable gesture of good will towards the motion picture industry in the United States was the luncheon tendered to Walter J. Hutchinson, general foreign manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, by J. A. Prime, Minister of Australia, on Mr. Hutchinson's recent visit to the Austrialian Capital at Canberra. Stanley S. Crick, managing director of Twentieth Century-Fox in Australia, and Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyts, were also guests.

Newspapers said that the luncheon was given as a means of further cementing friendly relationships between Australia and America, and as a mark of courtesy and token of goodwll towards three men who had done much towards development of the industry in Australia.

E. J. Smith Is Named Imperial Sales Manager

E. J. Smith, formerly western division manager for United Artists, has joined Imperial Distributing Corporation as general sales manager in charge of all exchanges.

Mr. Smith was also at one time managing director for Universal in England and after holding that post for 10 years he became general sales manager in the United States followed by the eastern sales managership of Warners and the general sales managership of Associated Exhibitors and later Tiffany.

Spartanburg Employes Organize Social Club

The employees of the four Wilby-Kincey theatres in Spartanburg, S. C., have formed the S.C.S.C. Club for "social relaxation after business hours and discussion of business problems." Officers are Fred Reid, president; Carol E. White, vice-president; Dan Austell, treasurer, and Mrs. Virgil Moore, secretary. The club meets every Monday night immediately after the closing of the theatres.

Mears Is RCA Vice-President

N. A. Mears has been elected vice-president of RCA Manufacturing Company, in charge of purchasing, and R. Shannon has been elected vice-president in charge of manufacturing, the company said this week. Mr. Mears was formerly manager of materials control for the company. Mr. Shannon has been manufacturing manager of RCA-Victor.

Rosener Establishes Circuit

Herbert Rosener Enterprises has been formed in San Francisco to operate a circuit to play foreign-made and "unusual" pictures. He has theatres in Oakland, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Montlake, Seattle, Carmel, Palo Alto, San Bernardino, Almeda, Stockton and St. Albans. Another theatre is to be opened soon in Portland, Ore.

Fortune Takes "She Devil"

Fortune Agency, of which Al Friedlander is head, has taken over "She Devil Island" from First Division Exchanges. The company will handle distribution and sales promotion for the film in foreign and domestic territories.

Foreign Stock Buying Starts Federal Study

Administration moves to regulate purchases by foreign interests of American securities on the stock exchanges of this country are under way and may be translated into legislation in the near future, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said in a press conference in Washington last Friday.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and James Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, are now studying means of correcting the situation, which is regarded by the Administration as a threat to the stabilization of currencies. The danger, the President indicated, could be immediate if foreign holders of American securities unloaded on the market suddenly.

No indication of the type of legislation which may be sought was given, but it was stated that while present gold export regulations tended to control the situation, this means did not afford the complete protection desired.

Whether or not the Administration would move to restrict the sales as well as purchases of domestic securities by foreign interests likewise was not disclosed, as the entire situation still is in the study stage. However, the projected action may have a direct bearing on foreign purchases of film stocks, which recently have attracted marked interest abroad. Only last week, 35,000 shares of Loews, Inc., were acquired by undisclosed British interests from the Irving Thalberg estate through Hirsch, Lilienthal and Company, brokers. The transaction was at current market prices and represented an exchange of more than $2,200,000.

The Royal Liverpool group of British insurance companies was a large investor in Paramount Publix stocks just prior to the company's reorganization in 1935, and its holdings of the bankrupt company's securities made it a dominating factor in the Paramount reorganization and subsequent administration of the company. British interests were reported to have disposed of large blocks of the new Paramount stock immediately in advance of its market recession during last spring and the early part of the summer. Harold A. Fortington, financial secretary of the British insurance groups, withdrew from the chairmanship of the Paramount executive committee shortly thereafter. The C. M. Woolf British interests hold a large but not a dominant interest in Universal.

Loeffler GB Exchange Head

Joseph E. Loeffler has been appointed manager of the GB exchange in Cleveland, succeeding Harry Scott, resigned. Mr. Loeffler was formerly with the W. W. Hodkinson exchange, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the Fischer Film Exchange, all in Cleveland. For the last two years he had been a salesman for Gaumont British.

Electrical Research Products, Inc., has installed the new Mirrophonic sound equipment in 208 theatres, the company reported this week.

168 FEATURES LISTED FOR THEATRE TIEUPS IN "NATIONAL BOOK WEEK"

The attention of motion picture theatre owners again is directed, for the 15th year, to "National Book Week," now underway. In this connection the National Board of Review has made available, for use in arranging programs that lend themselves to book tieups, an annual compilation of "Selected Book-Films," prepared in conjunction with the "Book Week" movement that is sponsored by the National Association of Book Publishers.

The manner and method of effecting tieups with book stores, schools, libraries and the like are well known to most exhibitors, these exploitation mediums usually lending aid readily in furthering interest in well known books, either new or old.

All films selected by the Review Committees of the National Board from September, 1935, to October, 1936, which had their source in novels or published plays and stories are included in the compilation, and in addition films having special book tie-up values, though not adaptations, are recorded. The compilation contains films taken from 74 novels, 70 from published plays and stories, 12 having special book tie-up possibilities, and another 12 foreign-language book-films. This list provides not only information for immediate activity with book-film programs, but also future use in exploitation arrangements uniting library, theatre, school and club interests.

Among outstanding book-film releases during the year were "Anthony Adverse," "Dodsworth," "Magnificent Obsession," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Tale of Two Cities," "Three Musketeers," "Show Boat," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "San Francisco," "Green Pastures," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Romeo and Juliet."

The order of arrangement is: picture title, source title if different, names of author and company. The symbols preceding the title indicate audience classification: "f" for the family audience, 12 years and up; "m" for the mature audience, 18 years and up; "j" for the juvenile audience under 12 years; and "*" especially interesting or well done:

In a recent survey the Young Reviewers of the National Board—the boys and girls from 8 to 16 years who take their cinema very seriously—stated just what books they thought the companies would "do well" to film. Among the boys' selections were: "Ivanhoe" (receiving the most votes), Stevenson's "Kidnapped," Verne's "Michael Strogoff," Cooper's "The Deerslayer" and "The Pioneers," "Lancelot and Elaine," Ludwig's "Napoleon," "Marc Anthony" and "The Merchant of Venice." The most popular choices of the girls were: "The Old-Fashioned Girl" and sequels (these books received the most votes), "Silas Marner," "Kidnapped," "Ivanhoe," "John Halifax, Gentlemen," "Nobody's Boy" (Sans Famille), "Mill on the Floss," "Hamlet," Tarkington's "Seventeen," Ethan Frome," "Marie Antoinette," "To Have and to Hold" and "The Black Swan," which two voters even cast and strangely enough they both chose the same heroine and hero, Olivia de Haviland and Errol Flynn. Single choices ran into great numbers but these books listed received a number of votes each. In a vote as to what type of picture was preferred the biographical, historical, costume type was far in the lead and from the choice of books one can see that the answers "fit in." Answering another question quite a number of the young people preferred to read instead of going to the movies as there were "more good books than there were good movies"—in this the girls outnumbered the boys. Perhaps next year's Book-Films List will carry some of these selections.

B & K LOOP CONTROL IS ALMOST COMPLETE

If Circuit's Bid for McVickers Is Accepted, RKO Palace Alone Will Be On the Outside

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

The deal whereby United Artists supplied films for the United Artists theatre in Chicago's Loop, for 26 weeks out of the year, has expired.

From now on the company's pictures will be played by Balaban and Katz in whatever Loop theatres the circuit desires. "Dodsworth" was the last film to go into the United Artists theatre under the old arrangement, which became obsolete with the arrival of this season's product.

United Artists' "Come and Get It" goes into the Roosevelt and "The Garden of Allah" into the Chicago theatre late this month.

At present Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product seems to have the edge at the United Artists theatre. "Born to Dance" will follow "Old Hutch," the current attraction, and next will be "Love on the Run."

Ownership of the United Artists theatre is commonly attributed to Joseph and Nicholas Schenck. Balaban & Katz leases and operates the theatre, with several years yet to go on the contract.

If the B & K bid for the McVickers theatre is accepted by the Chicago school board, which controls the leasing of the theatre, it is understood the circuit will open it immediately, but B & K executives say they themselves are undecided as to policy.

With B & K taking over the State-Lake theatre this spring only one first-run opposition theatre, the RKO Palace, will remain in the Loop, provided B & K gets the McVickers, which formerly was operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, also bidding for the lease.

One of the neatest jobs of publicity seen here in a long time is the advance campaign staged by Sam Clark of the Warner office for the appearance of the flying caravan of Hollywood "Golddiggers" at the Chicago theatre for one performance this week. The girls have been publicized in every newspaper with dozens of pictures and stories.

The outstanding tieup was with the State Street Council, to choose the twelve most beautiful girls working in State Street stores to compete against the Hollywood importations. The local girl selected as "Queen of the Golddiggers" will get a free trip to Hollywood and a film test.

Mr. Rodgers, who has been on a tour of the west, reported business the best since 1927-28-29. Sales for this season are far ahead of last year, Mr. Rodgers said, and already MGM has sold 75 per cent of its accounts, a percentage to date much higher than for the last few years.

Argentine Producers Form Organization

The Association Productores de Peliculas Argentinas has been organized in Buenos Aires with a membership composed exclusively of local producers and studio managers, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Trade Commissioner Joe D. Walstrom in Buenos Aires. The aims of the new organization are to promote the development of the Argentine film industry and to collaborate with Government officials on problems relating to motion pictures.

New England Receipts Rising, Sanford Finds

Bert Sanford, Jr., northeastern sales manager of Electrical Research Products, Inc., returned to New York this week following a general survey of the New England area. Comenting on current conditions, Mr. Sanford said, "Not since 1929 have we seen such enthusiasm among exhibitors who are really enjoying better business and receipts are constantly increasing."

John Bowers Found Dead

The body of John Bowers, star of silent film days, was washed ashore Tuesday near the motion picture colony at Malibu Beach, near Hollywood. He had been missing since Monday. Coming to Hollywood from the New York stage in 1916, Mr. Bowers appeared in "Lorna Doone," "Chickie," "Sky Pilot" and "Mounted Fury" among others. He had not been active for several years, however.

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
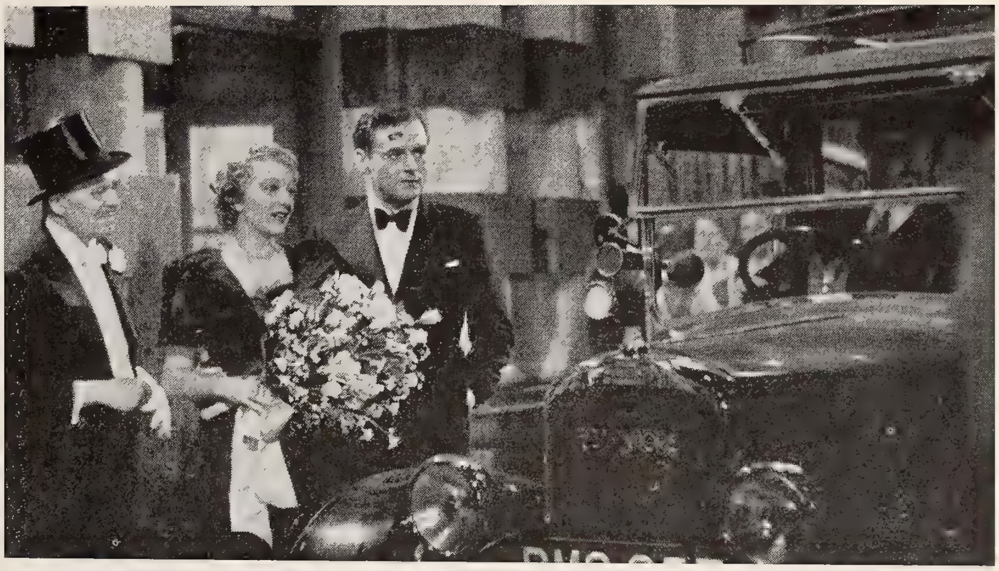
in London



The famous Savoy Hotel in London was reproduced on one of the Denham stages for the London Films production "Men Are Not Gods" and was the background of this scene. Here are Lawrence Grossmith, Gertrude Lawrence and Sebastian Shaw rehearsing a sequence. Miriam Hopkins is star of the picture.

Kane's Second

Robert T. Kane's second New World production, "Under the Red Robe," goes on the floor at Denham immediately. The script has been completed by Philip Lindsay, Lajos Biros and Arthur Wimperis. The cast, still to be added to, includes Conrad Veidt, Raymond Massey, Monty Banks, Sophie Stewart and Patricia Hilliard. Victor Seastrom is director of this adaptation of a Stanley Weyman novel.

Planned as New World's third is "Cyrano de Bergerac," which will also be a black and white production, but Mr. Kane said that a color successor to "Wings of the Morning" will be put in hand as soon as the British technicolor plant is working. Prints of "Wings" are expected from Hollywood any week.

Korda in Rome

For Victor Saville's "Storm in a Teacup," London Films has cast Vivien Leigh, Rex Harrison, Sara Allgood and Cecil Parker. Saville has just finished the "Q. boat" picture, "Dark Journey."

William Cameron Menzies, director, and Vincent Korda, art director, have gone to Rome for locations for "I Claudius," next Charles Laughton picture, and will collect data for the imperial "triumphs" and other spectacular features planned. From the trip rose quite unfounded rumors that Korda planned to make the picture in the Mussolini studio, even to transfer all production there.

Comedy at Shepherd's Bush

Jack Hulbert and his wife, Cicely Courtneidge, are teamed in "The Count's Livery," which went on the floor at Shepherd's Bush studio this week. They last played for G-B in "Falling For You." Herbert Mason, director of the successful Arliss picture, "His Lordship," is making "The Count's Livery," and in the cast are Frank Cellier and the Glyndebourne opera star, Aulikki Rautawaara, making her screen debut.

The only other picture at present in production at Shepherd's Bush is "King Solomon's Mines," but in the cutting room are "O. H. M. S." and "The Great Barrier," and the subsidiaries are both active, Gainsborough on "Good Morning, Boys," Will Hay starring, and G-B Instructional with the official and defense film, "The Gap."

Hagen Signs Stone

Julius Hagen has signed George E. Stone for the leading comedy part in "She Got What She Wanted," under Albert de Courville's direction at J. H. studios, Elstree. Dorothy Dare, who took over Ruth Etting's part in the stage production, "Transatlantic Rhythm," of contentious memory, is cast as a wisecracking American girl, and Jim Gerald, a French actor in the Hagen bilingual "Widow's Island," also has a comedy role.

"Widow's Island," at Hammersmith, is in last scenes, in a riverside setting. For "Silver Blaze," at Twickenham, racing stable sequences have been completed.

Paderewski Finishes

Lothar Mendes shot the last scene for "Moonlight Sonata," Pall Mall production in which Paderewski is starred, on location in Northumberland, and made immediate preparations for a holiday trip to Hollywood previous to beginning his second for the company in December. Two big camps were erected for the company on location and Charles Farrell took lessons in wood-felling from local experts prior to undertaking feats of that type for the screen. A January premiere is planned for "Moonlight Sonata," with Paderewski under promise to attend.

BIP Stages Play Hit

Graham Cutts has started direction of "Aren't Men Beasts" at BIP, Elstree; Robertson Hare and Alfred Drayton are repeating the roles they still are playing in the very successful stage production of the same title at the Strand theatre. June Clyde, who came from America for "Dance Band"; Billy Milton and Margaret Vyner, Australian actress who made a hit in "Sensation," are also cast. "Sensation," directed by Brian Desmond Hurst, is almost finished; John Lodge is the star and Francis Lister and Athene Seyler have important character roles.

The BIP Welwyn studio is occupied by "The Dominant Sex," an Argyle production directed by Norman Lee and starring Sally O'Neil. Introduced in scenes made tuneful by Irish song and dance is Rory O'Connor, 14-year-old step-dancing champion of Ireland for three years and victor also at the Tailteann Games, Irish equivalent of the Olympic contests. O'Connor frequently has broadcast to America. Also known on the air on the American side is the Tara Ceilidh Band, which plays numbers of its own and accompanies Tom Burke and Talbot O'Farrell in the film.

Asher Finds Girl

After the last day's work on the Claude Hulbert "The Vulture," at the Warner-First National studio at Teddington, Lesley Learoyd, playing her first screen part after experience with the Croyden Repertory company, was given a long-term contract by Irving Asher. A condition is a change of her name to Lesley Brook.

Keith Falkner, wellknown concert singer, is another screen newcomer at Teddington.

Itemized

"For Ever and Ever" is the final title of Criterion's-Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., feature first announced as "Jump for Glory." Raoul Walsh directs.

Anna Lee is out of "King Solomon's Mines" cast temporarily, because of influenza.

George Arliss is planning a Hollywood trip as a holiday only.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke was to leave for New York Wednesday for a stage appearance in "Promise."

Milton Rosmer, G-B director, is playing Touchstone in the Old Vic production of "As You Like It."

BRITISH TRADE AWAITS G-B FINANCIAL DETAILS

Lord Tyrrell Indorses "Green Pastures"; 32 Million Theatre Merger; Five Dixey Directors

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

The trade is waiting with considerable interest the consolidated statement of assets and liabilities of Gaumont-British Corporation and its subsidiary companies which the directors are required to produce by the shareholders' resolution at the annual meeting. It already has been recorded that the meeting was adjourned, by a vote hostile to the directors. The next session is considered unlikely before December at the earliest.

Included in Mark Ostrer's speech as chairman at the meeting was a statement that a plan for consolidating all the interests of the company had met with certain difficulties due to the fact that independent interests had holdings in various subsidiaries. A draft consolidated statement, he said, had been prepared by the auditors and would be circulated "as soon as possible."

The shareholders' vote means, in effect, that they refuse to pass the report and accounts until the statement is before them.

The situation thus created reflects with considerable accuracy the atmosphere of the meeting at Film House, which was chiefly critical of the absence of a dividend while £200,000 ($100,000) was put to a special reserve necessary, it was implied, because the American returns on G-B pictures had not balanced the large amounts invested in their production.

Business in U. S. 4 to 5 Millions

The statement that G-B had done between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 business in America, in all, did not lessen the shareholders' curiosity about the profit and loss account of G-B Distributors, the subsidiary which handles distribution in all countries. Implied in official statements was that losses in this company were responsible for the special emergency reserve. It may be assumed that when the figures are revealed there will be further discussion about the three policies of production open to the G-B organization:

Continued major production with America in view.

Less expensive production for Great Britain only.

Abandonment of production altogether.

That the third course should be even discussed,—and Mr. Ostrer, deprecating the possibility, emphasized that it would "make dividends certain,"—is an indication of the importance which production costs have as a deciding factor in the shaping of the future policy of G-B and, in effect, amount to a statement that the directors are at any rate contemplating the possibility of G-B becoming solely a theatre owning organization, or at least making production a minor activity.

Very present in the minds of those at the meeting was the thought that, legal reserve and legal terminology aside, the real master of G-B was John Maxwell, who sat on the platform with Col. H. Micklem between him and Mr. Ostrer, and actually took no part in the proceedings. So many shareholders addressed questions to or about Mr. Maxwell that Mr. Ostrer at one stage said that he might like to reply personally. To this Mr. Maxwell gave an assenting nod, but the abrupt termination of the meeting prevented what might have been a very illuminating statement.

Apart from being asked whether, as a director of G-B, he accepted full responsibility for the report, "and if not why not," Mr. Maxwell had, from another shareholder the pointed queries:

"Is he satisfied with his deal?

"Will he be able to restore the company to a dividend paying basis?

"How long will it take?"

It may be doubted whether Mr. Maxwell would have favored the meeting with details of his plans. His public attitude is that he is only one of the directors of G-B and not in control of the company. It seems possible, however, that he might have given a general idea of his views on the major problem of production costs, in regard to which there was undoubtedly an atmosphere that G-B's financial problem was mainly due to its American activities.

Studio Concentration Seen

A possibility discussed in inside quarters of the trade, after the meeting, was that the G-B studio at Shepherd's Bush, already de-staffed on a very big scale, might ultimately be scrapped by Mr. Maxwell, and all production for the ABP-G-B combination centered at Elstree. Carying this story a stage further, from a rather well informed source came the suggestion that if the existing BIP plant were not susceptible to adequate extension and modernization, Mr. Maxwell might be found in control of, or at any rate using, the Amalgamated plant now approaching completion and, according to expert opinion, likely to surpass even Pinewood in modernity of layout and equipment.

Confirmation of these stories is unlikely at this date, but they link with the proceedings at the G-B meeting in a way which does not seem to have been generally noticed.

Identity of Interest with ABP

Assuming the abandonment of production to be the obvious path of financial salvation for G-B—and that was pointed out, almost in those words, by Mr. Ostrer,—it is generally assumed that the company will not walk in that road, firstly because of prestige and secondly because production, even for a world market, has not been finally demonstrated to be uneconomic, under economic management.

This consideration overlooks one rather important fact; that G-B has, or will have, a substantial identity of interest with ABP, which is not only a production (as well as a theatre owning) company, but has in Mr. Maxwell a chief with very definite production theories of his own, which include views on costs rather far removed from those which have guided the past policy of G-B.

It is not a very far-fetched deduction, therefore, to assume that the final solution of the present position may be found in G-B ceasing to function as a producing organization and all production for the ABP-G-B fusion being centralized with ABP, and conducted on the established Maxwell lines of economy, with a limited objective in view.

If this surmise proves to be correct, the future of GB, or of ABP-G-B, activities in America may turn out to be governed by any steps which are open to Mr. Maxwell to get some security of outlet there in return for his enormous buying powers, with a 600 theatres backing, here. Similarly, the scope of ABP-G-B production would be strictly governed by the scale of any such agreement.

Remembering that the major question of the Twentieth Century-Fox holding in Metropolis and Bradford Trust has not been disposed of, people here are not disposed to rule out of consideration the possibility of a modus vivendi even yet being arrived at between Sidney Kent, wanting dates in England, and John Maxwell, wanting dates in America and possibly leaving the final scope of his production to be determined by the security he obtains.

Although, at the G-B meeting, there was no organized attempt to represent the lost Fox-Metro deal as preferable to that with ABP, an individual shareholder deprecated the way in which the American deal has been "jettisoned" after months of negotiation and asserted: "Our directors have not acted honorably to these gentlemen."

"Green Pastures" Admitted

Granting a certificate for public (adult) exhibition to "Green Pastures," five months after the picture was first submitted, Lord Tyrrell, president of the British Board of Film Censors, has established a rather important precedent for his office.

Among the fixed rules under which the British Board has operated since its establishment by the industry is one that no sacred figures may be shown on the screen. This regulation has been responsible for the banning of several outstanding picture which transgressed the letter of the rule, though by common consent possessing no offensive characteristics.

His decision has won for the British Board a more favorable press than any recent action of that body.

$32,500,000 Theatre Merger

Details were released this week of the amalgamation plan of Union Cinema Co., Ltd., and its associated theatre companies, Oxford and Berkshire Cinemas, Ltd., and National Provincial Cinemas, Ltd.

It provides for flotation of a new company with a capitalization of £6,500,000 in 2,000,000 six per cent first preference £1 shares, 1,500,000 six per cent second preference of the same value, 10,000,000 "A" ordinaries of 5s value and 2,000,000 ordinaries, also of 5s category. Both preference classes are redeemable at 22s at the option by the board or by means of a one per cent sinking fund operating from 1940.

Special meetings of shareholders will be held on November 27th to consider an offer of interchange of shares on the basis of 37 new "A" ordinaries and 12 new ordinaries for every £1 ordinary in Union; two "A" and 12 ordinaries for each 5s ordinary in Oxford and Berks; three "A" and one ordinary for each 5s ordinary in National Provincial. Proportionate offers are made in respect of preference shares.

Distributors Call Mid-Season Conventions to Map Selling Campaigns for Winter

With sales and box office records in most cases reaching new high marks, large distributors are continuing their efforts to maintain the upward swing, several companies calling special mid-season sales conventions to map extended campaigns for the winter period.

Columbia Pictures set for Saturday the first of three special district meetings in San Francisco.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer held a formal sales meeting in Chicago.

Warner Brothers-First National scheduled a similar meeting for Chicago on Wednesday and Thursday.

Imperial Pictures' staff meets in Chicago, with Vice-president Lou Berman presiding.

Ross Federal Service, box office checkers for national distributors, likewise set a fall convention for Chicago this week.

The first of a series of district meetings presided over by Abe Montague, general sales manager for Columbia, was set for San Francisco on Saturday. Expected at the gathering, a two day session, were Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; Jerome Safron, western division manager, and the branch managers, office managers, bookers and sales forces of the company's six west coast exchanges in Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle.

Branch managers attending included W. C. Ball, W. C. Riter, J. R. Beale, R. C. Hill, L. E. Tillman and Neil Walton.

The meeting will be followed by similar sessions in New Orleans, Chicago and New York but the dates have not yet been set.

Rodgers Heads Chicago Meeting

William F. Rodgers, general sales executive for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, closed a meeting with district managers of the company in Chicago with the statement that during his 30 day trip around the country he had found business amazingly good with big pictures grossing better than in the boom period. The sales manager added that he has closed contracts with more than 75 per cent of the possibilities in the country and that sales are well ahead of last year. The company, he said, is trying out its own checking system but no decision has been made on its retention.

Attending the meeting were Tom J. Connors and E. M. Saunders, sales managers for the east and west; William A. Scully, New York; George A. Hickey, Los Angeles; Jack Flynn, Detroit; S. A. Shirley, Chicago; Harris P. Wolfberg, Kansas City; Charles Kessnick, Atlanta; Henry Nathanson, Toronto, and Alan F. Cummings, home office representative.

Warners' Chicago Session

A mid-season meeting of Warner Brothers, Cosmopolitan and First National sales executives and district managers was conducted on Wednesday and Thursday at the Blackstone hotel in Chicago. The meeting was called for general discussion of distribution policies as well as for the setting of sales plans for the remainder of the product for the season and the outlining of plans for next season.

Home office executives who left New York to attend the meeting are Gradwell Sears, vice-president and general sales manager; Major Albert Warner, vice-president and treasurer; S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity; Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager; Norman H. Moray, in charge of sales for Vitaphone short subjects and trailers; Robert Mochrie, assistant general sales manager for the west; Herbert J. Ochs, for the east, and Arthur Sachson.

Addition of $3,000,000 to the budget, for Class A pictures to be released two or three a month, was announced by Mr. Sears.

District managers at the sales sessions were Roy Haines, eastern manager; Robert Smeltzer, mid-Atlantic manager; Ben Kalmenson, central manager; Leo Blank, midwestern manager; Fred M. Jack, southern manager; Jack Brower, west coast manager, and Wolf Cohen, Canadian manager.

Ross Meets Field Staff

Harry Ross, president of Ross Federal Service, Inc., was in Chicago this week to preside at the fall midwestern convention of the company's field personnel at the Hotel Congress. Controller Frank X. Miske and other home office executives were also in attendance.

The convention, which was scheduled to last all week, was devoted to discussion of new lines of endeavor projected by the company and of more intensive home office supervision of the field forces. Before leaving New York, Mr. Ross said that several important decisions concerning the company's checking service are expected to result from the convention.

All field executives of the midwestern division, directed by Walter Brown in Chicago, attended, including F. A. Rosevelt, Cleveland; Harry Schiffrin, Des Moines; B. E. Jolley, Indianapolis; H. O. Gleiss, St. Louis; W. O. Redden, Kansas City, and Murray K. Ross, Minneapolis.

Zanuck Retains Directors

Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production at Twentieth Century-Fox, this week signed 12 directors anew to long term contracts. They are Edward H. Griffith, Norman Taurog, William Seiter, Henry King, John Ford, Roy del Ruth, Tay Garnett, John Cromwell, Sidney Lanfield, George Marshall, Otto Preminger and David Butler.

Sussman Sales Week Set

Twentieth Century-Fox exchanges in the east have set aside November 22-28 as Bill Sussman Week. Mr. Sussman is eastern division manager.

Sees General Use Of Double Track

The use of double track film recording and reproducing may be more or less general in American within the next 12 to 15 months, E. M. Hartley, manager of RCA Photophone, indicated this week in response to an inquiry by Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. Mr. Hartley's reply, made public in Washington last week, said that Loew's circuit already is being equipped for double track film and that its use may be general throughout the circuit within the next few months.

Both the RCA and the Western Electric systems "are being built so that film may be interchanged," Mr. Hartley wrote, "and, furthermore, the systems are being so designed that they can be modified to play either single or double track film regardless of whether they are RCA or Western Electric recorded."

Allied's query resulted from a report from one of its regional units that an exhibitor member had been advised by an RCA salesman that because of the impending adoption of double track film "all theatres will have to be equipped with either Western Electric's Mirrophonic or RCA push-pull system in order to exhibit major company film."

Salesmen Seek $10,000 Fund

Approximately $10,000 is expected to be raised by the Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., at the annual Thanksgiving Frolic, Dinner and Dance at the Hotel Astor in New York on November 25. The money will be set aside for charitable purposes in the local industry circles. Harry H. Buxbaum of the Twentieth Century-Fox exchange is chairman of the relief committee, which comprises Matty Cahan, Joseph Lee and Moe Sanders.

Wickland Joins Republic

Larry Wickland has joined Republic Pictures as an associate producer in Hollywood and has been placed in charge of serials by Nat Levine, production executive. Mr. Wickland will start work soon on "Dick Tracy." Harry Salpeter, recently signed as story editor by Mr. Levine, also has moved into his headquarters at the studio.

Hathaway and Jones Promoted

Henry Hathaway and Grover Jones have been named co-producers of "Souls at Sea" by William LeBaron, production head at the Paramount studios. Mr. Hathaway also will direct the picture.

RKO Publishing Fan Paper

RKO will start a monthly fan paper for distribution in its theatres next month, with John Dowd as editor. The new paper will be called RKO Hollywood Review and will carry advertisements as well as fan stories.

Warner Club To Dance

The second annual ball of the Brooklyn Warner Club will be held at the St. George hotel, Brooklyn, on Saturday, November 28. Stars of stage and screen have promised to appear.

The reply of M. F. Singleton to Section A is selected for publication:

"A transformer consists of two separate alternating current circuits joined by common magnetic circuit. It provides a means of transferring a. c. from one circuit to another by means of magnetic induction, either at approximately equal voltage and amperage, or at higher amperage and lower voltage, or higher voltage and lower amperage. In physical construction transformers consist of two coils of wire wound upon a laminated iron core, the one to which power is applied being termed the primary; the one in which secondary voltage is applied, the secondary. When power is applied to the primary, a magnetic field is built up by the core, and through magnetic induction a secondary voltage is set-up in the secondary coil, from which power may be taken.

"A choke coil consists of a single coil of wire wound upon an iron core. When power is applied thereto, magnetic reactance or impedance is set up, which same acts as resistance to flow of current. This impedance is very often termed magnetic kick, though the term has no standing in electrical parlance. Transformers create a new, wholly separate current through induction. The choke coil merely sets up magnetic resistance to current flow."

Charles Oldham replies:

"A choke coil differs from a transformer in that it tends to limit the volume of current an a. c. voltage can force through. One very important fact is that any given choke coil having a fixed impedance will impede or "choke" the flow of high frequency current to greater extent than it will a current of low frequency. The impedance effect is dependent upon two factors; namely, the inductance of the coil and the frequency of the current, this combined effect being termed impedance, or colloquially, magnetic kick.

"Transformers are devices to which a. c. power is applied at definite pressure, the effect being that power in the form of secondary current is taken from it, of equal frequency but at different pressure, either higher or lower. The transformer merely alters one factor of power or energy. It does not change one form of power into another. Any increase in secondary pressure means a corresponding decrease in current exactly to the extent that, save for inevitable power losses, the product of volts times amperes will remain equal. In any transformer are two coils of wire, both wound upon an iron core having certain characteristics. When a. c. power is applied to one coil (the primary), that coil is magnetized, whereupon magnetic flow occurs that envelopes the other (secondary) coil, in which a secondary voltage is, by this action, induced. For this reason all wattage taken from secondary must be and is subtracted from primary."

(B) R. A. Hooker says, "All secondary wattage is derived from the primary. Disregarding inherent transformer losses, if 5,000 watts be taken from the secondary, 5,000 watts must be put into the primary, though the secondary wattage may be at lower voltage and higher amperage, or vice versa. The secondary is energized by induction—that is to say, changes in the magnetic field surrounding the secondary, which changes cause current to be generated in the secondary coil by inductance."

(C) A. L. Cooper answers, "Secondary output as compared with primary input is directly proportional to number of turns of wire in each coil. If the secondary voltage is less than primary, the secondary wire turns are less in number, and vice versa."

C. L. Loft says, "The proportions of primary to secondary voltage is controlled by relative number of wire turns in each coil. For example, if secondary has twice the turns contained in primary, secondary voltage will be twice that of primary. If it has only half as many turns as primary, then secondary voltage will be only half that of primary."

(D) Strangely, only very few got this correct. S. O. Sears says, "If both coils have exactly an even number of turns, secondary voltage will be equal to that of primary, less an efficiency loss of about ten percent."

New Central Depot For Film Delivery

With film delivery service companies in Philadelphia, Des Moines and Minneapolis having adopted the plan, George Callahan of Exhibitors Film Delivery Service of Pittsburgh will inaugurate a central shipping depot.

Horlachers in Philadelphia was the first to institute the central shipping plan with Isles and McKinney in Des Moines following. Charles McCarthy of Minneapolis put the idea into operation last week and it is understood M. Jamison of Kansas City will shortly bring the plan into that city.

RECALLS DEBT THAT'S OLDER THAN ZUKOR'S

To the Editor of the Herald:

That was a very interesting picture you ran on page 11 of the November 7th of the Herald, the one showing Mr. Adolph Zukor paying off a debt to his former property boy, a debt of 20 years' standing.

But that's not the record, because for 23 years I have had a debt of 50 cents outstanding against Mr. William A. Brady, the great stage producer, which, figured at 6 per cent interest per year, now equals $1.91, only to date Mr. Brady has not paid this money to me and so far as I know at the present time he is not figuring on paying it.

Well, it all happened this way. I was 10 years old. The World Studios, of which Mr. Brady was then the head, decided to make a sensational picture, "The Whip," a great race horse story. Down on the eastern shore of Maryland, near a small village by the name of Queenstown (my home town), was an obsolete railroad with a track that ran for a couple of miles. The big scene in the picture was the wreck of a train. This section of the track was selected to stage the big wreck. The company arrived and this was a big event in my life, also in the life of the village. I stopped school and lived day and night with the men who were sent to film the picture, as many additional scenes had to be taken. Once in a while Mr. Brady journeyed down from New York. Then one day, when the weather was rather cool, Mr. Brady instructed me to hotfoot it to town (a distance of two miles from location), go to the only hotel in town and ask them to have some hot coffee made and ready for him. He promised me the sum of 50 cents. I ran to town, the coffee was prepared . . . but Mr. Brady forgot to pay. I am 33 years of age now; that was 23 years ago. The debt still stands . . . 50 cents plus interest at 6 per cent for 23 years equals $1.91. Figure it up. Oh yes, Irving Cummings, now a Fox director, was the star of the picture. He and I were buddies then.—Earle M. Holden, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Atlanta, Georgia.

P. S. Incidentally, my contact with the company at that time gave me the notion that the movie game was okay, but I didn't enter into the theatre business until I was 22 years of age.

TRACING HISTORY OF CHAIR THROUGH FILM

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have been informed that a motion picture which bore the title of "Marie Antoniette" was released in 1929 by a firm called "Unusual Photo Play." Because we, the public, are informed that good pictures use only authentic settings, I am most anxious to get in touch with the producer of this photo play.

A Frenchman, who saw this picture or possibly another depicting the life of Marie Antoniette, informs me that during the course of the play Marie arose from her chair, which was a "spring" or "patent" rocker, and gave it up to her admirer to sit in while he smoked.

I have in my possession a suite of old chairs which I have traced to have been sent to the United States about 1825 by Louis Philippe, later king of France. Earlier evidence convinced me that the chairs had been especially designed and built for Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

However, there is a spring rocker in the set which because of certain peculiarities of workmanship and design plainly gives evidence of the fact that this is the first chair of this type ever built.

I have been able to give very probable reasons for Marie's having had such a chair, yet antique experts to whom I have written here in the United States deny that such is possible, even though there seems to be no record of the invention of this type of a chair to substantiate their theories.

Also it would seem from evidence I have uncovered that these chairs very probably were a gift to Marie and Louis from some very wealthy Englishman, since I am satisfied they were built in England by Thomas Sheraton. This Frenchman who told me of having seen this photo play said it seemed to him that Marie's admirer had been an English nobleman. So if this is true I am most anxious to learn his name also.

I have an idea that if I have not been misinformed about this picture, no doubt the producer obtained data for his settings in France rather than the United States.

I believe it should not be hard for you to understand my anxiety to obtain all the authentic evidence I can upon this subject.

Can you possibly give me any information at all about the matter? Was this picture produced here or in France and by whom? How can I get in touch with the right persons who could inform me?

I assure you I shall be most appreciative of any help you can give me.—Mrs. Jessie Bell, Route 5, Box 172, Tacoma, Wash.

MICKEY MOUSE WINS PRESIDENTIAL RACE

To the Editor of the Herald:

I am sending a written explanation of an incident on the Presidential election which I believe will be most interesting and amusing to your subscribers.

Mickey Mouse will be our next President, according to the applause he received at this theatre one night.

Our newsreel ended with the following title: "Who Will Be Our Next President?" Next was a shot of President Roosevelt, who received a great hand of applause amid some boos and hisses. Then came a shot of Landon, who received mostly boos and hisses amid some applause. Then on the split second after Landon, my operator made an unexpected quick changeover to the cartoon showing a large shot of Mickey Mouse, who received the greatest ovation any candidate will ever get, thereby proclaiming him our next President.

The audience, including myself, just roared with laughter.—Joseph Pagliaro, Park Theatre, New York.

Conn Leases Studio For Four New Units

Maurice Conn has signed a three-year lease on the Reliable Studios in Hollywood. The new studio personnel already signed by Mr. Conn includes Leo Taub, studio manager; Martin G. Cohn, film editor; Sherman Lowe, story editor, and Warren Stokes, advertising and publicity head.

Mr. Conn has four units which will produce at Reliable and the productions will be released through the newly formed Television Pictures. Victor and Edward Halperin are associated with Mr. Conn in Treasure Pictures, the first of which is "Robin Hood, Jr.," with Frankie Darro and Kane Richmond.

Melody Pictures is producing the first of four pictures which will star Pinky Tomlin. Conn Productions and Ambassador Pictures are the other two units which will work at the studio.

Simons New Rodgers Aide

M. L. Simons, who has been with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the past 10 years, the last three as editor of the Distributor, the company's house organ, has been promoted to assist William F. Rodgers, general sales manager. Mr. Simons started with the company in 1927 as a checker in Indianapolis, later becoming a booker.

U. A. Home Office Changes

Several changes were made this week in the home office personnel of United Artists. Phillip Dow was promoted to assistant to Harry Gold, eastern sales manager; George Roth was changed to the circuit contract department and Louis Ginsburg was put in charge of sales control, with Richard Russo named as his assistant.

"Rainbow" Releases Set

Sol Lesser will release "Rainbow on the River" day and date in 40 key cities during Christmas Week, he announced in Hollywood this week. Mr. Lesser will come to New York shortly to confer with Radio executives on a $200,000 advertising campaign.

Fred Pelton Leaves MGM

Fred Pelton Tuesday resigned as executive studio manager at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Hollywood, concluding a term of eight years in that position. He said he was weighing several offers from studios in Hollywood and abroad.

Warner Pittsburgh Dance Nov. 22

The Warner Club of Pittsburgh will hold its annual dinner dance at the Hotel William Penn on November 22. More than 1,000 are expected to attend, including several from the home office club in New York.

"Dodsworth" Wins Award

Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Dodsworth" was selected as the best picture of the month of October by the combined critics of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. Critics in 29 cities voted on the awards.

Nat Bader Returns to Field

Nat Bader, of the field staff of Quigley Publications, has resumed his activities after a month's illness.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Burroughs-Tarzan

TUNDRA: Del Cambre—This is an educational picture of the Far North and can be used if advertised as such. There is a lot of interesting animal stuff and scenery galore but hard to figure it entertainment.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Columbia

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot—We did normal business and our audience pronounced it a good program. Played October 24.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

CASE OF THE VELVET CLAWS, THE: Warren William, Claire Dodd—Just fair, although William is a favorite here. Guess our people are getting tired of these Clue Club mysteries as the draw is getting less every time. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—This was a swell show of the aviation type. When the final fadeout comes, the patriotic person in your audience will have a feeling that America is still the land of the free and the home of the brave whether Roosevelt is President or not, and people will take it as entertainment, too.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—This was a swell slapstick comedy. Had some very nicely faked thrills and a story that was more interesting than most of Joe's.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

ROAD GANG: Donald Woods, Kay Linaker—A very good weekend program. Not as good as "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," but well patronized and liked.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SINGING KID, THE: Al Jolson, Beverly Roberts—Jolson's worst picture. Losing his popularity fast.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Not as good as I expected after reading "What the Picture Did for Me." Had some good Vitaphone shorts that helped the draw. Played November 4-5.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

WHITE ANGEL, THE: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, Donald Woods—A wonderful picture everywhere but at the box office. The older patrons thought it was great, but the young folk did not seem to care to find out whether it was good or not. Not a small town picture, but pleased those who came. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 17-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Grand National

SOUTHERN MAID: Bebe Daniels—This is a poor imitation of a picture and typical of what I have obtained from independent producers every time I have been soft and bought some to help the industry. Don't run it.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Very entertaining picture. Pleased old and young and has a great moral behind same. Did nice business from rural patrons as well as city folk. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 16-17.—W. M. Redmond, Rose Theatre, Glendive, Mont. General patronage.

GARDEN MURDER CASE, THE: Edmund Lowe, Virginia Bruce—A very smart mystery story, well acted and with normal midweek patronage.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Rockefeller Center, New York

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Excellent drama. Showed to about normal attendance, which was good because we had a bad storm both nights with about eight inches of snow. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton—Designed solely for laughing purposes, this hilarious piece of hokum fits in admirably on a dual bill or will stand alone in smaller spots for weekend. We played it with "Sins of Man" and it made a good combination. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 4-5.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery, Cecilia Parker—Here's the kind of a picture that pleases my audience 100 per cent. And, what is more important, this is the kind that brings them in at the box office. To illustrate: "His Brother's Wife," recently played, did the poorest business in this theatre since August 1st, while "Old Hutch" was around the top. Good, wholesome entertainment. A story of small town life, well acted, with humor, romance and just the right degree of suspense. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 6-8.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—No story at all. Just a lot of crazy foolishness. Montgomery and Loy usually good drawing cards here. But they surely flopped in this one. Played October 30-31.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

PUBLIC GHOST NO. 1: Charley Chase—About the usual for Charlie, which is not worth what he costs. Where do they get this raise in price on his comedies? Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO, THE: Warner Baxter, Ann Loring, Margo—An excellent production that pleased. Altogether too rough for me, but the cash customers seemed to think it was O. K. and that is all that counts. Wonderful acting by entire cast. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—Most popular and lovable team on the screen. Give us more pictures like this and we will keep in the show business. Played October 16-17.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan—Pleased. Timely but much too long. Became tiresome. Played October 25-26.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local and small town patronage.

WE WENT TO COLLEGE: Charles Butterworth, Hugh Herbert, Walter Abel, Edith Atwater, Una Merkel—A college picture of the old boys coming back and getting plastered. Divided opinions. Seen better.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

MURDER WITH PICTURES: Gail Patrick, Lew Ayres—This is just another murder picture. Had plenty of comedy relief.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

POPPY: W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson—Misses his earlier pictures by 50 per cent. By far not his usual run of comedy. Pleased, but that's all I can say. He can do better if given the right stories. Played October 30-31.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local and small town patronage.

SPENDTHRIFT: Henry Fonda, Pat Paterson, Mary Brian—We ran into a snowstorm with the conditions so bad that we took a licking on the picture that pleased all who saw it. Played November 4-5.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WEDDING PRESENT: Joan Bennett, Cary Grant—Nice cast and nice production. This will go back home or in the city or with any kind of crowd. It is light comedy, perhaps too light, but the crowd liked it.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Charlie Ruggles makes more friends in this and believe I had as hilarious a crowd in my theatre during this show as I have had for anything this year.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Republic

SITTING ON THE MOON: Roger Pryor, Grace Bradley—With three songs, dancing numbers and some comedy this makes above average entertainment. Played November 7-8.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

UNDERCOVR MAN: Johnny Mack Brown—A western that has lots of laughs. Seemed to please.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—This is a swell picture made into entertainment as well as football thrills. The game is good and a knowledge that the best players in the world are doing their stuff for you will sell it to every spot in town. It is good entertainment.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien, Heather Angel—This was a fine Western type of picture made with care and considerable expense and hopefully classed as a special. It was well done, but could not sell to my crowd as a special. Neither could I sell them "The Texas Rangers," which was a real epic, so guess my crowd is prejudiced against anything they think might be educational. True Western adventure story.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This was up to their previous standard and will do business right along with "Follow the Fleet" and "Top Hat" and please them all.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—A very fine musical that would have been improved greatly had there been more story and less dancing. My patrons said "too much dancing." The elimination of the blackface dancing of Astaire, in my opinion, would have pepped the picture up somewhat. Business below Astaire and Rogers average. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 1-3.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

TWO IN REVOLT: Louise Latimer, John Arledge—This was booked to please the youngsters, as it was the occasion of the annual Hallowe'en party given by the Community Chest for the youngsters of the town. Of course we had a packed house. The picture pleased. Played October 31.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—This was a nice show and typical of the aviation pictures. Comes out O. K. and the crowd enjoys the story and thrills. The story is better than average and so is the production.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BACK TO NATURE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Here is a fine picture for the whole family. It is pleasing from start to finish. Very comical and a fine picture for weekends. Running time, 56 minutes. Played October 14-15.—W. M. Redmond, Rose Theatre, Glendive, Mont. General patronage.

BORDER PATROLMAN, THE: George O'Brien, Polly Ann Young—Very good action picture that pleased. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 4-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Very good picture, but not worth special price as rental. I paid too much. Gave nice satisfaction as to story value, but it misses the special class by a 25 per cent cut from the special class price. Played November 1-2.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local and small town patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan, Stepin Fetchit—Just an ordinary Temple picture. Frank Morgan and Stepin Fetchit take most of the glory. As all Temple pictures go, it does a nice business. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 18-20.—W. M. Redmond, Rose Theatre, Glendive, Mont. General patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin, George Givot—Fair. Not her best. Held interest, but the Russian overacted. Will get by as a fair programmer. Played November 3-4.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local and small town patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple, Alice Faye—Not up to the former Temple pictures and fewer favorable comments. Receipts third less than we usually gross on her pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 1-3.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

SINS OF MAN: Jean Hersholt, Don Ameche—Played it with "Kelly the Second" and it made a good combination. Played November 4-5.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell—We were disappointed in our attendance for we had fine weather and we expected a real draw. We lost money on this show. Played October 28-29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir, Slim Summerville—Very good Northern picture. Beautiful scenery, good cast, interesting story with plenty of comedy furnished by Slim Summerville. Pleased. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor—This was one swell show. I can't find any sign of the Mary Astor diary hurting her. The public generally liked her well enough to feel that the press were wrong and, as we know, the press is very glad to take up any dirt they can find and make mud of it. Walter Huston was fine.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

GHOST GOES WEST, THE: Robert Donat, Jean Parker—Sorry he didn't go West before I booked this one. If I ever ran a worse one than this I have forgotten it. I felt like a bandit for taking their money. Nothing but walkouts the first night and not enough the second night to pay for the electricity. If Robert Donat belongs in the movies so do I. If you have bought this dud, double feature it and then don't run it. Awful. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 28-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

THESE THREE: Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea, Bonita Granville—I think this one pleased everyone. Interesting story and acting that is the tops. Think the audience will be disappointed not to see Mary (played by Bonita Granville) get capital punishment. She is plenty good in a very unsympathetic part. This one ought to please any audience. Running time, 93 minutes. Running time, October 24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT THEATRE'S TENTH ANNIVERSARY

The New York Paramount theatre this week marked its tenth anniversary with the opening of Mae West's picture, "Go West, Young Man," the 482nd feature to play the house since the opening on November 19, 1926. In the decade the Paramount has had a total attendance of 44,987,000 persons.

Of the 482 pictures shown only three have played four consecutive weeks, Mae West's "I'm No Angel"; "Poppy," starring W. C. Fields, and "The Big Broadcast of 1937," which concluded its fourth week on Tuesday night.

The first picture to play the theatre was "God Gave Me Twenty Cents," directed by Herbert Brenon with a cast including Lois Moran, Lya DePutti, Lois Wilson and Jack Mulhall.

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Anita Louise—A great picture from the production standpoint, swell acting, but had very little appeal to the rural trade. Needs plenty of exploitation. Running time, 139 minutes. Played October 4-6.—W. M. Redmond, Rose Theatre, Glendive, Mont. General patronage.

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable—Read some poor reports on this picture and was somewhat afraid to push it. I now regret this because in my opinion it is first-class entertainment. While the story at times seems to falter and some of the intended comical situations fail to bring laughter, the musical numbers are high-class and the settings for them have seldom been equaled or surpassed. All in all, I would say the picture gave very good satisfaction. The first night's business was splendid, the second and third about average. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 8-10.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram, Hall Johnson Choir—This one took an awful nosedive at the box office. Had been shown at two neighboring towns and the word-of-mouth advertising killed it here. Think it pleased about half of the very small audience. Personally, I did not like it. For one who lives in the dust bowl there would not be much inducement to go to Heaven after seeing the colored women dusting, attired in huge gingham wings. If you can this one early it might be all right, but not after it has been shown in nearby towns. The Hall Johnson Choir is the highlight. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 6-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HEARTS DIVIDED: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—Very good, Usually a costume show does not go over here, but this one seemed to click. Dick Powell is popular here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JAILBREAK: Craig Reynolds, June Travis—If this organization doesn't discontinue sending out trailers which are a menace rather than a help, they will not sell us another contract with trailers included. The picture was very good and pleased, but the trailer kept people away rather than bringing them in. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 30-31.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DR. BLUEBIRD: Color Rhapsodies—An uplifting theme of helpfulness is the subject of this fine cartoon. An improvement on the type that scares the children with hideous creatures. Running time, one reel.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

PAIN IN THE PULLMAN, A: Broadway Comedies—The Three Stooges have worked up such a local following that we give them extra billing. "A Pain in the Pullman" was grand slapstick with plenty of originality. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Educational

EASY PICKIN'S: Cabin Kids—First of this series I have run and it went over good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THANKS, MR. CUPID: Musical Comedies—Poorest two-reeler I've ever seen. I canned it the second show of the opening night.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local and small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AUDIOSCOPIKS: Peter Smith—This is a novelty picture photographed in third dimension photography. Splendid, and, oh boy, how interesting to watch this new picture when all objects come flying right at you that you duck like it was real. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

BOTTLES: Harman-Ising—Very, very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HARNESSED RHYTHM: MGM Sports—Excellent single. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

HOW TO VOTE: MGM Miniatures—This must be run prior to an election to get the full benefit. Robert Benchley, pinch hitting for the speaker of the evening, is almost as good as in his first subject, "How to Sleep." Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LUCKY CORNER, THE: Spanky McFarland—Exceptionally good comedy. The kids always draw the crowd.—Elmer Hughes, Edward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

POOR LITTLE ME: Harman-Ising—Another of a consistently smart series. We have yet to see a poor cartoon from Metro. Running time, 10 minutes.—Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

RURAL MEXICO: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Quite interesting. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ST. HELENA AND ITS MAN OF DESTINY: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another interesting FitzPatrick masterpiece that we repeated each evening at the end of our show. Thanks for your letter, Mr. FitzPatrick. We're glad you read our reports, which were sincere.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SUNKIST STARS AT PALM SPRINGS: Edmund Lowe—The latest and most beautiful of all Metro's Musical Revues in Technicolor. We would play 52 of these a year if they would make 'em. Running time, 18 minutes.—Mrs. E. L. Tait, Lauder Theatre, Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

VAMP 'TIL READY: Charley Chase—A real laugh, very clever and different. They went for it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: Was a little afraid of this series for my audience. Thought they might be somewhat tiresome. Have now tried three of them and find that they rank with the newsreels as being my most interesting shorts. Running time, 20 minutes.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

THROUGH THE MIRROR: Mickey Mouse—Good coloring but exceedingly short on entertainment. When the kids keep quiet on a Mickey Mouse it must be poor. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

STEEL AND STONE: Our Own United States Series—Interesting short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE GAIETIES: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Another excellent reel of four vaudeville acts. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

VITAPHONE GAIETIES: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Good, peppy single reel. This series is all good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE HIPPODROME. Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Not a good subject in the lot. Usually these are very good and we look forward to them with pleasure, but this was one of the poorest. Running time, 11 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WHEN FISH FIGHT: Pepper Pot—Play it. Your fishermen will eat it up. It's a reel of action.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Ken Murray—Here finally is a pip! The "yes" and "no" guy in this comedy stole the show without a doubt. But in addition to him the story and cast were good. It is almost a sensation when you hear people laugh at comedies like they did at this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

I'M A BIG SHOT NOW: Merrie Melodies—Good. That goes for all of these colored cartoons. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAID FOR A DAY: Grace Hayes—Very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MISS GLORY: Merrie Melodies—Good. That goes for all of these colored cartoons. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ODD OCCUPATIONS: Our own United States Series—Would be good but recording is so poor it is not worth running. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REGULAR KIDS: Broadway Brevities—A real clever children's program that every exhibitor will be proud of.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CITY'S SLICKER, THE: Dawn O'Day, Radio Rubes—Very good two-reeler from Vitagraph. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ECHO MOUNTAIN: Fred Lawrence, Rosalind Marquis—One of the best musicals, all in color. These colored musicols go a long way in putting over a show. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HARRY RESER AND HIS ESKIMOS: Melody Masters—Excellent musical number. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Navy Spends $307,000 For Pictures in Year

The United States Navy spent $307,000 for the leasing of motion pictures for the recreation of its enlisted personnel afloat and ashore during the fiscal year which ended June 30, last, it was shown this week by the chief of the Bureau of Navigation in his annual report to the Secretary of the Navy.

An appropriation of $85,000 was set aside from the funds provided by Congress for the leasing of films, the remainder being secured from ship's stores profits and contributions from ships and stations.

During the year 228 men were admitted to the schools at San Diego and New York, where the Navy teaches sound film technicians, and 197 were graduated. The six-week course was given to 68 men at New York and 160 at San Diego, and graduations were 56 at New York and 141 in California.

G. C. Blumenthal Opens Exchange

George C. Blumenthal, for the last 16 years western division manager for Educational Pictures Corporation, has left the company to open his own independent exchange in San Francisco. He will be associated with his brothers, Sid Blumenthal and Edmund Blumenthal, both of whom will continue to operate the Liberty Exchange as in the past.

Richards Sets Distribution

B. W. Richards will leave Hollywood shortly for New York where he will close with a major company for the distribution of six features based on the Dan Dunn cartoon strip now syndicated in newspapers. He will produce the series in association with Arthur S. Beck.

Spencer Buys in Halifax

F. G. Spencer Company, Ltd., St. John, N. B., has purchased the Orpheum, Halifax, making the 19th theatre in the Maritime Province now operated by the circuit. Percy R. Fielding has also been appointed manager of the Orpheum, Wolfville, N. S.

Rosenzweig-Cocalis to Build

David Rosenzweig, associated with Sam D. Cocalis in the operation of a number of theatres in Brooklyn, the Bronx and Long Island, has completed plans with other associates for the building of three theatres, two in Brooklyn and one in Maspeth, L. I.

Eskins Increases Circuit

Jacob Eskins, operator of a number of theatres in Wisconsin, has taken over the Vernon and Temple theatres at Viroqua, Wis., from the Vernon Theatre Corporation and the La Crosse Trust Company respectively.

Lenauer Cinematheque Agent

Jean H. Lenauer, president of Lenauer International Films, Inc., has been named New York representative of the Cinematheque Francaise. This organization corresponds in its aims to the purpose of the New York Modern Film Art Library.

Van Vaumann to Study Ecuadorian Film Problems

Cyril Van Baumann, who with Andre Roosevelt recently returned from an exploration trip through hitherto unexplored parts of Ecuador, has been commissioned by the South American republic to make a survey and report on the possibility of establishing motion picture studios in Ecuador to film several features around the lives of South American historical figures.

Native Production Increases in Egypt

The demand in Egypt for motion pictures with Arabic dialogue has resulted in the erection of a number of studios in that country for the production of films in the native tongue, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache James T. Scott in Cairo. There are five such studios now operating in Egypt and two more are under construction in the Cairo district. All of the plants are using America-made equipment.

Films Shown in Greece Reach Record High

A total of 323 motion pictures with sound were exhibited in Greece during the 1935-36 season, an increase of 20.5 per cent over the previous season, according to a report from Commercial Attache K. L. Rankin at Athens: Seventy-two per cent of the films exhibited were American.

Chileans Seek Foreign Drafts

Motion picture importers in Santiago, Chil, have made representations to the Ministry of Finance to overrule the refusal of the Exchange Control Commission to grant foreign currency drafts, according to a New York Times cable. The importers fear the lack of drafts may lead to the prohibition of further importations.

Wilson on New Psychic Shorts

Carey Wilson is doing the dialogue and explanatory comments in a new series to be produced by Jack Chertok at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Hollywood. "What Do You Think?" is the title of the series, which will deal with psychic phenomena.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

FRIENDSHIP AMONG MANAGERS

The manager who has only words of praise and goes out of his way to help the other fellow is aiding his own cause. The man who puts his brother-showman on the pan and refuses to co-operate is kicking himself right smack in the pants. That's as simple as two-plus-two and it is gratifying to find so many of the boys who know their arithmetic.

Looking at the situation even from the brightest side, the manager has a whole heluva lot to contend with from the home office all the way down to his boiler room. His efforts may be appreciated, but not in every instance; the difficulties of his position understood, but not by every employer. Thus, it certainly stands to reason that men doing the same job, confronted with the same obstacles, should see eye to eye and be among the first to spotlight managerial accomplishment and to lend a helping hand. Too many don't, but praise be, a lot of them do.

There's Ben Schwartz, f'rinstance, at the Ohio Theatre, in Lima. Ben had a stage show booked in and to make sure that everybody in the area would get to know about it, his brother-managers Glenn Nelson and Bunny Sommers, operating in the same sector, got behind the date in their lobbies, ads and on the screen, turning handsprings to boost the attraction. Gratefully, Schwartz wrote to Warner Cleveland division headman Nat Wolf, praising the boys for their assistance and his letter of appreciation, under the heading: "A Tribute to Brother Managers," was carried prominently in Ohio Mouthpiece, the divisional house-organ.

"To receive a pat on the back, one must first make a like gesture," says the Warnerite, and how true it is.

As a group, managers will never reach their proper place in the sun until they are as willing at the drop of a hat to battle for each other and to build up the other fellow when and where the buildup counts.

IT'S PART OF HIS EQUIPMENT

That theatremen are on deck to function almost automatically in times of stress "until the doctor comes" and after is no new story in these pages. Countless tales have been recounted here of their speed in being Johnny-on-the-Spot when lightning action is the order of the day and to the long list is now added the names of Round Tablers Les Pollock and Ed Harrison.

At Loew's Rochester, Pollock was suddenly confronted with a sound breakdown due to the AC line to the booth going bad. So instead of running himself into a fever, Les hopped up on the stage and to quote from his newspapers: "turned the mishap into a merry romp by offering cash awards to those in the audience who thought they could do a stunt. Fourteen acts were put on by various of the patrons, a good time had by all and better yet, no one left the house although money-back was offered those who preferred not to wait until repairs were made."

And in Waterville, Maine, a severe storm plunged the Opera House into complete darkness during a capacity Saturday kid matinee. Before the youngsters had time to become frightened and possibly stampede, Ed Harrison popped down at the piano and being a fancy guy at the keyboard had the kids singing lustily until the lights were again in service.

If your manager is not elaborately praised for going into immediate high when the alarm rings, it must be because his quick-thinking is accepted as one of the ready stocks in trade of the competent showman's equipment.

NEAT WAY OF SHOWING IT

In these days of repeated circuit contests for bigger grosses and in which every manager does not always compete with what may be termed frenzied enthusiasm, the story of annual "Moreau Week" put on voluntarily by M & P theatremen in Al Moreau's division is one to conjure with. For some years now, to show appreciation of his efforts in their behalf, the boys get together, appoint committees, promote home office prize money and select a week usually in September when every man shoots his biggest guns to bring home plenty of "black" for the Bossman, who doesn't know a thing about it until the Big Event starts.

How they went about it and what some of the boys did this year is set down on another page of this section from reports forwarded by Committeeman Harry Botwick. It's a splendid thought and behind it an elementary lesson to theatremen in general on what it means to have the respect and confidence of the man out on the firing line.

And it's about time to retell the Yuletide story of the manager who, asked what he would like best for Christmas, answered:

"A canned goods matinee."

ELECTION TIEIN. With advertisers endeavoring in every way to tie in to the general excitement of the presidential election, George Tyson broke out a lot of type 24-sheets on "East Meets West" at the Harris-Alvin, Pittsburgh, with copy headed "Republican or Democrat" as illustrated above.

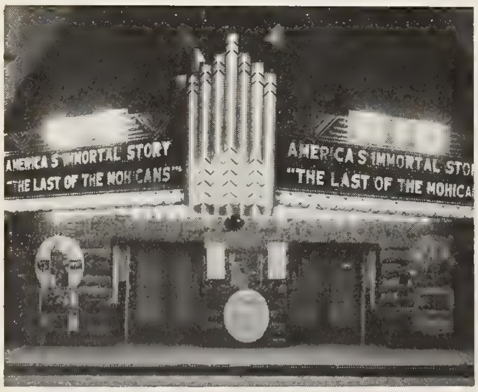
Broadway "Penny Club" Proves Kiddie Draw

A kiddie activity that is receiving splendid response at the Broadway Theatre in Astoria, L. I., is the "Broadway Penny Club," instituted by Sam Norman. According to Norman, the club is one of the only two such clubs in the country, the other being conducted in St. Louis.

Kiddie members are required to bring a penny each week to the special kiddie show. An account is kept of each member's deposits and the kids are urged not to be delinquent. Special buttons are awarded after a certain amount has been paid in.

Nearly 500 kiddies have already enrolled, with more applying each week. Manager Norman proposes to use the accumulated penny bank sometime next June to run a special outing for the club members.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"



LOG FRONT. For his date on "Last of the Mohicans" at the Fox Rio, in Helena, Mont., Manager Ted Kirkmeyer created a complete log front to carry out the atmosphere of the picture.

Principal Endorses "Brute" for Weschler

The realistic steel scenes in "Magnificent Brute" led Manager V. C. Weschler of the Colonial Theatre, Erie, Pa., and the principal of the local Technical High School into a hearty cooperation stunt that whipped up student interest in the picture. As part of the principal's cooperation stills, window cards and posters were tacked on the bulletin boards, and every teacher was instructed to tell his students how important the picture was to them.

The pressbook suggested stunt, based on "Victor McLaglen's Ten Rules For a Magnificent Physique," was worked into a tieup with the local Y. M. C. A. and large lobby board was prepared, using McLaglen's ten rules and cutouts from the posters, and placed in prominent spot on main floor.

The steel angle was plugged with special cards on the bulletin boards of some of the city's largest plants. One card suggested extra carefulness to the men so that they wouldn't have to miss "Magnificent Brute" and the other recommended the picture to them because of its similarity to their everyday life.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

McBride's Election Returns

So that patrons might learn of election returns while enjoying the show, Ed McBride, Loew's State, Syracuse, placed a miniature screen on the proscenium arch on which returns were flashed from booth. Tying up with station WFBL, Loew's installed amplification system in office attached direct to station's panel board. Theatre had lines running to this station at both front end of house as well as stage, enabling amplifier to be connected for quick announcements.

Heavy Advance for Premieres of Lloyds of London

Coverage of all kinds has been obtained on both coasts by the Charles E. McCarthy ad and publicity forces for the twin premieres of the 20th Century-Fox picture "Lloyds of London," set for Nov. 25th, at the Astor, New York, and the Cathay Circle, Hollywood. Both theatres are undergoing architectural changes, the lobby of the Astor being rebuilt and in Hollywood a replica of the historic Lloyd's Coffee House, where the underwriter's association started, has been constructed in front of the theatre.

Serialisation of the story, prepared by Peter B. Kyne and illustrated by Wallace Morgan, is now available nationally. Now current in the Los Angeles Times, the serial has been publicized with full-page color ads, news stories and radio announcements. In New York, a 15-installment pictorial strip of the story is being run by the Daily Mirror.

Other radio tieins have been effected with four prominent West Coast stations for nightly announcements and arrangements have been made for similar publicity in New York. The feature of the California radio exploitation was a traveling unit of KMTR making door-to-door stops and querying householders on the picture after the manner of sidewalk interviews, the interviews relayed to the station via short-wave and from there rebroadcast. Local British societies have also been contacted.

For the premiere at the Cathay Circle, a spectacle has been planned with members of the cast arriving in costumes of the period borne by footmen in sedan chairs. Usherettes will be dressed in costumes actually worn by Madeleine Carroll and Virginia Field in the picture.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

"Paramount Service" in India

First issue of "Paramount Service" for circulation to exhibitors in India, Burma and Ceylon is out. Arranged by Frank Kennebeck, Paramount exploiteer in that sector and edited by Lew De Silva, the monthly carries a lot of dope on coming product, shorts as well as features, and also runs late trade reports. Well printed, it's a nice job of work and easily readable.

November Deadline; November Judges

Midnight of Saturday, December 5th, is the deadline date for entries in the Quigley November Awards. So please have those campaigns at headquarters by that time.

The November judges are as follows: Arthur Mayer, Rialto Theatre; A. W. Smith, Jr., United Artists Corp., and Gordon S. White, Educational Pictures Corp.

Gable Emphasizes HomeTown Angles For 'Craig's Wife'

As it happens that the brother of George Kelly, author of "Craig's Wife," holds an important state civic post in Pennsylvania and is an active leader of the Philadelphia Democratic party organization, Manager Maurice K. Gable, of the Boyd Theatre, in that spot, was able to use this connection to build up the publicity on his date for the picture. Mr. Kelly and a large number of leading citizens were guests at a special screening held in the Variety Club headquarters.

It also happens that Rosalind Russell, female lead in the picture, is a graduate of the exclusive Rosemont College, situated in a nearby Philadelphia suburb and thus Gable was able to arrange that the date be brought to the attention of all students. Wire was obtained from Miss Russell in Hollywood speaking of her college days and expressing her pleasure that students would be able to see the picture at the Boyd. Wire was blown up for lobby display and jumbo copies made up by Postal Telegraph for use in local offices.

Top Organizations Contacted

Strong drive was made to bring the date to the attention of regular attendants at local stage plays with dignified announcement cards forwarded to mailing lists of legitimate theatres. Screening was also arranged for heads of local federation of women's clubs, president making address after the showing. Personally signed letters were sent to all other heads of important local women's organizations and to heads of women's colleges, finishing schools and academies in a 50-mile radius.

Imprinted blotters were distributed among female office workers, the picture commented on in various fashion and woman's radio programs, teaser ads planted on women's pages of local papers, display of fashion stills of Miss Russell arranged at smart women's store. For outside bally a bannered autogyro was used to fly over stadiums at leading college football games and communities in surrounding areas.

POLITICAL STUFF. In advance of Election Day for his date on "Dimples" at the Poli, Bridgeport, Conn., Matt Saunders arranged this parade display with all the political fixin's and background.

Mediterranean Trip Offered For Best "Allah" Campaign

Theatremen playing United Artists' "Garden of Allah" are bestirring themselves on their exploitation for the date to get in on the 39-day trip the company is offering for the best campaign. Journey will be to the Mediterranean, winner brought to New York via air, housed at local hotel with everything free of charge.

Contest is featured in press book, which is tabbed under headings of exploitation, publicity and advertising and indexed for quick use. Many national tieups are listed and to expedite breakdown of publicity, what each page contains is detailed at the head. Ads of various sizes and shapes are carried in special section.

High School Band Ballys "Swing Time" for Deitz

Sylvan Deitz, Glove Theatre, Gloversville, N. Y., for his "Swing Time" date promoted the high school band to ride about town on bannered truck playing hit tunes. Truck and ten Packard cars with band playing paraded the city.

Various window displays were planted, photos of Rogers and Astaire were distributed, imprinted menus used in leading restaurants and leading department store devoted entire center window to marionettes and dresses tying in with picture.

For "Pigskin Parade" Sylvan made a concession for high school students to sell 800 tickets in advance of their football rally. Parade was held as they marched to theatre, girl cheer leaders led the audience in school yells and songs and captain of the local team and other prominent locals were called upon to make brief talk from stage.

Providence "Godfrey" Serves Coffee to Albee Patrons

Through special arrangements with a local coffee distributor William Brown, Albee Theatre, Providence, had a local butler, resembling "My Man Godfrey," serve coffee to the patrons in the theatre's lobby (see photo). Distributor provided the butler, serving equipment and all the coffee the patrons could drink. The stunt made a decided hit because of the sudden cold weather.

The touring car street ballyhoo, as suggested in the pressbook was used with nice success, car was borrowed from local dealer in return for credit signs on the car and in the lobby of the theatre. The local "Carole Lombard" and "William Powell," who completed the bally, were selected from the scores who answered the newspaper advertisement for women bearing a resemblance to the star. Banner on car read "I'm a Society 'Deb' Taking 'My Man Godfrey to See William Powell and Carole Lombard." The bally attracted the desired attention.

CINDERELLA CONTEST CLICKS FOR MARTIN

Newspaper and Stores Cooperate with October Bronze Winner on Ace 'Swing Time' Stunt

An air trip to New York for the winner and chaperon with gifts from all the 14 cooperating merchants was the prize offered in Guy Martin's top newspaper tiein labeled the "Cinderella Swing Time Girl" contest, featured in the advance drive for the picture of that name at the Colfax, South Bend, Ind. Local paper tied in by running the nominating ballots and giving votes for new subscriptions. Merchants cooperated by giving votes for purchases and TWA was promoted for the air journey. Theatre tickets were also good for votes.

Contest broke front page with daily stories following and at conclusion when winner was presented with transportation on stage of the theatre, ran photos of the event and of the winning entrant. Girl was taken about town in new Packard stopping at cooperating stores for gifts and further newspaper shots. Double truck with each of the merchants participating was another feature headed by copy giving contest information.

Waltz Obtains Many Breaks

Additional co-op page was secured from all night clubs where the hit tunes were featured and a second newspaper contest arranged wherein cash and tickets were given for the greatest number of words made up of letters in the title. Weekly paper also ran a co-op page built around a contest, running shots from previous Astaire-Rogers pictures and giving tickets for those sending in correct names of pictures from which the scenes were taken.

The "Swingtime Waltz" also was made much of with newspaper running eight-day series of cuts and description of the various steps. The dance was brought to the attention of leading dancing schools and classes, the schools also advertising the new step and putting on a "Swing Time Revue" at the theatre.

Close contacts with local airport made possible free use of plane with title in giant letters, the ship flying over the surrounding area (see photo) at football games, etc. Plane was also tied in to ballroom hookup by dropping balloons to which were tied cards advertising the picture and ballroom. Various cards were numbered and good for admissions to the picture when presented at the dance hall which advertised the stunt heavily and also the picture. Another ace air tiein had the plane flying print of the picture from Chicago, print met at the airport by fleet of bannered Packard cars which paraded the town.

Mailing ideas included hotel post cards from New York addressed to local names with copy on the picture and an unusual phone tiein was made to have operator of rural exchanges ring the general alarm signal and announce the date of the picture.

The cooperating stores tied into the contest of course ran big windows as did others and these were topped with a full window of top store which displayed original Rogers costume (see photo) backed with the modern styles arranged by Modern Merchandise.

Teaser cards were distributed with cut of crying baby under which was copy reading "I want my daddy to win a new Packard in the Astaire-Rogers 'Swing Time Contest,' ask about it at the Colfax Theatre." These were placed in parked cars on streets, in parking lots, etc., and was a direct tiein with the local Packard distributor. Martin also planted a Packard booth in his lobby with miniature cutout car and panels of booth covered with scene stills.

Martin worked all the featured slants in addition to the Packard tiein and reports full cooperation of the local dealer in putting over the different angles of the contest. Credited by Martin for invaluable assistance on his winning entry were Ray Wheeler and William Mayer of his staff.

Kicks "Le Gong" Around, Says Max Weinberg

For his engagement of "Le Gong," Maxwell Weinberg, publicity director of the Little Theatre, Baltimore, sent special letters to all dancing academies in town calling attention to the famous Bali dances in the picture.

An exhibit of Balinese drawings was planted in lounge, as was display of Dutch East Indian maps and posters in lobby. Tieup was effected with cosmetic shop stressing fact that Balinese women are most beautiful in the world, and travel agencies devoted windows to display of scene stills.

Anders Sells Armetta

Al Anders capitalized on Henry Armetta's special appeal to the numerous Italian inhabitants of Springfield, Mass., and as an added exploitation angle "Magnificent Brute" had special Italian language window cards placed in stores throughout the Italian districts two weeks before his playdate. The cards played up the celebrated comedian and the important part he has in the picture.

L. A. CHATHAM

Chatham Lists Over 100 Ideas To Put Over Campaign Voted the Quigley October Silver

Coverage in most every direction was obtained by Manager L. A. Chatham of the Sooner Theatre, Norman, Okla., for his advance on "Adverse," with the theatreman listing over 100 different things he did to advertise his date in the city and the drawing area. Well planned was the newspaper drive that started with a series of small teaser ads 12 days ahead, copy reading: "Only 12 days to Anthony Adverse" and followed each day with the numeral changed until the day before opening. Chatham also used the personal columns by running copy signed by a fictitious Mr. Watkins who advertised he was disappearing for two months to read the book. This ran for two days and was answered for an additional two days by the man's wife with copy saying he did not have to take two months, as he could see the picture at the Sooner. Personal endorsements of all editors and classified tie-up helped to build the newspaper campaign.

Giant invitation to the Mayor presented in company of leading citizens (see photo) attracted notice, the Mayor acknowledging the invite with a nice buildup for the date which Chatham made use of. Ballys were employed, one being a large display of the book pushed about town by man costumed as Anthony who also distributed cards. Another stunt had student in window (see photo) for six hours a day reading the book. Window was arranged as comfortable living room and, Chatham reports, proved one of the most consistent crowd-gatherers. For lobby-attractor board with numbered bookmarks was set up and those holding bookmarks with the same numbers previously distributed were entitled to guest tickets.

Various tieups were effected, such as coupons stuffed in all packages at leading bakery with some of the coupons good for admissions, baker advertising the tiein heavily. Laundry shirt boards and reminder slips in leading stores also counted. Chatham secured police permission to distribute simulated parking summons tags and from the Mayor permission to hang a two-way 100-foot banner across the main street. Helpful too was the tiein whereby 17 stores ran the title date and theatre in all newspaper ads.

Chatham addressed personal letters to all teachers, school heads, etc., in the city and rural area, arranged special screening for important locals using their comments in his advertising. Children took printed petitions house-to-house, copy to the effect that all children obtaining 20 adult names would be admitted free.

Football was utilized widely for tieins with score cards distributed and parade of university band with boys carrying banners through the downtown area, to important games, at pep rallys, etc. Ushers at all games wore ribbon badges. Enlarged hand-painted book was planted in a prominent window, and other windows water-colored with copy on the picture. Arrows on all streets and leading roads, much imprinting and rubberstamping, curb and sidewalk stencils, taxi bumper strips, publicity in all rural papers, bannering of delivery trucks, were other of the many smartly executed ideas put over by Chatham in his prize-winning campaign.

Scouts See "Boone"

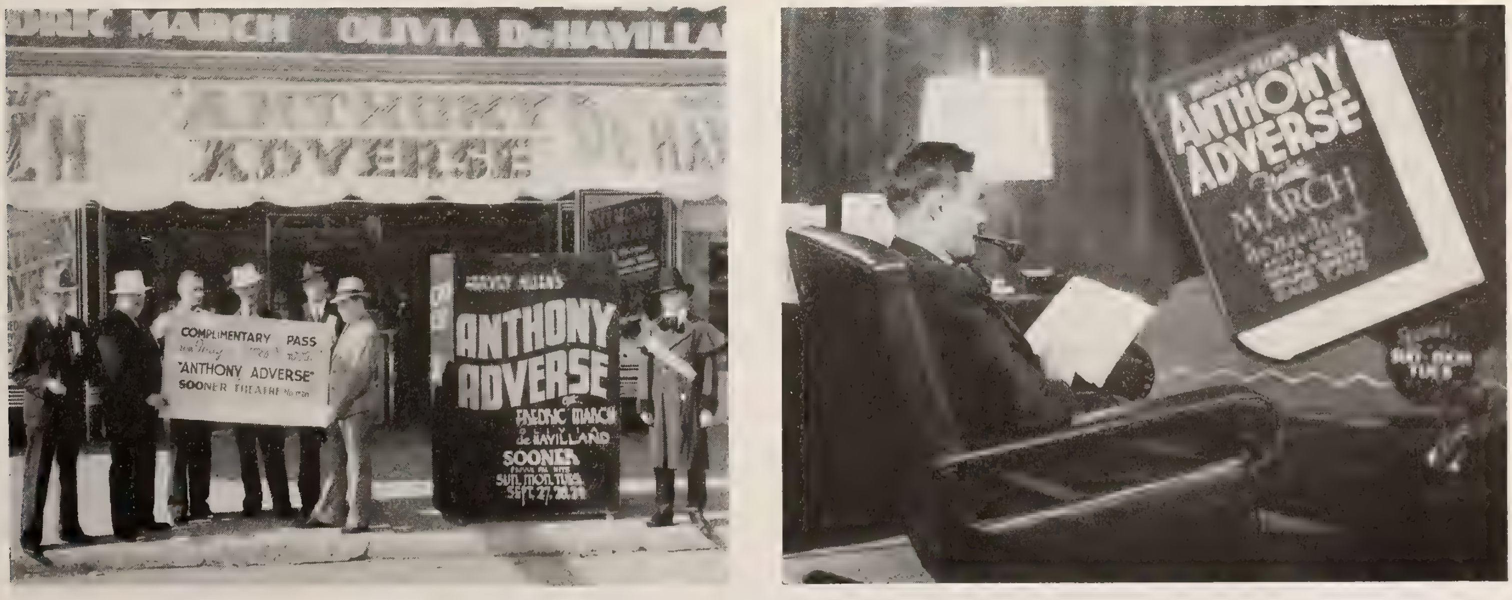
When "Daniel Boone" reached Reading, Penna., C. G. Keeney, Park Theatre, well in advance of the showing mailed letters to members of the city's historical society and Boy Scout masters, while the Scouts themselves received postcards entitling them to see the film at a reduced rate.

Powers Ties "Brigade" To Coast-to-Coast Hookup

William Powers of the Erle Theatre, Washington, D. C., turned in an effective campaign for "Charge of the Light Brigade" Immediately following the completion of the dramatization of "The Charge" on the Hollywood Hotel coast-to-coast radio program, a special announcement was made over the local CBS station plugging the theatre and date. Spot announcements were made on the radio throughout the week prior to opening, and a special interview on the picture held over a network of 22 stations.

School tieups were made with study guides and teachers' guides in each junior and senior high school. Bookmarks were distributed in libraries and stills were put on display in school and library bulletin boards. Flower and beauty shops used stills and gave window displays. A serialization based on the feature was planted in a local paper and many stories and pictures were planted in all the local and suburban papers.

Invitations were sent to dramatic editors and members of British Embassy staff to see the picture at a private screening.



CHATHAM'S GIANT PASS TIEIN WITH MAYOR ON "ADVERSE" AND STUDENT READING THE BOOK IN WINDOW

Various Stunts Sell "Last of Mohicans"

Jim Hicks and M. J. Murphy won another feather for their showmanship caps with their joint campaign on "The Last of the Mohicans" at Warner's Downtown and Hollywood Theatres, Los Angeles. The Evening News ran a serialization and gave the picture advance plugs with five-column promotional ads, stories and art with full billing. The Citizen-News used a full-page editorial on Tantaquidgeon. It also staged a fashion show in the Hollywood on the morning of the opening day and carried special publicity on it concentrating on "Mohican Red."

Local radio stations gave the picture a tremendous buildup with serializations, transcriptions, dramatized spot announcements and frequent mentions over news broadcasts.

Wires Sent from Lobby Sell "President's Mystery"

Through a tieup effected with Western Union by Het Mannheim, Republic exploiteer, who handled the world premiere of "President's Mystery" at the RKO Embassy, San Francisco, girl was stationed at teletype machine in lobby (see photo) typing out messages of invitations to local notables.

Special screening was held for Democratic heads, women's clubs, state and city officials and others. Newspapers were generous with stories, magazine boys paraded to theatre carrying banners reading "We're on our way to see," etc., etc., and leading book stores used window display tying in with the six famous authors of the film.

Pastors Preach Sermons On "Sissy" for McManus

On "The Devil Is a Sissy" Johnny McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo., sent special invitations to two of the city's leading pastors, both of whom preached sermons on the picture.

Special letters were also sent to judges of juvenile and domestic relations court, municipal court and underprivileged children committees of Rotarians, Kiwanis and Rotary. Salvation Army and Kiwanis club officials brought children in body to witness the film and PTA plugged the show. Various merchants devoted windows to displays and newspapers were generous with their stories.

Toy Store Cooperates With Brown on "Easy Money"

Accompanying photo shows effective window display secured in toy store four days ahead of showing of "Easy Money," tying in nicely with new game of the same name. Window was planted by Harry Brown, Jr., and Syd Solomon, Shea's Paramount, Newport, R. I.

On "Under Two Flags," Harry used a street bally of masked girl parading business section of city holding two American flags and one across her shoulders, back banner carried copy reading, "Can you play handies? Tell me what this means and win a prize." Tickets were awarded to winners.

Brown's "Easy Money" Window Display

Brown used another street bally for "To Mary With Love," having two young girls dressed in red page costumes walking through streets each carrying large flower box with bright red letters painted on them spelling out title. Each of the boxes contained red promoted carnations, which were distributed to the ladies.

Guessing Contest Used By Weiss for "Adverse"

Four days ahead of opening of "Anthony Adverse" at the Olympia, Miami, Fla., Al Weiss, Jr., planted girl with book in new model car parked in front of theatre (see photo) with banner reading: "How many pages of Anthony Adverse can this girl read by 8 P. M. Saturday night?" Passes were awarded to persons guessing nearest number of pages and boy dressed as Anthony Adverse stood alongside of car handing out cards and answering questions.

Sailboat with picture copy plied the beaches, special front was built by art department, street car cards were used on all trolleys and various stores came through with window displays of the books with appropriate picture copy.

Hallowe'en Celebration Held by Pollock

Accompanying photo shows five witches that prowled at Les Pollock's midnight Hallowe'en show at Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. Just before last show went on the cat with glaring, flickering eyes was slowly drawn on a pulley across stage, spotted with green. At the same time another spot went wild over the stage and five ushers dressed in witch outfits ran pell mell, screeching down the aisles and onto the stage, where they discovered a basket.

While hovering around the basket two porters dressed as ghosts came down two center aisles, scared the witches away and from the basket drew cotton balls which were thrown into the audience. Then, with the exploitation of a flash powder in front of them, the ghosts disappeared behind the curtain.

Pollock reports the stunt received hearty applause from the audience.

Fannin Runs Contest In Paper on "Death"

During the run of "And Sudden Death," Glenn Fannin, Strand Theatre, Longview, Texas, ran a contest in the Longview Morning Journal each day publishing a picture of some common error made by drivers, pedestrians or both, winners receiving guest tickets.

Co-op ad pages were run, merchants tying in with accident copy, postcards calling attention to picture were mailed to all civic bodies, street parade with police escort headed by wrecker pulling smashed car was held and sidewalk stencils were used as were telegraph pole arrows.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Color Ads Feature "Ramona" Dates

Much emphasis is being laid on the color in "Ramona" evidenced by the newspaper ads from various spots. In Madison, Wis., hookup was made on a co-op page with merchants plugging new colors in fall merchandise. Page was headed with two-color banner reading: "Ramona In Perfect Color Begins Autumn Color Season." Campaign also included smart ad tying in the date with new RCA High Fidelity sound installation.

In Omaha, Charlie Schlaifer, Tri-State's publicist, ran a series of quarter-pages in red and black to stress the same angles.

M & P THEATREMEN AWARDED PRIZES FOR "MOREAU WEEK" EXPLOITATION

Campaigns Created in Yearly Drive to Honor District Manager; Winning Entries Chosen by Votes of Circuit Executives

It has become an annual custom for the theatremen in the A. J. Moreau division of M & P Theatres to put on a testimonial week in honor of their chief and this year the Big Drive was put on during the period from Sept. 21 to the 26th. To Mr. Moreau, the time comes as a complete surprise, as the committee keeps the plans and details under cover until the "week" starts.

It was intended originally that three prizes be given for the best campaigns but the judges, M. J. Mullin, Sam Pinanski and E. A. Cuddy, voted for a fourth in addition. The committee of arrangements was composed of managers from the division who, however, were not eligible for the prizes, and this year details were reported here by Harry Botwick, of the State, Portland, Me., who was in general charge.

First prize was awarded Frank Colburn, Jr., Opera House, Bath, Me.; second to P. H. Nelligan, Park, Bangor, Me.; third to J. K. O'Donnell, Haines, Waterville, Me., and the fourth to L. J. Dandeneau, Park, Rockland, Me. Highlights of what these winners did and details of some other of the campaigns entered are set down on this page, including the ace drive sponsored by Committeeman Mel Morrison, of the Strand, Dover, New Hampshire, in direct charge of the fine "Fall Trade Week" he created and in which he cooperated with his local merchants to put over a banner celebration.

In all, 22 theatremen were represented with the results announced as striking a new high in this yearly competition.

"Thank You Week" Wins for Colburn

To convey to patrons of Bath, Me., appreciation for the response to the new policy at the Opera House, Manager Frank Colburn, Jr., labeled his winning drive "Thank You Week," which also was intended to celebrate with Manager F. J. Gooch the opening of the Columbia Theatre, another M & P house in Bath. Well in advance, meeting of staff of both houses was held to line up the campaign, employees asked to urge their friends to see one extra show during the week. Newspaper stories were planted in advance and special trailer used. Event was stressed in weekly program and on elaborate lobby cutouts carrying details of coming attractions.

Stunts were topped with a grab-bag sale in a tiein with the Woolworth store, boxes holding various kinds of merchandise all sold for one price with some carrying guest tickets. Store gave windows and counter space to the tieup with theatre one-sheet prominently spotted. Phone stunt was worked by putting copy on back of programs advising patrons to keep programs near their phones, as each day 10 numbers would be called to ask the name of current feature at the Opera House, with guest tickets for the right answer.

A. J. MOREAU

For "Road to Glory" and "White Angel" prominent minister devoted part of his Sunday sermon to outline and recommended both pictures. Special shows were run for nurses and physicians and superintendent of nurses at local hospital advised of the showing. Doctors, heads of the PTA, girl scouts were contacted and announcements made at high school assemblies.

For "Earthworm Tractors" Colburn put on a special Saturday morning show so as not to compete with the local high school football game. To give the week a special wind-up, extra publicity was run to advise patrons of the final attraction and mentioned that the "week" had ushered in the first of a number of important coming attractions.

Nelligan Finished Second; And O'Donnell Lands Third

Using line "Let's Go to the Movies Week," Manager P. H. Nelligan, Park, Bangor, Me., built his campaign around second-runs, borrowing a lot of material from the first-run in the same spot which was sniped and displayed again to advantage. The "week" was announced over the two local stations and the coming attractions plugged especially during the theatre Talent Night broadcast from the stage. Nelligan says the result of the drive brought in the biggest week at his spot in three years.

At the Haines Theatre, in Waterville, Me., Manager J. K. O'Donnell led off with strong newspaper campaign which included a classified tiein, a shot of Gary Cooper reading a copy of local paper to hook in on date for "General Dies at Dawn," and serialization of "Gorgeous Hussy." Outstander in local French paper was an editorial signed by the manager for the drive he called "Appreciation Week." Contest was also put on with this sheet.

Showmen Obtain Wide Coverage to Publicise Coming Attractions; Mel Morrison Cooperates with Merchants

Leading bank window featured giant cutout of new season hits and other displays were planted in furniture stores, beauty shops, etc. Bannered car was put out for street bally, roses given to women at opening matinee, and phone calls made to all local subscribers by cashiers. Menus were imprinted, special programs and novelty calendar heralds distributed, letter mailed to all leading civic and fraternal organizations. Drawing area was liberally billed and the city sniped with window cards.

Morrison's Motorcade Parades Through Towns

The testimonial in Dover, N. H., took the form of a "Fall Trade Week" wherein Mel Morrison at the Strand was able to round up 109 merchants to cooperate and from them secure nearly $1,000 to pay all expenses. Nothing was left undone to put this over, with all concerned reported highly pleased with the returns and ready to go again next year.

To stimulate travel from the drawing area, a parade of 115 bannered cars, trucks, sound truck, etc., was organized to make 14 surrounding localities with red-fire used to attract attention. Bus lines running into Dover were tied in to give half-fare rates during the "week." Also effective was a special newspaper supplement which was widely distributed by mail and house-to-house. Merchants gave prize slips and supplied over $400 in special prizes to patrons.

The sound truck was used around town to advertise Morrison's shows in addition to the general event and this slant was also carried out on cloth banners around the traffic lights at the main intersections. Many of the cooperating stores also planted banners on delivery trucks and all stores decorated with displays and window streamers. Imprinted arrows within a 15-mile radius also aided the drive.

Bread inserts, stamped grocery bags and other similar devices were employed, frequent broadcasts sold the big event and a p.a. system connected atop roofs through the main street broadcast the theatre attractions and the store activities.

Jubilee Week in Rutland Celebrates Moreau Drive

It was Jubilee Week at the Paramount, in Rutland, Vt., and Manager George Sargent, starting with "General Dies at Dawn," built up a Chinese atmosphere with lanterns and other appropriate background, these decorations interspersed with the display used for the "week." Ushers when seating patrons mentioned the coming attractions

FROM THE LOEW POLI DIVISION

Ads turned out by the Loew Theatres' admen in various sectors are for the best part of a high standard. The smart displays created for the houses in the New York area by the Doob-Emerling forces are long established and among other Loewmen doing a consistently effective job is Erle Wright, head adman of Harry Shaw's Poli-New England division. The advertisements reproduced on this page are representative of the general layout and readability that Wright aims for. From time to time, similar pages devoted to the handicraft of other top-line admen will be carried in the Round Table department for the information of the members.

Department Stores Aid Meyer on "Desperado"

Using national tie-ups to full advantage, Vic Meyer of the Orpheum Theatre, New Orleans, La., for "Gay Desperado," with leading department stores and specialty shops turning over their windows and counters to displays with strong billing. Largest store ran a 540 line cooperative ad featuring several angles of the picture.

Immediately following the Chesterfield-Martini broadcast, a 100 word announcement was made calling attention to the fact that the star could be seen in "The Gay Desperado" at the Orpheum. Distributors of the cigarettes carried 18x24 posters done in three colors. Special educational, civic and social groups were approached through a heavy direct-mail campaign with fine results.

Schools, factories, playgrounds, parks and the entire commercial section were canvassed through a special ballyhoo truck which covered the area for three days in advance playing Martini recordings. The truck carried large cut-outs of Martini, Carrillo and Ida Lupino topped off by intensive selling copy on the picture.

Furniture Promoted By Booth for Giveaway

Accompanying photo shows furniture suite promoted by Billings Booth, Babcock theatre, Wellsville, N. Y., only cost to the theatre being expense of 10,000 coupons which were distributed to folks both by the store and Booth. The theatre gave one coupon with every admission and the store one with every 50-cent purchase.

A display of art work was put in the lobby with spotlight on it and trailer was used announcing date of giveaway. Booth reports that business was great on night of giveaway and also stimulated the three-week period that coupons were distributed.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

If the Shoe Fits, Wear It Says Baker

A swell no-cost tieup was engineered by Johnny Baker, Hackensack Theatre, Hackensack, N. J., for "My Man Godfrey," shoe merchant donating ten pairs of shoes for lobby display with large card reading "can you put yourself in the shoes of lovely Carole Lombard, starring in, etc., etc.?" Shoes were awarded to women whose feet most closely approximated in size those of the star.

Further Moreau Week Campaigns

and cashiers spread the word via phone.

Special folder programs were used locally, in the drawing area and in all hotel rooms, many windows decorated, announcements made at all club meetings and notices at schools and in high school paper. Newspapers publicised the event and radio was also employed.

Special Matinees Campaign Wins Prize for Dandeneau

In Rockland, Me., at the Park, Manager L. J. Dandeneau found effective for his winning entry a number of special matinees, playing to over 200 children at each showing on "Captain January" and "Let's Sing Again." These extra shows he reports brought in a record business. Another winner was Dandeneau's Amateur Night during the week, these additional attractions being heavily plugged in advance.

Matinees were stressed with advertising at all schools in addition to the wide publicity given the testimonial drive and mention in the regular program and advertising.

Other Angles Covered By M. & P. Theatremen

At the Maine, in Portland, Manager John M. Divney, had his "week" announced over the p. a. system at popular Sunday football games and also stressed the entertainment in football program advertising. Street stunt that caught on took the form of personal notes about the show in unclaimed purses from the lost and found desk. Purses were dropped along the main streets.

On campaign for the Opera House, in Bangor, Me., Manager C. J. Russell, Jr., along with the Park and Bijou, other local M & P theatres used the line "Let's Go to the Movies Week." Lobby was especially decorated, strong newspaper campaign put on and 24-sheets extensively billed. As the picture was "Swingtime" Russell utilized the many available tiein angles to sell the "week" as well.

For the drive at the Central, Biddeford, Me., Manager H. J. Mulqueen planted three-column cut in his local paper showing old building that occupied site before the theatre was built alongside of shot of the house with new front and marquee as it looks today. Story to illustrate called attention to the Anniversary Week and detailed the recent improvements made and new equipment installed.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Stewart Awards Prizes For Best Story Ending

C. H. Stewart, Waco Theatre, Waco, Tex., for "Texas Rangers" ran a contest offering cash prizes to those submitting best original ending to unfinished picture story run in leaflets which were distributed at theatre.

Summonses to attend the picture were handed out, through tieup with grocer, tickets were given to each kid turning in two box tops of cereal, special Texas ranger on bannered horse covered streets during engagement.

ANTHONY ADVERSE
BEFORE IT OPENS AT THE

Leighton's "Adverse" Reading Marathon

Selling "Adverse" Around the Country

Doc Elliott, at Warner's Ohio Theatre in Canton for "Anthony Adverse" used a sidewalk broadcast a la vox pop style, with announcer approaching incoming patrons and querying them regarding the merits and expectations of the picture.

Large eight foot lobby piece was used with special insert space where playdate copy could be removed and changed weekly, various window displays were secured in leading department stores and all mirrors in five and ten were painted by theatre artist.

Down in Lancaster, Pa.

On opening day, Bert Leighton, Grand Theatre had two girls seated in front of theatre from 9 a.m. until opening time reading copies of the book (see photo), girls were later transferred to window of leading bookstore.

Announcements were made at all clubs, boys on bannered bicycles toured streets during engagement and radio station gave three minute announcements week ahead.

Ending at Pleasantville, N. J.

With Howard Baker, Rialto Theatre securing double truck co-op pages, center of which contained picture copy and playdates. Attractive window displays were planted, all nearby communities were posted with program window cards, programs, etc., and local florist contributed attractive floral lobby display with replica of boat.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Yesterday the weather man promised us a cold wave for today, and this time he hit it. If you have been a close student of Hick's Almanac you will recall that he sometimes hits it, too. There's nothing like being a good guesser; however, we miss it sometimes. We remember when we were a boy we pulled out of a hollow log what we thought was a rabbit by twisting a stick in his hide, but learned to our sorrow that Mr. Rabbit was a striped-back skunk, and mother made us change our clothes out in the cow barn. Since then we have concluded that one man's guess is about as good as another's, if not a little better. But then you know that the weather boys can't hit it every time. Changing of air currents often makes a difference. Well, anyhow, that's that and this cold wave reminds us that Old Man Winter is going to make this country a visit pretty soon, but before he gets here we want to go down and visit the boys in Oklahoma and Texas.

Whenever we think of Oklahoma we think of C. J. Hartman of Carnega and that boy Stettmund of Chandler, and a whole lot more of 'em, and when we think of Texas we think of Bob Smith of Mission, Shine Mason of McAllen and that golf hound (who always trims us), Zimmerman of San Marcos. Of course, there are a lot of things we think about 'em that we don't care to mention here. Anyway, we hope the boys down south will be looking for us with a pen and checkbook, and we hope that Bob Smith at Mission will have his fishing tackle ready.

Dear Gertie:

We have just come home from seeing the boys up in South Dakota. We hope you will excuse us, Gertie, for saying that women can't seem to agree upon anything. Some want a "permanent," some want a finger wave, some want a marcel and some want to get married, and you never can tell, Gertie, just what they do want, except that some of 'em want to knockhel out of hubby when he comes home full of personal liberty, and we don't blame 'em, either.

But speaking of personal liberty, Gertie, we believe in that doctrine. If a bunch of boys want to go out on Hallowe'en and mark up cars and pile brush on 'em, as they did ours last night, they ought to have a right to do it, for this is a free country and people ought to have their personal liberty; at least, that is what they said when we had prohibition. So hereafter, when you meet us on the street, Gertie, and we are full of personal liberty, don't give us the air like you thought we had fleas, but remember that we are asserting our manhood, just like all good American citizens ought to do.

And then there is another thing. When you and the other girls meet at Dorcus society and you determine who is going to get married and who is going to get a divorce and how much Mrs. Smith's last baby weighed, and you settle other weighty matters that are perplexing our nation, you can be assured of a duty well performed.

There is this about it, though: it's wasting one's time to argue with a woman. When she makes up her mind to do a thing she is going to do it regardless, but then she generally makes up her mind on the right side of the fence without any instructions from the men. We have observed this, Gertie, that ever since we adopted women's suffrage we have been going both ways for Sunday like a pup after a jackrabbit, but even so, just think what Adam would have done when he was pulling pussly out of the garden if Eve hadn't brought him some Rhode Island greenings and a pitcher of lemonade. But that's the way it is with these women: when they want to win an argument with a man, if they haven't any apples around the house they give him a slice of huckleberry pie and then hit him over the head with a chair and knock some sense into him. That's the reason some men have some sense.

Timidly yours.

P. S.—If your boy friend is working on that Shelterbelt and needs a few more dogs this dry weather, tell him to write us.

We presume we ought to stop right here and give you an opportunity to catch your breath, but we just got a check from H. J. Longaker up at Glenwood, Minnesota, for a renewal of his subscription to the Herald. When we were up there last summer H. J. was out to his summer home on the bank of a lake and he was sick, and we learned that Mrs. Longaker had her hands full trying to please that guy. H. J. told us about the big fish he had caught, some of 'em weighing 35 pounds in their sock feet, and Mrs. H. J. indicated by circling her finger that his wheels were out of balance, but when we received that check it was proof conclusive that she had brought him back to normal, and we were pleased to learn of that. Should you ever go and fish the Glenwood lake and not catch any, take H. J. out with you: he catches 'em any time of the year. Well, anyhow, we are glad H. J. is up and around again and we thank him for his renewal, and this ought to be a lesson to the rest of you boys.

Every once in a while we get a check from a film salesman and a request to have his subscription to the Herald renewed. Somehow the boys are beginning to have confidence in us. Elmer Huhnke, a film salesman for RKO, said he had, but maybe that's because he hasn't known us for over several years. We are going to renew it for him just to prove to him that all the stories they are telling about us are not true, not all of 'em. We wish the boys would cut out some of these stories: they might prove 'em.

We might have written some more, but now we know why Gertie hammered us so much to vote her ticket. She had us out on a limb and a bulldog at the foot of the tree to watch us. If she'd only gone down to the Dorcus meeting to tell the girls about Mrs. Smith's new baby, and if that bulldog had gone out and chased an alley cat up a telephone pole, we'd have come down. Oh, gosh! Gee whiz! Help! Help!

"Romeo" Three Days Tops Full Week of "Ziegfeld"

Box-office news of the last week uncovers outstanding results in the "Romeo and Juliet" roadshows, with several towns giving the Norma Shearer vehicle more business in three days than "The Great Ziegfeld," M-G-M's previous roadshow, received in a full week, the home office announced Saturday.

At the College Theater, New Haven, "Romeo and Juliet" in three days topped the previously successful full week engagement of "Ziegfeld" by $400. In Columbus, at the Broad Theater, "Romeo" in a three-day engagement likewise topped the full week business of "Ziegfeld's" road-showing. At York, Pa., "Romeo" did a third more business at the Strand than was done by "Ziegfeld."

THE LEGISLATIVE OUTLOOK

NATIONAL legislation addressed at the motion picture appears most probable and, in the opinion of some observers, inevitable, as a conspicuous activity of the next Congress.

It appears certain enough that business in general and many of the industries are to be in for attention, all possibly involving enactments that will have a bearing on the motion picture, in addition to such specific action as may be brought to bear.

This state of impendency calls for vigilance rather than alarm. The motion picture can not and probably should not take issue with the inevitable in the social and economic evolutions of the land. It can, however, consider well the maintenance of its relative position and seek to avoid special, discriminatory and experimental attentions.

There is significance in the detailed studies and ponderous reports on the motion picture industry which have been made under Federal auspices in the last several years. It is also no secret that in the minds of some persons of influence and meaning in Washngton there has been a thought that treatments of the screen, which by reason of its exhibitionary nature is a shining mark, could be made pioneering ground for approach to other and all industry.

As has often been observed on this page, the motion picture enjoys no such institutional status in social and legal tradition as the press. And yet it is not so very long ago that the newspaper publishers deemed it wise and necessary to have the doctrine of the freedom of the press strongly affirmed. Meanwhile the freedom of the screen, as evidencd by its many litigations in point, has at best never been much more than a contention, rather less than a fact. The screen's development as a form of publication has been continuously affected by its derivation from the theatre, which never in its centuries of history has remotely approached the distinguished reputability of function enjoyed by the press.

FOR the moment, at least, it seems likely that impending concerns of the screen with legislation will be more directly in the sector of trade practises and maybe labor relations, rather than with the old bugaboo of Federal censorship. To be sure it is not to be hoped that there will be no censorship agitations, because they are based on a meddling trait that we shall always have among us. More likely it will be found that exponents of censorship will tend to lend support and give color to measures that are ostensibly addressed only at trade practices.

Thanks mostly to the motion picture industry's own internal regulative attentions typified and instrumented by the Production Code, the screen faces the immediate future in the best status in the public mind that it has enjoyed in its forty years. Steadily since July of 1934 there has been a rise in public esteem, reported in dollars at the box office and recorded conspicuously in the press. In the continuous flow of newspaper comment that crosses this desk adverse comment on the motion picture as an institution is sensationally rare today, as uncommon in fact as friendly notices were in 1933. That condition of general friendly acceptance is an asset that can be expected to stand the industry in good stead in meeting issues that loom ahead.

The box office expedient of aligning the product with the standards and mores of the articulate, decent majority, is likely to prove an investment of effort of value in many directions.

IT is inescapable that a number of manifestations of the last year and the immediately current period should give occasion to some feelings of concern about the future status of the motion picture industry. That remarkable contract of last summer calling for newsreel distribution of certain pictures of WPA activities has had ample attention in these pages. Just now we turn to MOTION PICTURE DAILY of November 18 to discover a mighty state of indignation and threats of reprisals in the New York headquarters of the Social Security Board because three national circuits did not immediately throw open their screens to some short pictures telling the board's story. The rumblings about the organized industry's apathy toward "The Plough that Broke the Plains" and material of that ilk, have only recently subsided, likely to rise again with new product from the same sector.

The world tendency, as our foreign correspondents have ably recorded, is to deal with the screen as an instrument of government. It is painfully near accurate to say that only in the English speaking world does the motion picture importantly retain elements of the status of an independent medium and industry.

Among the media of expression the motion picture is the

This Week

Allied's "Model Law"

Allied States Association of Exhibitors is asking jail terms and heavy fines for officers and directors of producer-distributors who engage in exhibition.

See page 13 for draft of law which Allied is proposing in states.

Out Again

The customary story is out, again reaching the public prints, that James A. Farley, of President Roosevelt's political family, is to succeed Will H. Hays as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

And again the customary denial is made, this time by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, an MPPDA member.

Producers Take Over

The Producers' Association in Hollywood has answered widespread protests from exhibitors that broadcasts by film stars constitute "unfair competitions" by setting up a committee to consider proposed broadcasts and arbitrate concerning them with representatives of the radio networks and program sponsors. The first case to be submitted was a proposal by General Mills to conduct broadcasts from Hollywood sound stages. The plans were dropped after conference with the new committee.

Details of the plan are on page 17.

Paramount Studio Cheer

Barney Balaban, president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount Pictures, completed their first visit to the company's studios in Hollywood this week where they conferred with executives on studio problems and future product. As they entrained for New York, a joint statement was issued, in which it was said that the company was about to launch the most "imposing and ambitious production program in its history."

For details, see page 14.

New British Producer

The latest English motion picture producing organization to enter the American field appeared this week with the filing of incorporation certificates in Albany, N. Y., of British National of America, Ltd., affiliate of British National Pictures of England. The new company is headed by Lord Ragnor, who, likewise, is president of British National. Elmer Pearson, formerly with Pathe Exchange, Inc., is vice-president in charge of distribution. Other officers are Harold Berg and Joseph R. Fliesler.

The story is on page 40.

Merger Terms Opposed

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, last week, with the aid of his committee, effected a merger of the operators' union in New York and apparently brought an end to the disputes that had dotted the organizations' history. The exhibitors this week were reported dissatisfied with the amalgamation, especially those theatres which employ Allied men, since they probably will be forced to increase their booth wages 25 per cent.

A discussion of the situation is in the story on page 15.

20th-Fox Accepts

Twentieth Century-Fox officially has accepted the program of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for establishing fair trade practices and also machinery for adjudicating industry disputes between exhibitors and exchanges and among theatre owners in competition.

Fox's stand on the program is explained in a letter sent by Sidney Kent, president, to Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president. The letter appears on page 18.

RKO Reorganization

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, with total assets now set at $67,000,000, is about to emerge from receivership, a plan for reorganization having been filed on Monday.

The plan discloses the intention to merge all production and distribution subsidiaries into one new company: RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and provides for a capitalization of $33,000,000, from which creditors and security holders will be paid off. Operation of the two Radio City theatres will be returned to RKO.

RKO's reorganization plan is analyzed on page 55. The complete text starts on 70.

Mexican Censors Active

The new national censor board established by the Ministry of the Interior in Mexico this week started its official action by banning three European pictures which are charged with fostering espionage and containing anti-Mexican propaganda politically objectionable to the country. The new board includes a chairman, vice-chairman and secretary, a chief and sub-chief of department, one special official and 10 special agents.

Now that the board has started to function, motion pictures intended for release in Mexico's Federal District are faced with three censorship bodies, the national Federal board, the Federal District board and now the Confederation of Workers of Mexico, which, on Tuesday, also announced its intention of passing on pictures. A special target of the third board, it is reported, will be Fascist propaganda films, especially pictures of Hitler and Mussolini.

Record Profit Seen

That a record profit will be realized by Associated Talking Pictures, which figures indirectly in the Gaumont-British deal of John Maxwell, is expected in the City, which is London's Wall Street. It is suggested that ABP will continue its 12½ per cent dividend.

These and other details of the week's dedevelopment in England are recorded on page 40.

WPA Competition Ebbing

A reduction in the ranks of the Works Progress Administration Theatre Project is definitely expected within two weeks despite an announcement that the consolidation of several production units in New York and the closing of theatres in other parts of the country are only for purposes of "reorganization." Official announcement of the cuts has not been made but Holger Cahill, national director of the art project, said this week that cuts will be made in all the white collar projects.

The status of the federal theatre is explained on page 14.

Admissions Up

The trend toward increased admission prices, which first became pronounced last summer, is continuing into the winter season. Exhibitors have raised their box office scales in five cities in widely separated parts of the country. Records for attendance and gross business continue to be broken in unusual numbers by the new product.

The story is on page 63.

Peace in St. Louis

With the approval by Referee Hope of the recent sale of the Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., to the Bondholders' Protective Committee of the Central Properties Corporation in St. Louis, the board of directors of the St. Louis Amusement Company has been reorganized, and the 10-year management contract with Fanchon and Marco interests has been formally signed.

The Bondholders' Protective Committee owns 52 per cent of the St. Louis Amusement Company stock through purchases of the Skouras Brothers assets, while Fanchon and Marco came into possession of 42 per cent of the neighborhood circuit's stock when it made peace with Warner Brothers in New York last spring. Fanchon and Marco now has 28 theatres in the St. Louis territory, the largest group in eastern Missouri.

Ostrer and G-B

Arrival of Isidore Ostrer, president of Gaumont British, in New York from London, this week shed little light on the tangled relations between GB, John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures and Joseph and Nicholas Schenck of 20th Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Ostrer denied that Mr. Maxwell has or will ever have control of GB. Cables from London contradict this point, and report Mr. Ostrer's real purpose in coming to America is to persuade 20th Century-Fox to sell its GB interest to Mr. Maxwell for £1,000,000.

Mr. Ostrer's interesting statements are quoted on page 27.

Hays' Conferences

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., who left Rome for Paris Wednesday, spent the last 10 days in the Italian capital in constant collaboration with American Ambassador William Phillips in negotiations with Italian authorities. Meetings included a reception by Premier Mussolini. Mr. Hays was endeavoring to solve a number of difficulties confronting American distributors in Italy, chief of which was the refusal to allow them to take more than 13,000,000 lire revenue out of the country.

Before leaving Rome, Mr. Hays again commented on his audience with Pope Pius XI last week and said, "The Pope was intimately acquainted with the development of the Production Code and its operation and the cooperation of American industry with educational, religious and social groups. He was interested in the promotion of the usefulness of motion pictures in international amity and in the field of education. He expressed the opinion that as the most comprehensive entertainment service in the work, the influence and value of the motion picture were unlimited and its responsibility commensurately as great."

Silver Jubilee

A special trailer which compresses into a few hundred feet of film the history of twenty-five years in the motion picture industry from the showing of the first feature length film in America down to the present date will be released over the world during the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee, beginning in January. The trailer will contain scenes from approximately fifty features beginning with "Queen Elizabeth," which was distributed by Mr. Zukor in 1912. It will contain scenes of such screen personalities as Sarah Bernhardt, Dustin Farnum, Marguerite Clark and other early players, and close with stars of today.

Other developments in the Silver Jubilee program appear on page 14.

Wilcox View

On the eve of sailing for home, Herbert Wilcox, British producer, announcing plans for release of five pictures through Gaumont-British exchanges in America, remarked that: "The success of GB in achievinging its wide distribution of British product is both a tribute to that organization and a proof that the American showman is ready to accept British pictures without prejudice, asking only that they be box office attractions. The American market is wide open to the British producer if he will make suitable pictures."

Italian Problem Solved

The United States embassy in Rome, the United Press reported Wednesday, reached an accord with the Italian foreign office regarding the importation of American films. As a result American distributors withdrew their decision to close their Italian offices.

It was understood that Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Ciano agreed as follows:

1. There shall be a "substantial" increase in the amount of earnings which American distributors may be allowed to export from Italy.
2. The remainder of unexported earnings can be expended in Italy as distributors desire and not necessarily invested in Italian film production.
3. Americans in Italy will be given the right to import an unlimited number of films instead of being limited by quotas as formerly.

Universal Music

Universal Pictures and J. J. Robbins, representing the Robbins Music Corporation and Leo Feist, Inc., signed a twenty-year contract Wednesday under the terms of which the motion picture company will have the huge catalogue of both music houses at its disposal for screen use.

The contract also states that all original songs written for Universal pictures shall be handled by the Robbins companies. In connection with the deal Universal has organized Universal Music Corporation, with R. H. Cochrane as president, J. Cheever Cowdin, vice-president; Willard S. McKay, secretary, and Charles B. Paine, treasurer.

Studio Turnover

Hollywood studios participated generally in a preholiday production spurt that took thirteen pictures from camera to cutting room and placed fifteen others upon the stages, films of at least potential importance appearing on both lists.

Titles, personnel and sponsors of the pictures completed and started are given by Gus McCarthy on page 41.

Financial Gains

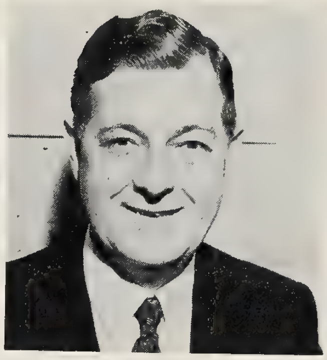
Loew's, Inc., reported a net profit of $11,076,822 for 1936. Warner Brothers Pictures listed a net of $3,177,312 for the year. Dividends were declared by American Seating and General Electric. A third quarter earnings report from Paramount listed $2,013,764 as the balance transferred to surplus for the period.

Financial reports appear on pages 35, 36 and 38.

This Week in Pictures

MID-SEASON MEETING. A plane-load of Warner executives who represented the home office at a mid-season conference in Chicago on sales policies. Shown are Major Albert Warner, Gradwell L. Sears, S. Charles Einfeld, Carl Leserman, Norman H. Moray, Robert Mochrie, Herbert J. Ochs and Arthur Sachson.

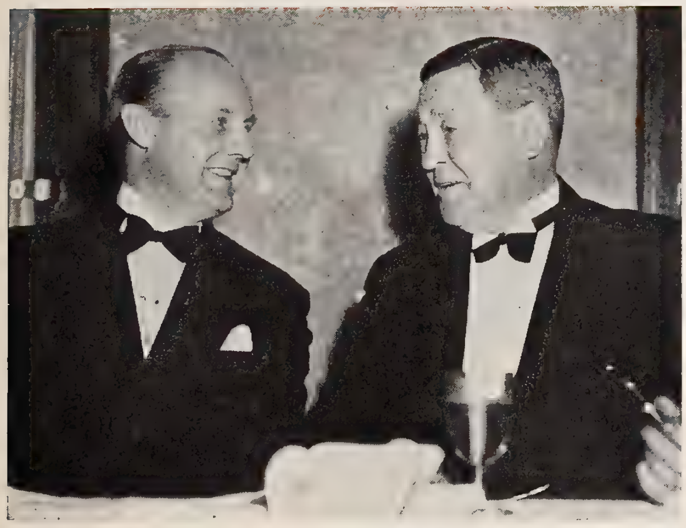
ENTERTAIN PRESS. But here concentrating on themselves at Radio's "Winterset" reception to New York critics, are M. H. Aylesworth, RKO chairman; Burgess Meredith and Pandro Berman.



PROMOTED. Herman Landwehr, assistant to the late J. K. Emmet, who succeeds him as general manager of the Capitol in New York.

AT WESTERN PREMIERE (Left). David O. Selznick, president of Selznick International, producer of United Artists' "Garden of Allah," arrives, with Madeleine Carroll, at the premiere in Hollywood.

DISCUSS YEAR'S PLANS. Ross Federal Service executives in convention at Chicago. Front: H. A. Ross, president; A. R. Frawley, Walter I. Brown, R. W. Criddle, Frank Miske. Rear: C. Charles, Charles Corradini, Murray K. Ross, Burt Jolley, Harry Schiffrin, W. O. Redden. Mr. Ross reported a rapid rise in theatre business.



BANQUET BANTER. At Paramount's Australian convention, held in Sydney. Left, John E. Kennebeck, Australian manager, and Sir Victor Wilson, president of distributor organization.

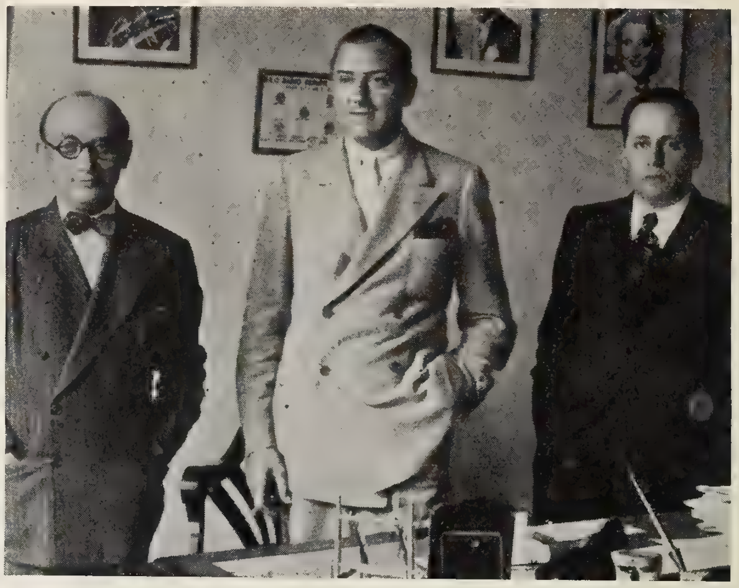
STARRED. Sylvia Sidney (right) as she appears in the lead of GB's "The Hidden Power," recently completed for early release.

CONFER ON COAST. Columbia's annual mid-season conference on product and sales at the studio brought these home office executives planing westward the other day, led by Jack Cohn, vice president (right). The others shown are Joseph Seidelman, foreign manager; Nate Spingold, and Abe Montague, general sales manager.

ELECTED OFFICERS. Of Variety Post of American Legion, formed in Cleveland. Harry Goldstein, Isidore Schmertz (chief barker, Cleveland Variety Club), Abraham Schwartz, James Suhr, Jack Persky, James M. Saunders, Harry E. Long, David Lederman, Rev. McInturf, chaplain; David Miller, and Holbrook Bissell.

HOLIDAY. At Palm Springs for Mae Clarke (right). 'Twas Miss Clarke whom James Cagney once grapefruited with great celebrity. Now she's opposite him in Grand National's "Great Guy."

NAUTICAL AND NICE. At any rate, this deft marine shows how those fellows with cameras get around. For instance, in the lake country of Hollywood's uplands, with Universal's company making "Three Smart Girls," who—Barbara Read, Deanna Durbin and Nan Grey—are apparently on deck at this very moment, along with Director Henry Koster.



TAKE NEW POSTS. Ben Y. Cammack (center), general manager of the South American Division of the RKO Export Corporation, with two of his staff who have been re-assigned. Nat Liebeskind (left) has become managing director for the Argentine, while Bruno Cheli succeeds him as general manager in Brazil.

A NAGGY GAG. Amusing (above) those eminent comedians, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. The mule displaying all this toothy appreciation of the Hal Roach funsters is "Dinah," whom they sponsor in their new Roach-MGM feature comedy, "Way Out West."

MAKING DEBUT. (Left) The seven Loria brothers, whom Educational is bringing to the screen in a two-reel musical titled "Amuse Yourself." The lads' rhumba music is featured in the production, the second of Jefferson Machamer's "Gags and Girls" series.

ALLIED ASKS JAIL TERMS FOR PRODUCER-EXHIBITORS

Bill Prepared for 44 Legislatures to Divorce Companies from Theatres Provides One Year Sentences; $10,000 Fines

State laws providing jail terms and heavy fines for each individual officer and director of any producing or distributing company operating a theatre have been determined by Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors as the means for forcing producer-distributors out of exhibition.

The organization, according to authentic sources, is secretly laying the groundwork for introduction, in each of the 44 state legislatures meeting this winter, of a bill to prevent the ownership, control or operation of motion picture theatres by producers or distributors of motion pictures.

The strategy, as explained in a confidential memorandum "to Allied leaders" in the field, from national headquarters at Washington, is for local Allied agents to concentrate especially on new legislators elected last November 3rd to persuade them to support such a measure. A preliminary draft of a model law is offered these legislators as a basis for the Congressman's preparation of his own bill, the model outlining exactly what Allied is seeking.

Recognizing that the best time to commit legislators to proposed legislation is while they are candidates, Abram Fern Myers, chairman of the board and general counsel of Allied, drafted the model bill on October 19th and rushed it to Allied agents in the various states so that they could get commitments from state legislative candidates in the heat of their campaigns.

Action will be concentrated in each state prior to the convening of its legislature.

W. A. (Al) Steffes, of Minneapolis, is chairman of Allied's special "Defense Committee" which will conduct the campaign, his lieutenants including Sidney Samuelson, New Jersey; James Ritter, Detroit; Col. H. A. Cole, Dallas, and Henry M. Richey, Detroit. Mr. Ritter is treasurer of the special "defense" fund of $250,000 which Allied has been seeking to collect from its members since its national convention in Cleveland last June, where the foregoing committee members and Allied's officers committed the organization to a state legislative program aimed at the ousting of producer-distributors from exhibition—a program described as: "Down with the flags of the big corporations."

Allied for months has been unusually quiet, preoccupied, it was supposed in organized distributor-exhibitor quarters, with gathering of the "war chest," an activity in which have been engaged Nathan Yamins, of Massachusetts, Allied's president; Mr. Steffes, as vice president; Mr. Richey, as national secretary, and Herman Blum, of Baltimore, treasurer, together with Mr. Myers and the members of the defense committee.

Their combined efforts to date have resulted in collection of $15,000 in cash and some $20,000 in "pledges," representing promissory notes, "I.O.U.'s" and such, a total of $35,000 in sight toward the ultimate goal of $250,000, which Allied promised its members at the Cleveland convention it would use to purchase "outstanding legal talents" in the fight to effect complete divestment of distributors from circuits.

The basic objective in the fight which Allied says it is about to wage is to abolish "unfair and oppressive methods by which the affiliated circuits are enlarging and extending their monopoly." Its plans for a renewal of last year's efforts to have the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking law enacted in Congress is still another matter.

The law which General Counsel Myers has drafted for Allied in the instance of the anti-affiliated circuit movement would, under individual state provisions, make it a misdemeanor for any person, firm or corporation to operate a theatre in which any producer or distributor has an interest, or for any producer or distributor to operate or have any interest in a theatre. The pro-

Text of Allied's Bill for Jailing All Producer-Distributors in Exhibition

PRELIMINARY DRAFT

An Act to prevent the ownership, control or operation of motion picture theatres by producers or distributors of motion picture films

Sec. 1. On and after one year from the enactment hereof it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to operate in this State any motion picture theatre or other place at which motion pictures are publicly exhibited without first having filed with the Secretary of State* a sworn statement to the effect that such theatre or other place of entertainment is not owned, controlled, operated or managed by or affiliated with any producer, distributor, seller, lessor or licensor of motion picture films, and, further, that no producer, distributor, seller, lessor or licensor of motion picture films has any interest, direct or indirect, in such theatre or other place of entertainment, through stock ownership or otherwise.

Sec. 2. The operation of any motion picture theatre or other place publicly exhibiting motion pictures on or after the effective date of this Act without having first filed a sworn statement as required by Section 1, or the filing of any such sworn statement containing any false or misleading statement of fact, shall constitute a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $10,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. Whenever a corporation shall violate this Act, such violation shall be deemed to be also that of the individual directors, officers, or agents of such corporation who have authorized, ordered, done or had knowledge of any of the acts or omissions constituting in whole or in part such violations, and such violation shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor of any such director, officer or agent he shall be punished by fine or imprisonment or both as in this Section provided.

Sec. 3. Any person, firm or corporation which shall continue to operate a motion picture theatre or other place publicly exhibiting motion pictures after the effective date of this Act in which any producer or distributor of motion picture films has any interest direct or indirect as forbidden by Section 1, as well as the producer or distributor retaining such unlawful interest in said motion picture theatre or other place of entertainment, shall forfeit the right further to carry on the business of an exhibitor of motion pictures or a producer or distributor of motion picture films, as the case may be, in this State, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to institute and prosecute proceedings in quo warranto against offending persons, firms or corporations to give effect to this Section.

EBBING OF COMPETITION BY U. S. SHOWS IS SEEN

Twenty Per Cent Reduction in WPA White Collar Projects Coming in Two Weeks

First indications of an ebbing of the flow of United States Government competition with motion picture exhibitors and with the established legitimate stage appeared in reports this week that the Federal Theatre Project of the Works Progress Administration, sponsor of productions which have been playing in direct opposition to other entertainment facilities in cities throughout the country, will suffer drastic reductions in the near future.

A reduction of 20 per cent in the personnel of the WPA white collar projects, including the federal theatre, will be made within two weeks, it was learned this week, in spite of statements by administrators in New York that the announced "reorganization" of the theatre project would not result in any reduction. The cuts are believed to be in line with a plan to reduce drastically the WPA rolls in the nation.

Holger Cahill, national director of the WPA art project, definitely confirmed the cut, rumored for some time, in an address before a mass meeting of art project workers in New York. In response to a specific question regarding the possibility of lay-offs in the white collar projects, Mr. Cahill said:

"That announcement cannot come from me. It must come from Colonel Somervell and it would be inappropriate for me to say anything about it before Colonel Somervell. Of course, cuts are coming. There is no question about it." Colonel Brehon B. Somervell is WPA administrator in New York.

Reorganizing Announced

Last week Philip Barber, regional director of the theatre project for New York, announced a reorganization of the project. He said that no reductions would be made, but that the personnel, which numbers more than 5,000 actors, technical and clerical workers, will be used to better advantage. According to the announcement the plans included a merger of the popular price unit, the Living Newspaper, the Experimental theatre, the Brooklyn-Queens unit, the Bronx-Manhattan unit, and the Suitcase theatre. Later Mr. Barber said that between 350 and 500 clerical employees of the project might lose their posts as a result of the consolidation, but he added that no writers, directors, actors or artists would be displaced.

At the art project meeting Mr. Cahill said that he had vigorously fought the cuts in Washington and that the national directors of the other projects had done likewise. They are known to fear sharp repercussions from the project workers, and for the most part they are sympathetic. Evidence that the national directors refused to have any part in the cuts was also seen in Mr. Cahill's assertion that state WPA directors would announce the cuts.

The reductions in the theatre and other white-collar projects partially confirm stories that the WPA rolls on all projects in the nation will be reduced from 15 to 20 per cent. The reductions in New York, it is reported, will mean the dropping of 50,000 workers from the WPA payroll.

WPA VAUDEVILLE HAS RADIO DEBUT

"Professional Parade," the new WPA radio program, has received a cordial reception from broadcast critics in its first two performances. The program is broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company blue network from 9 to 10 p.m. every Wednesday night. Radio columnists agreed that the acts, most of them staged by former vaudeville performers, were better than average. According to plans completed by NBC and WPA officials, regular vaudeville units comprising acts heard on the broadcasts, will be sent on tour weekly.

Announcement of the cuts in the theatre project follows extensive exploitation of Sinclair Lewis' dramatized novel, "It Can't Happen Here," which was produced simultaneously by 19 companies in 17 cities. At the theatre project headquarters in New York this week it was announced that the play has entered the hit class despite the lukewarm reception of the critics.

Playing to Capacity

At the Adelphi theatre in New York only two seats have been vacant since the premiere on October 27th. The Yiddish version at the Biltmore theatre has fared less well, playing to about 56 per cent of capacity. Playing to a combined audience of 11,535 in the second week of their runs the shows grossed $4,100 at a 55-cent top.

Elsewhere throughout the country the productions are continuing except in Cleveland where closing of the theatre project for "reorganization" resulted in picketing of the local WPA headquarters. In explanation of the closing, Miss Lois Fletcher, field representative, is quoted as saying, "In the long run of 'It Can't Happen Here' too many hours were used. Under the project, the actors are supposed to work only 103 hours a month. In that production they used nearly double that number of hours and those hours must be made up. We will reopen the theatre in Cleveland as soon as reorganization is completed. That should be in less than a month."

Columbia Appoints Three

Walter Sterzer has been appointed Columbia booker in Salt Lake City, Harold Green Utah representative and Kenneth Lloyd salesman in Montana.

Balaban, Griffis Issue Statement After Coast Trip

"The most imposing and ambitious production program in the history of Paramount Pictures" now is under way in the company's Hollywood studio, it was announced this week in a statement by Barney Balaban, president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee.

Mr. Balaban and Mr. Griffis made the statement just before leaving Hollywood for New York after a 10-day visit—their first—at the studio devoted to viewing newly completed pictures, studying plans for productions soon to go into work and conferring with studio executives and players. Both returned to the home office Wednesday.

Coincident with the statement, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, announced that negotiations are nearing completion for Cecil B. DeMille to remain with the company as a producer and director and that George Raft had resumed his contract.

"We are delighted with conditions in the studio," said Mr. Balaban, "and highly pleased at the marvelous changes brought about since its direction was taken over by Mr. Zukor."

Plans are also now completed whereby 12 additional features have been added to the list of 11, previously announced, for release during the four-month period dedicated to the Paramount International Silver Jubilee Drive for Mr. Zukor, according to Neil W. Agnew, vice-president and general sales maanger. Among the 12 added features, making a total of 23 for the 17-week sales drive, are: a Harold Lloyd production, untitled; a B. P. Schulberg production, "Doctor's Diary"; "Happiness Preferred," with Warren William and Karen Morley; "Internes Can't Take Money," with John Howard, Sir Guy Standing and Lloyd Nolan; "Betting Fever," "The Clock Ticks On," "The Kid from Paradise," "Every Day's a Holiday," "Saturday Nights Free," "Too Young to Die," "Murder Goes to College" and "Street of Chance."

Meanwhile, plans for the Zukor Silver Jubilee are proceeding. A committee of Hollywood notables from Paramount and other studios this week decided on a dinner to be given in Mr. Zukor's honor on December 3rd at the Trocadero. Darryl F. Zanuck will be chairman and George Jessel toastmaster. Sponsors include Frank Capra, Claudette Colbert, Louis B. Mayer, Jesse L. Lasky, Mary Pickford and Cecil B. DeMille. The Paramount Pictures trade mark, which contains 24 stars, will be increased by one, making a total of 25 stars to commemorate Mr. Zukor's 25th anniversary, it was also decided.

Some 40 salesmen and exchange personnel are gathered in San Francisco this week for the company's northern California sales meeting. Shirley Ross, one of the sponsors for the jubilee drive, is also present, flying on to Portland next week for a similar meeting. She will visit all coast exchanges.

Cuba is also joining in the celebration, having designated this week as "Paramount Week" and the entire Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the island is participating.

youngest of all save the radio, which same in its youth and vulnerability is in an unenviable plight of subjection. Right at hand is the example afforded in the project by which one hour, a large fraction of the earning day, goes over to "made work" under Federal auspices for unemployed entertainers on the nation's biggest broadcasting system.

An important radio executive, who must be nameless here, remarked over his demitasse the other day: "The radio business just has to go along with official notions from Washington. You see there is no radio system or even independent station in the country which does not now want, or anticipate wanting, some extension of capacity, some more favorable wave length, or at least to maintain some present element of status. The result is a policy of saying 'yes' to every pressure. There's no use in fighting, or even arguing, when you can't win. The radio can't win because it is only a voice that can be stilled. Any notion of going to the public would be about as futile as that effort that movies made years ago to get the issues of screen censorship on the screen in Pennsylvania."

MEANWHILE, on the side of temperate consideration of the several manifestations with reference to the motion picture, it is probably accurate to say that they represent not so much a unified, crystallized attitude of officialdom toward the screen as they do an effort, without very much ratiocination, toward getting the story in hand across, the job done, by ardent young men come rather newly into the field of doing things in A Big Way. These young men have inherited a notion of the limitations of what they might do with the press, but they have no motion picture inhibitions. That, to be sure, points for the screen a sector of special vigilance, and maybe educational endeavor in its own behalf, an assertion of rights, which are not peculiarly and selfishly its own, but rather the rights of its customers for which it is the agent.

After all the best friend of the motion picture is the box office public.

And after that one may venture that the organized industry, meaning of course the producer-distributor-exhibitor machine, in its public and political relations is likely to find that the numerically strong array of independent exhibitors and independent circuits are to assume a position, unheralded but real, of the greatest importance. The motion picture as the concern of a large and nation wide array of showmen will stand in rather better case before law makers, locally responsible, than if it were to be known as the exclusive property of a number of gentlemen located in New York and Hollywood. And that, incidentally, brings the thought that it might not be amiss for the motion picture industry in these days of vast corporations to let it be known that it is responsible to a considerable number of shareholders scattered about the land.

The motion picture may be everybody's business, but it and its public will be best served by those who know how.

Allied Bill Asks Jail Terms, Fines

ducer or distributor could not own, control, operate or manage any theatre, or have any interest, direct or indirect.

Penalties are a fine of $10,000 and one year in jail for violation.

Liable to prosecution would be the individual directors, officers or agents of the producer or distributor who have "authorized, ordered, done or had knowledge" of the producer or distributor's participation in exhibition after one year following enactment of the law.

Furthermore, if any exhibitor, exhibition company, firm or individual permits either the continuance or new participation of a producer or distributor in his theatres, then that exhibitor is liable under the law and shall forfeit the right to carry on the business of an exhibitor of motion pictures in that state.

Producers or distributors found guilty would be prohibited also of doing business as a producer or distributor.

The law would compel any and all of the large producer-distributors either to sell their theatres in those states where the law is enacted, or, failing that, abandon the properties, under penalty of jail terms for its officers and directors.

The ownership, operation and management of thousands of America's theatres would be at stake, not only through the direct interest now held by the four large producer-distributor-circuit companies now operating but also in the cases of independent owners and operators in whose properties, principally independent circuits, any of the large companies may have an indirect interest, regardless of how trivial. Paramount, for instance, has partnership interests with some of the most representative independent circuits.

On the other hand, the majors, in retaliation, could cause chaos in the independents' ranks by secretly buying even a small block of stock in any independent theatre, thus making the independent majority owner liable for operating a property in which such major has such interest.

For example, M. B. Horwitz, an independent, owns and operates six independent theatres in Cleveland, where Loew operates in competition. Mr. Horwitz, who contributed $1,500 to Allied's "war chest," could be put out of business under the bill, if passed in its present form, merely by Loew purchasing a few shares of Horwitz Circuit stock, some of which is available to the Cleveland public.

Koenig Joins MGM As New Studio, Production Manager

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officially announced this week that William Koenig, who last week resigned as general manager of Universal's studio in Hollywood, had been appointed as its studio and production manager. He succeeds Fred Pelton, who resigned early this month.

The studio also revealed that William Anthony McGuire and Norman Krasna had been signed to new producer-writer contracts.

Operator Merger Terms Protested

Several members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York are understood to be dissatisfied with the terms of the Local 306-Allied operator merger which was ordered last week through Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, it was learned this week. The labor situation was discussed at a meeting of the ITOA at the Hotel Astor, but John Manheimer, secretary, would not comment on it.

Exhibitors now using Allied operators will be forced to raise their booth prices 25 per cent, it was said, and because of the 10-year contracts the ITOA has with Allied, no exhibitor can install non-union operators. The Allied contracts with local exhibitors are part of the deal with Local 306.

Meanwhile, theatre union activities elsewhere included the refusal of Local 71, I.A.T.S.E., in Kansas City, to do anything about contracts with first run theatres until they come up for renewal August 31, 1937. First run houses have been operating on the basis of contracts that expired in 1933.

Exhibitors revised the agreement with Local 119, I.A.T.S.E., for all houses in Detroit of 1,000 to 1,500 seats, granting a $5 increase in the weekly scale and the Milwaukee County exhibitors have agreed to a two and one-half per cent increase in wages for members of Local 164 there. The Saenger Amusement Company in New Orleans has also reached an agreement with the stationary engineers for union men in the Saenger, Tudor and Globe.

RADIO'S PLAN FOR BROADCAST RIGHTS TO FILL STAR ROSTER DIES ABORNING

Ford's Hope to Have All MGM Stars and General Mills' Even More Ambitious Plan Stopped by Contracts

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

Hollywood producers and studios will not—can not because of contractual complexities—sell their stars en bloc exclusively to a single national advertiser, or group of advertisers, for radio broadcasting. Ford Motor Company had hoped to accomplish such a coup with MGM for all its Culver City stars, and General Mills even had expected to effect such an agreement with all Hollywood producers for all important stars who would be committed to sell flour on the air, by the bag, bushel or barrel.

The impression has been gaining ground both on Hollywood Boulevard and Broadway, because of certain outward manifestations, that the Hollywood producers and the ambitious radio broadcasters and their advertising clients are negotiating an entirely new affiliation in the matter of Hollywood film stars' appearances on commercial broadcasts, about which exhibitors for a year or more have been complaining.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was mentioned as a party to negotiations with Henry Ford's motor car company, via the William Morris talent agency, for a blanket contract giving Ford the exclusive rights to radio appearances of MGM's starring and featured player roster. Ford reputedly had offered Metro $25,000 a week for an hour's broadcast with Metro performers.

Immediately the stars themselves, to say nothing of interested observers, are reported to have questioned the right of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer or any other company to give or sell their broadcasting services "exclusively" to any radio advertiser.

Organized exhibitors, too, immediately became interested in such a proposition, protesting on the grounds of unfair competition to their box offices, even before its consummation. Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM, heard in this connection from the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, from the Independent Theatres of Ohio, and from organized owners in Minneapolis, among others.

Typical of the nature of the complaint was that voiced by the Ohio organization, which telegraphed Mr. Schenck, "On behalf of every member of this organization who was compelled to buy a large number of your features on a percentage basis to be played on Sunday, we vigorously protest the consummation of any deal between your company and the Ford Motor Company which will permit your stars to broadcast on Sunday nights."

Player Contracts Decide

Now the dream of radio broadcasting to invade studios directly as proposed by Ford in conjunction with MGM and by General Mills with all producers has foundered on the rocky reef of player contracts and their protective provisos, stipulations and provisions. For once the player, who appears to have values to sell to the public other than his special screen talent, won a victory without ever having to lift a hand or beseech the courts to protect his rights.

PRICES ADVANCED IN CHICAGO LOOP

Prices in Chicago's Loop vaudeville theatres have taken an upward swing recently. The Oriental last weekend raised its prices for the evening shows from 40 cents to 55, the State-Lake from 35 in the evening to a 40 top. The Chicago and Palace theatres raised the "early bird" matinee prices ten cents and moved the time for that period up an hour from opening until 1:00 p.m. instead of 2:00 p.m.

The Roosevelt and United Artists theatres recently went to a 75 cent top for the regular evening show.

Business has not suffered from the increases, theatre men report.

As particularly proposed by the proponents of the Ford idea and somewhat more nebulously by those still seeking entry for General Mills, the plan would take radio broadcast auditors right into the heart of production and every nook and corner of the studios for an intimate, if via absent treatment, personal visit. MGM entertained the Ford idea until the other day when it discovered what a maze of expensive legal entanglements into which the stunt might lead the company. General Mills received comparatively short shift.

Restrictive Clauses

When a player, unless he's soundly advised, signs a regular "Standard Contract" or one of the special "printed-form" contracts which each company provides, he commits himself on all matters. Practically all special studio contracts have clauses calling for a player's services for one picture, for a series or for an indeterminate number of pictures to be made over a period of years. Also there are clauses in this type of contract providing that the player signing will, at the producer's bidding, make personal appearances, or go into legitimate stage shows, or participate in radio broadcasts, or make radio transcriptions, appear on television or any other new scientific medium that may be devised, or hold himself in willing readiness to participate in any exploitation feature the producer may contemplate.

Legally, if Robert Taylor was signed to a "form-printed" contract, for example, MGM might compel him to dig a ditch. Or if Jeanette MacDonald was similarly signed, she might be required to take in washing if some studio executive got the idea that such a stunt would be beneficial to the exploitation of a particular picture in which she appeared. MGM might have the legal right to do so, but it would probably not.

The producers are well aware that the imposed-upon player, also within his legal rights, could "kick" subsequent production around and make such a venture a costly thing. The producers have trouble enough getting most of their stars to pose for such necessary items as a photograph-gallery sitting.

The contracts signed by such stars as Fred Astaire, Jack Benny, Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Dick Powell, James Melton, Bob Burns, Nelson Eddy, Burns and Allen, Frances Langford, and all others who are considered "top notchers" in pictures and radio, take ample care that all the individual's rights in both fields are fully protected.

Players' Contracts Surrounded by Protective Clauses; Talent Must Get Permission of Company Before Broadcasting

In common practise the manner in which stars participate in radio takes two forms. In both cases it is required that the film personality going on the air first must obtain the permission of the company with which he is under contract to make pictures. It is not recorded that this permission has ever been denied except when broadcasts interfered with production. The first manner is the commercially sponsored broadcast for which the picture personality engaged receives a remuneration entirely apart from that provided in his film contract. The Lux, Jello, Camel Caravan, Hollywood Hotel and Texaco programs are illustrative. Second method is the guest star appearance which is a matter of courtesy to the person extending the invitation and for which no money is supposed to be paid. The Louella Parsons, Ed and Elza Schallert Hollywood interviews are familiar examples.

Personality His Contribution

The picture personality appearing on a commercially sponsored broadcast considers his contributions to the program from an artistic and financial viewpoint. Those taking part in interviews look upon their participation as a cooperative goodwill gesture. The producer usually considers both as good publicity for his players and pictures. The commercial sponsor doesn't feel that he is entering into competition with theatres inasmuch as he considers that his program is only on the air once at a definite hour while the exhibitor on a specific attraction has all the afternoon and evening hours of every day from any where from two days to a week to draw patrons into his theatre.

Exactly how the Ford-MGM plan blew up may be cited in a hypothetical case. Assume that Greta Garbo, whose picture contract is chockful of stipulations and conditions, either previously or subsequently had signed a broadcast contract calling for her exclusive radio services to No-Seeds Orange Juice. Then assume that MGM signed the broadcast deal with Ford. The instant No-Seeds put Garbo's voice on the air, either by interview or by picking it up on the set, that would be the signal for an avalanche of attorneys representing the other advertiser, its agency, its radio station and broadcast chain to come thundering down on the studio. The potential ensuing legal battle would make the Blue Eagle turmoil look like an old ladies' sewing circle debate. The case might become actual were Crosby, Bennie or Astaire involved in the episode.

Precedent Seen Near

It is reported that a case which may possibly set a precedent in establishing potential conflicting rights of a picture company and a radio sponsor to a screen-radio personality's services may shortly be brought into the open. It involves Warner Brothers, Dick Powell and Campbell Soup. The inside is that Warners, claiming priority rights to Powell, because of its earlier picture contract with him, will seek

PRODUCERS ESTABLISH REGULATION OF FILM STARS' RADIO BROADCASTS

Special Committee Set Up by Association in Hollywood to Handle Problems Affecting Production and Exhibition

Producers, after ten months, finally have answered the protests of exhibitors everywhere against the "unfair competition" of film stars' broadcasts by setting up machinery in Hollywood for regulating such appearances.

Almost every organized exhibitor group in the country, including city, state and national groups of theatre owners, has gone on record in vigorous opposition to the practice of Hollywood stars appearing frequently in important national commercial broadcasts, which, the theatre owners claim, is direct competition to the box office and frequently even competes with the very pictures made by the stars who are broadcasting.

The industry's machinery for the regulation of its radio broadcasting problems affecting both production and exhibition is now functioning under a special radio committee set up by the Producers' Association in Hollywood. The committee's administration is based on cooperative efforts by the motion picture and broadcasting interests.

Establishment of the committee came after home office executives in New York had said they were convinced that no code could be drawn to govern all cases involving a clash of interests between the film and radio industries and that individual solutions must be sought for individual cases.

Indications even now are that only the most general understandings and agreements affecting the participation of film stars in radio activities can be worked out between the two industries. Specific broadcasting programs will continue to present specific problems which no underlying agreement can be made to cover, it is said. Every broadcast of a film program which suggests a competitive aspect of serious proportions will be discussed and dealt with by coast radio officials, representing both the networks and program sponsors, and the studio officials involved, who will be free to consult with any branch of the industry which also might be affected by the broadcasts contemplated.

The Producers' Association has refused to divulge the names of members of its special radio committee but it is learned that the entire membership is composed of producers. The committee went into action for the first time last week when it met with representatives of broadcasting and agency interests involved in the proposal by General Mills to broadcast directly from sound stages in Hollywood, the programs to be sponsored by the flour milling company.

As a result of the meeting the negotiations were reported to have been dropped when the objections raised by the industry committee were accepted by the broadcasting interests as insurmountable. It had been planned, before the meeting, to initiate the broadcasts at once.

All future deals for broadcasting involving industry interests of the same importance likewise will be submitted to the scrutiny of the producers' committee, it was said officially. The regulatory system thus installed is regarded by producers and New York home office executives as all that can be attempted of a practical nature to govern the problem.

Studio officials are agreed that talent cannot be kept off the air, but the programs in which film stars are to appear, by mutual cooperation of the interests involved, can be regulated so as to minimize competition with theatres, lessen the interference with production schedules caused by radio rehearsals and broadcasts by working stars, and insure against danger to the star's reputation and popularity by proper supervision of the work on the air. These, obviously, will be the primary objectives of the producers' committee.

FRED WEHRENBERG MARKS ANNIVERSARY

Fred Wehrenberg, owner of the Cinderella, Melba, Michigan and Virginia theatres in South St. Louis and for several years president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, will celebrate the 30th anniversary of his entrance into the exhibition field next week.

Back in 1906 Mr. Wehrenberg was in the grocery business in South St. Louis. He became interested in motion pictures and opened a nickelodeon in a small store building on Cherokee street which seated 89 persons.

A. W. Loasby Dies; 20th-Fox Director

Arthur W. Loasby, vice-president and director of National Distillers' Products Corporation and a member of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, died Tuesday at a private hospital in Connecticut after a brief illness. Mr. Loasby, who was 60 years old, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Adena Loasby, a son, Richard P. Loasby, and a daughter, Mrs. Hudson B. Lemkau.

Funeral services were to be held Friday at 2:30 P. M. from his residence, 168 Gates Avenue, Montclair, N. J., with burial in Mt. Hebron Cemetery, Montclair.

H. Manheim has been appointed publicity director at the Republic studios in Hollywood. Jack Hardy remains with the organization as Mr. Manheim's assistant.

Ford and Mills' Plans Defeated

to prevent the player from renewing with Campbell.

Despite the fact that the Ford-MGM scheme died aborning, neither radio nor Hollywood production executives seem to have any idea of abandoning the hopes for some kind of closer mutually beneficial cooperation.

After MGM's successful "Born to Dance" preview-Hollywood hotel broadcast, three other leads are being contemplated in Hollywood. It is known that 20th Century-Fox is negotiating a deal with the Columbia chain for an exchange of film footage advertising for airtime picture ballyhoo. The plan, which essentially is the same as that advanced by Ford agencies to MGM, but in which all legal entanglements would be ironed out in advance and care taken that no stars' toes would be stepped on, would bring radio right into production on the lot. Warner's is considering a similar scheme, which has for its purpose not only the advance exploitation of productions in work, but also to put the resources of all its contract talent at the disposal of its revitalized Hollywood KFWB and proposed national network. Additionally Fox West Coast Theatres is working out a deal with the Mutual System to cover the air exploitation of picture programs in the theatres of four coast cities in exchange for screen advertising.

Sweeping Deal Fails

Presenting one of the most sweeping deals in radio, Ford was prepared to launch the MGM series early in January with indications it would replace its Sunday night program of concert players and symphonic music which runs from 9 to 10 P. M. Eastern Standard Time through a 94-station outlet over the CBS system.

The plan had its origin with Abe Lastfogel, coast general manager of the William Morris Agency, who approached and sold it to N. W. Ayer and Son, Inc., advertising agency for Ford. The agency, in turn, sold it to its client and M-G-M then was approached with the proposition. It ties in also with the most significant effort to date on the part of the William Morris office to invade the radio talent agency field in a move designed to establish for that organization as important a spot in radio as it once occupied in the field of vaudeville.

The Proposed Program

The proposed hourly program would have divided itself into dramatizations and condensations of current and coming Metro attractions, the first to be a radio version of "Parnell" with Joan Crawford and Clark Gable essaying the leads. The remainder of each broadcast would have been musical, concentrating on past, present and future songs from Metro attractions and the catalogue of the Robbins Music Company, which M-G-M controls. Pete Smith, now in charge of short subjects for the studio, had been mentioned for the master-of-ceremonies.

General Mills is expected to negotiate with individual studios for rights to broadcasts direct from sound stages. The Producers' Association notified Bagley, Horton and Hoyt, Chicago advertising agency representing General Mills, that it is free to seek deals with individual studios.

20th-FOX ACCEPTS MPTOA'S PLAN FOR ESTABLISHING FAIR PRACTICES

Willing to Grant Unrestricted 10 Per Cent Cancellation on All-Product Contracts; Favors Social Conciliation Boards

Indicates Unwillingness to Abolish Score Charge Except Under Certain Conditions; Cites Stand on Uniform Contract

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation has joined Universal Pictures Corporation in accepting the program advanced by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on behalf of fair trade practices governing relations between distributors and exhibitors and for establishing conciliation courts for adjudicating interindustry disputes. The six other large distributors have yet to be heard from, the MPTOA expecting approval from at least four more—Columbia, Paramount, RKO and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

With minor exceptions, Fox's acceptance is essentially on the same basis as Universal's. Fox, however, does not appear willing to abolish the score charge basis levied on exhibitors, except where the company is forced to do so by exhibitors who have strong buying power and who as "a matter of individual policy" refuse to permit any distributor from exacting score charges separate from rentals.

"We believe that the general acceptance of most of the MPTOA proposals by Sidney Kent, for Twentieth Century-Fox, is a definite step in the right direction and will afford immediate benefits to independent exhibitors," commented Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, who released for publication the following letter of acceptance from Mr. Kent:

Dear Mr. Kuykendall:

I have considered with John D. Clark, our general manager of distribution, the proposals suggested by the board of directors and the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America as outlined in your bulletin. Taking up the proposals in the order which they appear in your bulletin, our position is as follows:

1. Twentieth Century-Fox is willing to grant an unrestricted 10 per cent cancellation on all contracts where the exhibitor has purchased all of the Twentieth Century-Fox product offered for sale at any one time. This does not include foreign or outside producers' subjects. We do feel, however, that there should be one restriction, i. e., notice of cancellation of any picture to be effective must be given to us within a reasonable period, say 10 days, after the mailing by us of notice of availability.

We feel that our position on this cancellation provision should be satisfactory to you. The only material difference from your proposal is that we restrict the privilege of cancellation to the situations where the exhibitor has bought, not all of our product, but all of the product offered to him at any one time. In most cases where an exhibitor cannot be expected to use all of our product a selective contract is the usual result of the negotiations.

Favors Local Boards

2. We favor the establishment of Local Conciliation Boards with a central appeals board located in New York City. This is a matter, however, that will require discussion and careful working out of details. We cannot expect members of the local boards and the appeals board to give up any substantial amount of their time to the hearings of minor matters and therefore the machinery of the boards and their jurisdiction are matters for further discussion. We will be glad to meet with you and representatives of other companies as soon as possible with the hope and intention of agreeing upon a workable plan.

3. Our experience has been that there can be no such thing as a uniform protection and clearance, based not only on decisions of the federal courts, but also upon the fact that protection and clearance are of necessity a part of the negotiation and sale and are matters of individual arrangement between the exhibitor and the distributor.

Against Double Bills

4. We feel that overbuying is a matter that is more in the hands of exhibitors than distributors. We are against overbuying, but the exhibitor is in possession of the facts regarding his buy, whereas our knowledge as a distributor is necessarily limited and we do not feel that we can request an exhibitor to let us know, or advise us, whose and what pictures he has purchased.

In this connection, we note under this heading you have apparently included an objection to double features. We are against double features, but feel that the matter of double billing is a matter that can best be corrected by the exhibitors themselves. If it is an evil it will eventually cure itself.

5. Of course, we should like to see an end to all unfair competition between exhibitors, but it is hardly a matter which could be the subject of any agreement on our part as a distributor; it is a matter to be worked out by the exhibitors themselves.

6. We are in accord with you on non-theatrical exhibitions and we do not and will not license a picture to any non-theatrical account where there is even a remote possibility of unfair competition with a motion picture theatre.

Cites Stand on Universal Contract

7. Regarding your proposal in favor of a uniform contract: Our position is too well known—I personally some years ago having put in many months with representatives of exhibitors endeavoring to work out a uniform contract—to need further explanation. However, in view of various court decisions, I question very much whether or not we can become a party to a uniform contract. We would, however, be in favor of any contract that will be clear, not ambiguous, and as short as the agreements would permit.

As far as our own contract is concerned, we are willing to make as short a contract with any exhibitor as is practical, but we question the practicability of having an exhibitor sign a short contract which incorporates by reference an entirely different contract of greater length.

8. The practice of exacting score charges has been for a number of years a matter of individual policy and will continue to be so as far as this company is concerned.

9. We will not pledge ourselves not to demand preferred playing time on percentage pictures. However, we will not be obnoxious about it, but will base our demands for preferred playing time on the quality of our product.

10. It has never been the practice of this company to force shorts with features. As a practical matter of distribution they are sold at the same time, but under separate agreements. We do feel that if our feature product is desired by an exhibitor we are justified in insisting upon the same percentage of his short subject playing time as we receive of his feature playing time.

We are in sympathy with your efforts to eliminate some of the matters that have been the cause of disputes between exhibitors and distributors and assure you of our desire to cooperate to that end in every possible way. Mr. Clark will be glad to discuss with you more in detail at any time the matters outlined in this letter.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) S. R. Kent.

KORDA LOWER COST FILMS THROUGH LION

Alexander Korda is expected to start a program of production of comparatively inexpensive motion pictures before long. These would not carry the London Films trademark. It is understood that release will be through British Lion.

MPPDA Invited To Attend Meet

A communication requesting that an accredited representative of the motion picture industry be designated to attend the December 10-11 meetings of the Council for Industrial Progress at Washington was received in New York this week by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. The meetings have been called to further plans for wage and hour and trade practice agreements for industries.

Indications are that the communication will be forwarded to Will H. Hays, president, in Europe, without action by the MPPDA in advance of the receipt of instructions from Mr. Hays. It is believed likely, however, that the industry will have a representative at the Washington sessions, if only as an observer.

The primary function of the sessions next month will be to receive reports from committees named by the Council for Industrial Progress and to act upon them.

The Independent Theatre Owners' Association in New York is "not interested" in the meetings, an official of the organization said, as he revealed no invitation to attend had been received at his office. It was also revealed that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association and Allied States Exhibitor Association had failed to receive any invitations to attend the gatherings.

OSTRER ARRIVES IN NEW YORK WITH DENIAL OF SALE OF GB CONTROL

Statement by English Executive That Maxwell Will Not Attain Control of Gaumont Causes Surprise in London

Denials that the Ostrer brothers intend to relinquish their controlling interest in Gaumont British, that John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures has acquired other than a minority stockholders' interest in G-B through his purchase of 240,000 "B" shares in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, that Mr. Maxwell holds an option on the Ostrer's 5,100 shares of "A" stock in M&B, or that such an option was part of the sale of the "B" stock, were made by Isidore Ostrer, president of G-B, on his arrival in New York from London this week.

Publication of Mr. Ostrer's statements brought expressions of surprise from those who have followed the intricate course of the GB negotiations and reports of strong criticism by the principals in London. It has been definitely reported in England that Mr. Maxwell has bought both the "A" and the "B" shares from the Ostrers. The "A" shares, it is said, have been bought but not transferred, with Mr. Maxwell holding a five year option for the transfer, allowing that time for a settlement between the Ostrers and 20th Century - Fox.

One of the provisions of the joint ownership of M&B, holding company which owns a majority interest in G-B, by the Ostrers and the American company, was that neither could sell their interest without the consent of the other. The sale to Mr. Maxwell cannot be contested by Twentieth Century-Fox, however, until the transfer is actually made.

Sale of Shares Called Mission

A cable from Bruce Allan, of the London office of Motion Picture Herald, received the day after publication of the interview with Mr. Ostrer, reported that the real mission of the G-B president in America is to persuade Joseph Schenck and Sidney R. Kent of Twentieth Century-Fox to sell that company's 4,900 "A" shares in M&B to Mr. Maxwell. Reports in London are that Mr. Ostrer will tell Mr. Schenck and Mr. Kent that publication of the consolidated balance sheet of G-B will reveal heavy losses because of overvaluation of negative values and will cause a sharp decline in all G-B stock values. It is said that he will use this bad position to persuade Twentieth Century-Fox to sell before the value of their holdings crashes.

It is understood that Mr. Maxwell is offering about £1,000,000 ($5,000,000) for the Fox shares in M&B.

Mr. Ostrer's statement that he and his brothers have not considered selling their G-B interests to anyone was most emphatic. "The Ostrers intend to maintain control of G-B and no one else will have it," he said when interviewed on the Normandie by a representative of Motion Picture Daily.

THEATRE BIDS ADIEU TO ITS COMPETITOR

The Cosmo theatre in Merrill, Wis., bade farewell to its competition in a two column by three inch newspaper advertisement last week and diplomatically told the new operators what it expected of them as follows:

"Cosmo theatre wishes to express appreciation of the fine business relationship which has endured between the Badger and Cosmo theatres the past eighteen years. . . . Never at any time has the Badger theatre used any but the fairest of competitive methods. Welcome to our city Northland Amusement Company."

The Cosmo and the Badger, the latter now being operated by the Northland Amusement Company, Minneapolis, are the only two theatres in the town of 8,500 residents.

"We don't intend to sell control," he added. "The Ostrers are in the film business to stay. I don't think, personally, that we will sell our 'A' shares in Metropolis and Bradford Trust."

The G-B president's interpretation of Mr. Maxwell's present position in that company was startlingly unlike the status given the ABP executive in recent cables from London on the situation. These cables have assumed that Mr. Maxwell eventually will have complete control of G-B and, in fact, already holds an important voice in its affairs, particularly the financial situation which resulted after the G-B board adjourned its annual meeting without issuing a complete financial statement and without declaring a dividend.

"He is a minority stockholder like anyone else," Mr. Ostrer told interviewers. "He has 240,000 of 1,000,000 outstanding 'B' shares: does not have a single vote and is not a director in either G-B or M&B."

Asked whether his trip was for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Schenck and Mr. Kent on a possible sale of the Ostrer "A" holdings to Twentieth Century-Fox, Mr. Ostrer said that this was not the case.

"The trip really is for the purpose of getting the complete views of Mr. Schenck and Mr. Kent, purely a vis-a-vis on the Twentieth Century-Fox association with G-B," he said. "I am satisfied that Twentieth Century-Fox is going to hold its stock in our company and that it has no intention whatsoever of selling."

Denies Consolidation Plan

Returning to the status of Mr. Maxwell in G-B, Mr. Ostrer denied that ABP and G-B will be consolidated as a result of the transfer of the 240,000 "B" shares in M&B.

"There will be no merger," he said in response to a question on this point.

Cables Report Mission Here Is to Persuade 20th Century - Fox to Sell "A" Shares to ABP President

Amplifying his statement that he and his brothers will not sell their G-B interests, Mr. Ostrer said that there is no possibility that Mr. Maxwell will ever control G-B. "I can't conceive of him getting control of the company; we will not sell our stock to anyone," he said.

There is no intention of discontinuing international operations in G-B pictures, Mr. Ostrer said in reply to questioning as to whether or not such a plan was discussed at the recent stockholders' meeting. He had previously said that the reason the dividend was passed this fall was because "we have not taken in any revenue from the American market."

At the home offices of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer it was learned this week that Nicholas Schenck will go through with the transaction to purchase half of the Twentieth Century-Fox interest in M&B. This transaction was part of the original agreement with Mr. Ostrer, which, if it had been consummated, would have resulted in triple ownership of G-B by the Ostrers, Twentieth Century-Fox and MGM.

Maurice Ostrer sailed this week from London on the Queen Mary for New York, but, as in the instance of his brother's departure, no statement as to the purpose of his visit was made by G-B officials. It is believed that he will participate in any discussions his brother may hold with Mr. Schenck and Mr. Kent.

Phil Goldstone Sues Eastman on 16mm. Films

Phil Goldstone and Phil Goldstone Productions have filed suit in the supreme court at Los Angeles against Eastman Kodak Company, Eastman Kodak Stores and Kodascope Library of Los Angeles, seeking an injunction restraining the further use of two 16mm. pictures of which Mr. Goldstone claims exclusive rights. An accounting of profits is also asked as well as additional damages of $50,000.

Mr. Goldstone claims ownership rights to "Hearts of Humanity" and "Phantom Express" which were designed for home entertainment.

Artists Donate $75,250 For Federation Support

A total of $75,250 was contributed by stage, screen and radio stars to the campaign of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City at a meeting held last weekend at the Hotel Astor under the auspices of the Artists' Division, a section of the Amusement Division of the Federation which, under the chairmanship of Albert Warner and David Bernstein, has undertaken to raise a quota of $200,000 to support the work of the 91 institutions affiliated with the Federation.

Hazeltine, RCA Trial Is Ended; Argue March 2d

Trial in the patent infringement action in which the Hazeltine Corporation of Hoboken, N. J., charges RCA Manufacturing Company and the RCA Victor Company with infringing on the automatic volume control patent for radio receivers, was brought to a close before Judge John P. Nields in the United States District Court at Wilmington, Del., last Friday.

The court set March 2 as the date for final argument and Jan. 4 for filing of briefs by Hazeltine, Feb. 8 for RCA, and Feb. 23 for reply briefs.

Prof. Allan Hazeltine, professor of physical mathematics at the Stevens Institute of Technology, was the final witness as Hazeltine closed its case. Called in rebuttal, Prof. Hazeltine disagreed with the previous testimony of Frank N. Waterman, Summit, N. J., consultant engineer, a witness for RCA.

Disputes Technical Testimony

Prof. Hazeltine disagreed with Waterman's statement that it makes no difference so far as automatic volume control is concerned whether or not the circuit through which energy is supplied to the input detector tube is more selective than signal amplifying circuits. Function of the automatic volume control is to keep down the volume of the received signal to comfortable limits both while the receiver is in tune with such signal and also while it is tuned in and out.

Harold A. Wheeler, inventor of the Wheeler automatic volume control for radio receivers, was the star witness for the Hazeltine company preceding Prof. Hazeltine on the stand. Mr. Wheeler testified concerning a number of notations in a notebook in which he marked the progress of his invention.

Reading from the diary, Mr. Wheeler said he planned to build a monoloud set which was another name by which he referred to automatic volume control, monoloud meant audiostat, Dec. 13, 1925. In January, 1926, Mr. Wheeler said, he first demonstrated the automatic volume control circuit.

Demonstrating the volume control of his receiver to associates of his at Johns Hopkins University, Mr. Wheeler testified he demonstrated the ability of the receiver to absolutely entirely counteract the effect of fading on the sound from the speaker. When tuning, Mr. Wheeler said, he observed the meter and used it in order to facilitate tuning the receiver accurately. The point of accurate tuning Mr. Wheeler demonstrated to them was the condition of the greatest deflection of the meter needle from its normal position. This point happened to be the point of minimum current in the meter. In other words, when the receiver was tuned in action, automatic volume control was at maximum in reducing current through the meter.

22 Patents Read into Record

Twenty-two patents of Mr. Wheeler assigned to the Hazeltine company were read into the record.

William A. MacDonald, vice-president and chief engineer of Hazeltine Corporation, testified concerning his experience in the radio field. Mr. MacDonald told the court he had been associated with a radio scientist in France during the war in the laboratory known as the Division of Research and Inspection in the Signal Corps.

KANSAS CITY HAS TRIPLE FEATURES

Kansas City had its full share of double features and now theatre men there are finding themselves faced with the problem of showing three pictures on one program. The move was started November 1 by E. S. Young at the Roanoke, and, after three weeks, he inaugurated the policy at his other theatre, the Central. On the same day, J. F. Rigney offered three pictures for the price of one to give Kansas City, for the first time, more than one theatre offering triple features.

Gehring Appointed Division Director

Following the company's policy of promotion from within the ranks, John D. Clark, general manager of distribution of Twentieth Century-Fox, Tuesday announced the appointment of William C. Gehring as manager of a newly created central division of the sales force. Other changes and promotions also were announced.

The division headed by Mr. Gehring, who for the past two years has been Kent Drive leader, will include the Twentieth Century-Fox offices in Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Milwaukee, Omaha, Indianapolis and the Dominion of Canada. William Sussman will continue as manager of the eastern division, and William J. Kupper as manager of the western division.

The increase in volume of the company's sales during the past year made it necessary to set up a new division, Mr. Clark said. Prior to creation of the central division, the United States and Canada territory was divided into only the eastern and western divisions.

Succeeding Mr. Gehring as Drive Leader will be J. P. O'Loghlin, now district manager in Canada. He will take up his duties immediately following a meeting of district managers in Kansas City next February.

At the same time, Mr. Clark announced that Moe Levy, formerly in charge of the Minneapolis office, will be district manager of the territory comprising Minneapolis, Omaha and Des Moines in the Central Division.

The district managers convention will be attended by the home office executive force and assistants, and by district managers Edgar Moss, T. H. Bailey, George A. Roberts, J. P. O'Loghlin, Ward E. Scott, Harry G. Ballance, Herman Wobber and Moe A. Levy, in addition to Clyde W. Eckhardt, Lester Sturm, J. H. Lorentz and George Landis.

Mr. Clark also announced the resignation of R. A. Higdon, formerly in charge of the Oklahoma office, who will be succeeded by Charles Clark, now sales maanger at New Orleans.

Eastern exchanges of Twentieth Century-Fox this week will begin Bill Sussman Week, in honor of the company's eastern division sales manager.

Cardinal Praises Decency Legion; New Pledge Set

Pope Pius XI in Rome has heard a report from his Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Pacelli, praising the net results of the Legion of Decency in America.

Cardinal Pacelli, on his return to the Vatican from a visit to the United States, told the Osservatore Romana, official newspaper of the Holy See, that a great majority of motion picture producers in this country now have bound themselves to observe a high standard in production.

Meanwhile, from the Cincinnati headquarters of Archbishop John T. McNicholas, head of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, word came that December 13th has been determined as the date for the renewal by all Catholics of their annual Legion of Decency pledge to continue their stand against immoral pictures.

An attempt to embroil the Legion of Decency in a political controversy was made the other day when the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, headed by Samuel Untermyer, New York lawyer, released to the press a statement saying his Anti-Nazis had requested the Decency Legion to condemn all Nazi-made and pro-Nazi films in its "moral estimates of current motion pictures."

Said Mr. Untermyer's organization: "It is anticipated that if the request is acceded to, more than 15,000,000 Catholics in the United States will thus become active in supporting the League's boycott of Nazi Germany."

Of 14 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, nine were approved for general patronage, four for adults and one was condemned. The classification follows.

*Class A-*1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Can This Be Dixie," "Conflict," "Fiat Voluntas Dei" (Italian), "Gun Ranger," "Love On The Run," "North of Nome," "The Plot Thickens," "Wanted, Jane Turner," "Wild Brian Kent." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Lady From Nowhere," "Love in Exile," "Reunion," "Wenn Der Hahn Kraeht" (German. Class C, Condemned: "Les Amours de Toni" (French).

J. P. Normanly Is Elected Universal Vice-President

J. P. Normanly was elected a vice-president of Universal Monday and is automatically given a place on the company's board of directors by this move.

Mr. Normanly was recently elevated to the position of general manager in charge of finances.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of Universal, and Garretson Dulin, director and head of Dulin and Company, financial house in New York, expect to finish their production conferences at the studio with Charles R. Rogers and return to New York late this week.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THE TRIALS and tribulations of a theatre manager are many.

Late Sunday evening, long beyond a reasonable hour, a loud knocking was heard somewhere in the balcony of the Sixth Street theatre, at Coshocton, Ohio. Manager Harry Bodie was called by some rather startled members of the service staff, and no sooner had he arrived on the scene than came the same disturbing, and even louder knocks.

Mr. Bodie was in a quandary—at least. He felt certain that his theatre wasn't haunted, although many a ghost of forgotten "flops" which died in the house could easily have come back. And he knew that Halloween pranksters had had all their fun weeks before. Nor was there any necessity of staging a ghost-walking publicity stunt in the very theatre where "The General Died at Dawn" was in the act of unreeling.

KNOCK—KNOCK—came the noise again. Mr. Bodie looked heavenward, probably for protection. There, on the top step of the fire escape platform leading from the balcony exit, he saw a figure, in dark clothes, and cane.

"What are you doing up there," trembled Mr. Bodie.

No answer.

"Come down from up there," he commanded, half hoping that his demand would be ignored.

Then, slowly, very slowly, step by step, the figure descended. When he reached the light rays of Bodie's flash light he stood out as an aged, white-bearded stranger.

"What in the world were you doing up there in the dark," asked Mr. Bodie, still timid, "and why were you knocking on that door with your cane?"

"Well," sputtered the old gent, "this afternoon I rented a second-story room some place in this town, and I've been since six o'clock tonight trying to find it again!"

The American motion picture, principally through its travel reels, has variously been most generous to the Japanese pearl industry, describing, at no charge, the crafty manner and means employed by the Japs to cultivate pearls in the shell. Overlooked, apparently, by our screen compilers of odd things in far places, is the neatest Japanese pearl trick of all time, right on our own front doorstep. New York's best drug stores, for one, are selling small tin cans containing made-in-Japan oysters, a two-dollar bill buying a can of three oysters and the possibility that the purchaser may find a pearl in one of the marine bivalve mollusks of the Avicula Margaritifera.

The next time the wise-cracking press talks about the idiosyncrasies of Hollywood producers we're going to refer them to Leonard Lyons' story of the noted newspaper publisher who decided he wanted a new desk decoration for his California home. He ordered a unique combination of inkwell-humidor made from an elephant's hooves. An underling was delegated to buy a whole, live elephant—the publisher can afford it—have the animal killed, and the hooves removed. Every circus and zoo in America was contacted, without success. The publisher learned that even he could not buy an elephant in this country for the purpose of killing it, even if he wanted to make elephant steaks for a California barbecue, much less use the animal's hooves for an inkwell.

And then there's the Hollywood story about the producer who called in his press agent and stooges and demanded to know the details of all the rumors reported to be going the rounds about their certain star. "I'll tell you the exact facts," volunteered the press agent. But he was interrupted gruffly by the boss. "Never mind the facts—I don't want them," bellowed the producer, "I just want the rumors."

ULRIC (YIC) WILLIAMS, son and aide of I. P. (Put) Williams, owner of the Delphus theatre at Carthage, Missouri, was on Film Row in Kansas City the other afternoon with George Williams, a brother and also an aide at the Delphus with Yic and Put. (Mrs. Williams, mother of George and Yic, and wife of Put, is also an aide at the Delphus—she takes the tickets).

The Williams boys don't get to Kansas City often, but when they do the story of Yic's fish-hound is always revived.

About a dozen years ago, when Tulsa, Oklahoma, was building Spavinaw Lake to create a Tulsa water supply, Yic operated a small movie show at Spavinaw, for about 18 months. There was not much work connected with the house, and much of the time Yic spent down at the blacksmith shop swopping whoppers with the local boys.

It all started in a mild way, but competition among the whopper swoppers became keen, and before long Yic's fish hound, as he told the boys, was producing bass for breakfast, crappie for lunch, and catfish for dinner. One of the swoppers beat that one with a bigger whopper, so Yic went on to tell how he only recently had sharpened his fish hound's dog tooth, and now the dog was cleaning the fish before he brought them home. The boys at the blacksmith's wondered how the hound could stay under water for two hours running, but Yic had an answer for that, too. Finally Yic retired an undefeated champion of whopper swopping when he described the battle between his fish hound and an eel at the bottom of the lake. The foxy eel was too much for the hound, and took him, says Yic.

W. P. (Senator) Bernfield, United Artists exploiteer in the midwest, whose vociferousness gets him frequent mention in this department, returned the other morning to his home in Kansas City from a trip to the Rocky Mountain regions. He brought back with him four broken box office records for "The Gay Desperado," and a new assortment of dialect stories, for which he is famed on film row there.

One of the tales concerns an old customer of a clothing merchant, who spied a suit in the window that appealed to him, and so went in to price it. "For this fine suit I will not ask you $150," said the merchant. "I will not ask you $100. I will not even ask $50. To you, my friend, I make the price a gift at $30." The customer tried on the suit, found that it fit him perfectly, and then said: "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you just $15 for this suit." "Sold!" shouted the clothier. "I like to do business this way—no chiseling!!!"

The new "alliance" which radio has arbitrarily effected between radio and the motion picture gives eligibility to Bill Corum's radio story of a cub newspaper reporter who had been assigned to fill a full column for a hurry-up edition. As the deadline approached, he could not think up a line. It was his big chance, and he was about to fail, when, in a panic, he clipped an Arthur Brisbane column from the competitive Hearst papers, and wrote above it: "What does Brisbane mean by this?" Then with the sweep of a great and conquering journalist, he tossed the manuscript on his city editor's desk.

P. S. The city editor tossed the manuscript and the cub in the ashcan.

EXHIBITORS AND PUBLIC PROTESTING McLAGLEN'S "ARMY" IN HOLLYWOOD

Says He's Heard That His Pictures Have Been Met with Egg Bombardments in Several Cities Because of Troop

Theatre owners and public are assailing Victor McLaglen, Hollywood star of British origin, for his open leadership and continued development of a military organization in the motion picture capital, to "fight for America."

Mr. McLaglen's "fighting regiment" already consists of a cavalry force, a motorcycle unit, nursing and medical corps, and now an air force is being added.

He conceded to Associated Press that his "Light Horse Troops" in Hollywood have aroused a lot of bad feeling among theatregoers. "People have been circulating chain letters, urging that my films be boycotted," he said, and continued, "I understand that in some cities the screens were rotten-egged when my pictures appeared. They've written to the producers, demanding that I be taken out of pictures."

One of the first organized exhibitor protests appeared in the form of a resolution passed by Allied Theatres of Connecticut, Inc. condemning Mr. McLaglen's "militaristic activities."

Allied wrote its disapproval to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, declaring that its members as buyers of motion pictures, including Mr. McLaglen's films, were entirely out of sympathy with any such private militaristic group; and that its conception of the American idea, whose opponents the Light Horse Troops propose to fight, might become "a political subterfuge as dangerously expressed by a few maniacs during our recent presidential election."

Allied petitioned Mr. Hays that its members also felt that Mr. McLaglen's regiment might fulminate class and race prejudice, and that it was unfair to exhibitors and to motion picture fans for McLaglen to exploit the popularity of his name, for which, Allied said, both exhibitors and the public were responsible. Mr. Hays was urged to prevail upon the actor to dissociate himself from the group.

Victor McLaglen, now 50, son of the Bishop of Clermont, in South Africa, is working for Radio Pictures, in "The Coast Patrol," in Hollywood, where he only recently finished "The Magnificent Brute," for Universal. His performance in "The Informer" for RKO last year won the highest actor award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Previously, he had appeared in "Professional Soldier" and "Under Two Flags," for Twentieth Century-Fox. In all, Mr. McLaglen has appeared in some 50 features since his first, "The Call of the Road," in London, shortly after the World War. He was a star in "Beau Geste," "What Price Glory" and "The Cockeyed World," among others.

"BIGGER AND BETTER" AIR PROGRAM SLOGAN

Reminiscent of the "bigger and better" era of film production is the current status of radio programming with Columbia's Hollywood studios offering Paul Muni in an ether version of "The Story of Louis Pasteur" written for 23 speaking parts, claimed as a record to date. Screen talent, monetary beneficiary of the trend, anticipates a period of keen competition between the major broadcasting circuits and asks no questions, hopeful, if not confident, that program impresarios will remember "better" as the word that proved of primary importance in the precedent.

"Organized to Fight"

The actor, who has been described as the "hard-boiled soldier of the films," and "a burly actor who scorns machine-gun tripods and holds the heavy weapons himself as he mows down his screen enemies," had this to say to Associated Press concerning his "Light Horse Troops":

"Sure, we're organized to fight. We consider an enemy anything opposed to the American idea, whether it's an enemy outside or inside these borders. If that includes the Communists in this country, why, we're organized to fight them, too."

However, he said the original purpose of his group was not militaristic.

"Nor is it, primarily, today," he added. "It's no more militaristic in intent than any fraternal organization."

The Light Horse was organized three years ago. Mr. McLaglen, its commander-in-chief, said the nucleus of the group was a number of Scotch, Irish and English war veterans who had become American citizens "and were singin' the praises of their adopted country."

50 Planes at Disposal

Several days ago the air force unit was organized to become a part of the troops.

Branches have been formed in Long Beach and San Diego, with a private field in San Diego. This branch of the troop has 50 privately owned planes at its disposal and 120 men enlisted. It is under the command of Captain William Gage, a World war flier, aided by Captain Grant Stone and Major George Sprade, the actor said.

"The sole purpose is to keep regular aviators in training and encourage the enlistment of young men interested in aviation," Mr. McLaglen explained. "In time of war, or any emergency, we can be counted upon as a government unit."

The whole group, he said, is self-supporting and non-profit.

"We're not financed by any secret Fascists," Mr. McLaglen laughed. "We pay our way by $1-a-month dues and the sports events we stage."

Fifty Private Planes Added to Force Organized to "Fight for America"; Connecticut Allied Protests to Will Hays

The star's sport center stadium in Hollywood is the scene for professional football, baseball, rodeos and midget auto racing. Mr. McLaglen said the revenues that accrue from these activities paid the expenses of the group.

"I'm aware that this work has aroused a lot of feeling," he said. "People who think I'm a Fascist have been circulating chain letters, urging that my films be boycotted.

"To those people, all I can say is that we have no political affiliations whatsoever and no political ideas. We have no entrance-restrictions based on political views or religious creeds.

"We formed a group of men who should be ready and trained to be of service to this government in time of need. There's nothing 'dangerous' about that. Canada has scores of similar groups."

The Light Horse, which the actor said he hoped to extend throughout California, is the only organization of its kind in the State. A rival group, known as the Hollywood Hussars, was formed two years ago but has disbanded.

GB Gets Five Herbert Wilcox Pictures for United States

Contracts were signed this week between Gaumont-British and Herbert Wilcox whereby G-B will distribute five feature productions in the United States. Mr. Wilcox has been in America for several weeks negotiating for the release of his pictures.

Mr. Wilcox said that the five pictures ready to be sold to the American market include "Limelight," "The Three Maxims," "This Will Make You Whistle," "London Melody" and "The Fighting Navy." The stars include Anna Neagle, Tullio Carminati, Jack Buchanan, Leslie Banks, H. B. Warner, Richard Cromwell and Noah Beery.

An independent advertising and publicity department is to be established in this country, Mr. Wilcox added, working with the G-B organization.

Arthur A. Lee, of G-B, also said that, by arrangement with Budd Rogers, G-B will release the Alliance Production, "Living Dangerously."

Salary 'Expose' Is Promised Ohio Session

An "expose" of the salaries paid certain motion picture executives in producing and distributing companies will be one of the features of the fourth annual convention of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners, which has been set for December 1-2 at the Deshler-Wallick hotel in Columbus, it was promised by Peter J. Wood, secretary.

Among the speakers will be Abram F. Myers, Allied States general counsel and Governor Martin L. Davey.

LOEW'S EARNS $11,076,822 IN 1936; WARNER'S PROFITS UP TO $3,177,312

Net of Warner Corporations Increases $2,503,154 in Year; Current Working Assets Listed at $24,219,850

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and its motion picture production, distribution and exhibition holdings, earned a net profit of $3,177,312, after all charges and taxes, in the year ended Sept. 1, 1936, an increase of $2,503,154 from the $674,158 net profit earned in 1935.

Harry M. Warner, president of the Warner-Vitagraph-First National corporations, which are included in the annual Warner Brothers Pictures' financial report issued Monday, declared that the operating profit of $3,177,312 for the year just ended is equivalent to 75 cents per share on the common stock, after deducting the shares held in the treasury and after providing for the current year's dividend on the preferred stock. Dividends on the preferred stock since March 2, 1932 are in arrears. For the year ended Aug. 31, 1935, the profit of $674,154 was equivalent to seven cents per share, calculated upon a similar basis.

In addition to the operating profit reported for 1936, Mr. Warner said there had been a net credit to deficit account in the amount of $1,314,849 and that capital surplus had been increased by $124,013.

The operations of the company for the quarter ended Nov. 28, 1936, he added, will show a substantial improvement over the net operating profit of $1,031,315 for the corresponding quarter in 1935.

Warner and its subsidiaries have total current and working assets of $24,219,850 and current liabilities of $20,839,116, compared with current assets of $18,328,919 and current liabilities of $14,212,422 for the same date in 1935.

Net worth of the Warner companies is listed at $173,009,011, an increase of about $5,000,000 over the total assets of $168,471,829 reported Sept. 1, 1935.

The corporation's gross income in 1936 was $34,923,645, and operating expenses were $31,581,706. In 1935, operating income was $31,419,226, and operating expenses were $30,774,668.

The deficit in 1936 was reduced $4,500,000, from $14,961,309 on Sept. 1, 1935, to $10,469,148 on the same date this year.

The consolidated balance sheet consolidated profit, loss and deficit statement and statement of capital surplus for Warner Brothers Pictures and its wholly-owned Vitagraph, First National and other production, distribution and exhibition subsidiaries, are as follows:

Consolidated Balance Sheet, August 29, 1936

PARAMOUNT REPORTS $2,013,764 BALANCE

A third quarter earnings report for Paramount was issued by the corporation on Wednesday and shows the following results of operations:

Operating earnings, before provision for undistributed earnings tax but after provision for estimated normal income tax and after applying $200,000 of the inventory reserve set up as of December 28, 1935, were $1,609,224.

To this are added $695,787 in dividends for non-consolidated subsidiaries and $14,503 for foreign exchange adjustments.

Deduction for interest on debentures of Paramount Pictures, Inc., was $357,725 and the profit on the purchase of debentures of the same company was $51,975, leaving a balance to be transferred to surplus of $2,013,764.

Loew - Metro Working Assets $52,257,079 Against Liabilities of $9,223,214; Gross Operating Revenue Rises

Loew's, Inc., and its motion picture production, distribution and exhibition holdings, earned a net profit of $11,076,822, after all charges and taxes, in the year ended Sept. 1, 1936, an increase of $3,497,079 from the $7,579,743 net profit earned in 1935, and a convincing indication of the extent to which the motion picture has improved businesswise in the past year.

Loew-Metro, one of two "Big Eight" film corporations which weathered the depression entirely in the black, Columbia being the other, stands today with total current and working assets of $52,257,079, as against current liabilities of only $9,223,214, a ratio of almost 6 to 1. Current assets have increased $10,000,000 in a year, whereas current liabilities have remained virtually the same in total.

Loew's share of the net income, excluding charges to surplus, is as follows:

	Per Share August 31, 1936	Per Share August 31, 1935
Preferred stock.	$81.02	$55.44
Common stock, average	6.79	4.53

Net valuation of the Loew corporation is now $138,562,712, an increase of more than $9,000,000 from the estimated $129,271,695 total value of assets on August 31, 1935.
